Norwich has gotten to the point where it is necessary to have someone watch the Eighth street signal. It doesn't work correctly. It is not infallible. It is a menace to public safety at that point and this in spite of appeals to the public utilities commission and to the railroad. There was a time when the highway users felt reasonably safe while a watchman was stationed at the crossing, but now the highway users must depend upon themselves. The signal has been tried and found unreliable. Those who have respected it have had narrow escapes from death.

Isn't it time the public utilities commission was petitioned for its removal before it is responsible for someone's death?

Safety certainly isn't assured at the Eighth street crossing and either the method of protecting the public there should be changed or else the railroad should be required to keep its signal expert at that point until it is demonstrated beyond any question that the signal is operating as it should.

Why wait until someone has been killed and then try to blame it onto the highway user?

VANDALISM AND DEVILTRY

For some unexplained reason something like 100 panes of glass in a Waterbury chapel were broken at 2:30 in the morning. No one has offered a reason for it, but occurring at that time in the morning the feeling is that it was not the work of boys.

Whatever is ultimately found to be the reason, and whoever is found to be guilty, if that is accomplished, it is a case of vandalism that certainly deserves a full measure of punishment.

That thoughts should first turn to boys when acts of that kind are committed is due to the fact that youngsters like to hear the crash of glass. They have a liking for destruction without seeming to think what they are doing. They are having a pleasing time and that is all that matters.

Youngsters have been seen walking through the glass coverings of hot beds, without regard for the possibility of getting cut or the damage they were doing to the property of others. And there isn't anything that gets and keeps the eye of the youngster with an air rifle, until he has shattered them, more than the window panes of an unoccupied building. If it is a dwelling, there may be greater delay but sooner or later the windows of that go also.

It is for the purpose of destroying something of value belonging to another, rather than satisfying the desire for fun, that actuates the vandal. He is a detriment to any community. Too often he is a fanatic who never hesitates to do damage that involves large outlays for replacement, the aim at times being to make replacement impossible. There is need, not only for placing a real check upon those actually engaged in vandalism, but upon those who resort to destruction as deviltry.

SHIFTING ENFORCEMENT

Almost from the time that prohibition went into effect there has been pointed out the inconsistency of having prohibition enforcement left to the treasury department of the government. It has been evident, and further demonstrated, that the treasury was required to go far out of its province to administer these duties.

The efforts that are now being made to have the prohibition enforcement bureau transferred to the department of justice are for the purpose of correcting this situation and it seems not improbable that advantages would result.

Secretary Mellon of the treasury department has expressed himself in favor of the proposed legislation. His statement to the house committee on expenditures reviewed the history of the prohibition bureau, setting forth that it had been wished upon the treasury simply because the internal revenue bureau had been engaged in collecting the excise taxes levied upon alcoholic liquors used for beverage purposes. He termed it a bad move but believes that it should go to the department of justice, the duty of which is to prosecute violators of this and other federal statutes.

There would be a close relationship between the enforcement work and the prosecutions by the department of justice, whereas it is unrelated to any of the services expected from the treasury department. The secretary confined himself to an expression of opinion concerning the merits of the proposed bill, which he fully endorsed, but it is apparent that he might have been in the witness chair yet if he had permitted himself to enter into the discussion of enforcement possibilities which certain inquisitors invited.

The fact that prohibition has been entrusted to the treasury department has been unsatisfactory to many for a long time. Probably no other department could have done any better, but there will continue to be the feeling that it would until a change is made and there is a test. The plan for a change is one that should afford a complete trial of the shift from one department to the other.

INSTITUTIONAL PROTECTION

From a survey that has been made of state institutions in New Jersey, attention is directed to the claim that there are serious fire hazards existing in several correctional and penal institutions.

Objection is raised to "badly constructed and obstructed" fire escapes in some buildings, while at others danger was seen in the fact that "wooden construction of partitions, stairways, stairwalls and floors has been permitted."

Indications point to the fact that these conditions exist in old buildings, representing construction of years ago. Nothing is said as to whether these conditions have led to serious trouble at any time, though the inference is that they are being brought to attention before something happens.

If they are old buildings it is to be expected that there will come to be replacement sometime. When that day arrives there should be no thought of employing wooden buildings in any instances. Wherever humanity is given shelter in correctional or penal institutions, or even in homes for children or aged, the buildings should be of fireproof construction. Experiences with the other kind should overcome any thought of tolerating new buildings of that character.

Until the replacement time comes, New Jersey faces the responsibility of giving proper protection to the inmates of those institutions. There should be adequate safeguards thrown about the heating equipment, safe electrical installations and well constructed and entirely unobstructed means of escape in case of fire. Investigations such as made in New Jersey amount to nothing unless heed is given to the recommendations.

PARAGUAY AND BOLIVIA

Whether reports from South America correctly represent the situation between Paraguay and Bolivia will be disclosed in time. At present it would appear that they are on the brink of another unpleasantness.

These neighbors have long carried a chip on their shoulders. It has been impossible for them to come to an agreement regarding the boundary line in the Chaco region, but it had been hoped that their differences had been adjusted during the past year as the result of the study made of their problem and the suggested solution.

Whether the new developments bear government approval, or are the expression of irresponsible bands, remains to be determined. Just at present there seems to be a desire on the part of each country to attribute the responsibility for the attacks upon the other, but more importance will be attached to the efforts that are respectively made to heal the breach or to seek outside assistance in meeting the present situation.

The trouble between Bolivia and Paraguay represents another South American sore spot which ought to be healed, and it will be most unfortunate if the new flare-up serves to interrupt what was considered to be satisfactory progress toward a permanent solution. It has certainly come at a most unfavorable time, but it illustrates the difficulty involved in getting an agreement between those countries.

EDITORIAL NOTES

The man on the corner says: Be as thrifty as you may, the wallet that has had to meet the January bills needs no reducing treatment.

Now that they are off at London may the conference be as brief as possible but successful, whatever the length.

Some people seem to think the quickest route to death is via a hotel roof.

The ambition to make Sing Sing escape-proof is fine, but so was that in regard to the unsinkable ship which sank.

With only ten more days before the appearance of the groundhog, interest is keen over the always uncertain revelations.

If, as is claimed, the British are willing to reduce the number of their cruisers, certain valuable help for the conference is assured.

"TOMORROW"

Gloria Paori stepped out of her limousine at the entrance of the Grand theatre. It was 11 o'clock and she had an appointment to see M. Glasserno, impresario extraordinary, in regard to her fall booking. Mme. Paori had known M. Glasserno for many years. They were old friends. She looked forward to an even greater opportunity for next year—she looked forward to playing Ibsen or Marx Ertheim or Ishandorf in a spectacular revival on Broadway, with possibilities later of carrying the piece to London. Mme. Paori smiled, a serene smile full of conquest. She was a happy woman.

"Good morning, madam," said M. Glasserno's secretary brightly. She opened the door to the private office and M. Glasserno, perceiving who it was, rose and with hand extended welcomed Mme. Paori warmly.

"Sit down, sit down, Gloria," he said, pushing forward a large plush chair. "Tell me, how have you been? Did you have a pleasant trip? How is that little daughter of yours, that Magdalena?"

As madame subsided among her silks on the plush chair and pushed back her white furs she began answering the manager's questions.

"As you know," she said, trying to wedge in the subject of a contract, "I am particularly interested in Rendfelt's 'Tomorrow.' If you think I am suited to—"

"Ah yes, to be sure," said M. Glasserno. "Tomorrow! It was of that I meant to speak. I received your letter."

"Yes?" said Gloria encouragingly.

"I read that you desire to play an unusual characterization."

"It will be my nineteenth year of stardom," said Gloria proudly.

"You began very young, Gloria——"

"My first star part was at 21. The year after my baby Magdalena was born."

"You have had a long career."

"Nineteen years, Georgiano, of success, of joy, of achievement. Few women can boast more."

"You have never failed to act beautifully when the curtain rose upon your act."

"Of that, too, I am proud, Georgiano."

"And you will not fail to act beautifully now——" Gloria smiled complacently. No, she would not fail now. She moved her furs farther back from her firm white throat. "Now——" went on the manager, "that the curtain is about to fall upon your career?"

About to fall? Her heart stopped beating.

"Gloria, you will be 40 years old this summer, is it not so?" She nodded dumbly.

"And," went on the impresario, "the part you wish to play in 'Tomorrow' requires a woman of 20."

"Yes, Georgiano, it is there my skill with makeup——"

"It is impossible, Gloria," said M. Glasserno. "You are too old to play my play." Too old! Gloria sat very quiet. Too old! The world cascaded about her head. Was this then the end? Too old! She knew that when M. Glasserno spoke his decree was immutable.

"Do not be so tragically white, Gloria," the impresario was saying. "Be glad that——"

"Mother!" Gloria looked up at the superb young figure which had flung open the door. "They told me I'd find you here!"

"Come here, Magdalena!" Gloria, a proud mother, introduced her daughter to the impresario.

"So this is your daughter?" said M. Glasserno. "This beautiful creature? Can you act, Magdalena?"

"Act!" exclaimed Gloria. "You must see her! Such a debut as she had this fall. She is superb, monsieur!"

"As superb as her mother, twenty years ago?" questioned M. Glasserno. "A second Gloria!" he exclaimed. He looked full into the eyes of the young girl. "Would you like to star in 'Tomorrow'?" he asked.

"My Magdalena! My own little girl!" Gloria rose. There was nothing more to be said. A faint color suffused her cheeks, her eyes were bright with a far-off light. Her baby—to succeed her. Her own flesh and blood. Her own beautiful, talented exquisite daughter. It was enough! Mme. Paori smiled, a serene smile full of conquest. She was a happy woman.

"Good-by," she said. There was no need for her ever to come here again. Her life was over—yet her life was just beginning. As she went out of the theatre and crossed the walk to her limousine Mme. Paori sighed with contentment. "Tomorrow"! She perceived that there, ahead of her, lay the supreme role of her life!—Exchange.

A Washington Bystander

By KIRKE L. SIMPSON
Associated Press Staff Writer

WASHINGTON, Jan. 23.—Now and then you get a real inside glimpse into the difficulties that beset officials of big government departments when they set about making up their annual budgets.

Not often, however, since the budget law was enacted. That made it a punishable offense for such officials to talk about budgetary matters out of school, so to speak. In practice this has applied particularly to army and navy folk, due probably to the fact that owing to their numbers and distribution around the country they represented at least a potential propaganda machine for bigger and better appropriations every year.

So you have to wait until the supply bills are introduced in the house to note the stages by which they reached that point. The committee hearings are made public at that time, usually months after the hearings actually were held.

A Long Way Back

Turning back to hearings on the war department bill passed by the house in January, you find that General Summerall, chief of staff of the army, the first witness called, was heard in November, 1929.

And from his testimony you learn that the business of shaping the army budget expendable between July 1, 1930, and June 30, 1931, began back two war secretaries ago before President Hoover took office.

Thus it happened that Secretary Dwight Davis issued the "directive" for the first budget estimates for 1931. He decreed there should be "no increase except those made mandatory by changed conditions," General Summerall told the committee.

That produced an estimate of $392,000,000, in round numbers. The departmental budget advisory committee cut that to $363,000,000 "by arbitrary eliminations."

By that time the late Secretary Good, former chairman of the house appropriations committee, had become war secretary. He got the next whack at the estimates.

The general noted that "his experience made him peculiarly qualified to pass upon our budget." And "by certain adjustments," Good pared the total down another $16,000,000.

Down, Down, Down

It went to the budget bureau at $333,000,000 and came back with a "limiting figure" requiring a further reduction of $14,000,000. That made a complete new recalculation in the department necessary and after the $14,000,000 went out, still another cut was ordered by the budget bureau.

Secretary Good went into personal conferences with budget authorities and this last slash was finally held at $5,500,000. The result was a military activity supply bill totaling $333,000,000 instead of $392,000,000, the original estimate—a cut of $60,000,000.

"I feel that I should explain these preliminary steps because they have occupied a whole year," General Summerall said to the committee.

YOUR HEALTH

DON'T TRIFLE WITH A SORE THROAT

By Shirley W. Wynne, M. D.
(Commissioner of Health, New York)

The so-called "common sore throat" constitutes one of the worst menaces to health, and neglect of even a slight inflammation in that region may lead to far more serious consequences than the average person imagines. Diphtheria, mastoiditis, meningitis, arthritis and heart disease are among the more serious diseases which may result from a neglected sore throat. Deafness and other ear troubles, as well as nasal complications, also can be traced to it. So that at least four major diseases, which frequently prove fatal, can result from the apparently simple inflammation to which almost every adult and child is subject.

Aside from dread diphtheria a sore throat very frequently permits the entry into the body of malignant streptococci and pneumococci — germs which penetrate the body and invade the other tissues, unlike the diphtheria bacilli which usually remain on the surface of the mucuous membranes. In many respects, therefore, streptococci and pneumococci are far more serious than diphtheria bacilli. Very frequently these germs, growing and multiplying in what seems to be a simple sore throat, spread rapidly through the small canal leading to the ear and set up an inflammation of the middle ear, that is, the bony cavity behind the ear drum.

In a short time, and accompanied by the most excruciating pain, the ear drum may break, or it may have to be lanced. In many instances the inflammation extends to the surrounding bony tissue and produces what is known as mastoiditis, a very serious condition requiring prompt operation by a specialist. If this operation is not performed in time, or if the germs are particularly virulent, the inflammation may break through the bony tissue and reach the base of the brain, giving rise to a meningitis which usually is fatal.

Again, instead of spreading to the ear the germs arising from a sore throat may find their way into the blood stream and be carried to the heart, where they may produce acute inflammation of the heart valves. Or they may be carried to the kidneys where they give rise to abscesses, or they may flow to the joints where they may cause arthritis.

No matter how slight the soreness in the throat may be it is potentially dangerous. While home treatment may now and then allay the inflammation and cure the condition, the very fact that a sore throat invariably is a breeding ground for germs that can cause so many diseases makes it foolish to take any chances. In fact, every person suffering from sore throat should seek out his family physician at once and obtain the right kind of treatment.

Thanks to toxin-antitoxin, diphtheria can be abolished and we are having remarkable success in this work. But diphtheria is the only one of the sore throat diseases we are able to prevent.

BURGESS BEDTIME STORY

The Cornerib Is Visited

By THORNTON W. BURGESS

Who for himself alone doth work,
Is very likely his job to shirk.
—Old Mother Nature.

The Black Shadows were still lingering in the Green Forest and the Old Orchard as Chatterer the Red Squirrel and Timmy the Flying Squirrel left Chatterer's home tree in the Green Forest and started for Farmer Brown's corncrib. They traveled very differently, although they were own cousins. Chatterer at first traveled in the treetops, jumping from one tree to another when they were near enough. When he had reached the edge of the Green Forest he came down to the ground, scurried over to the old stone wall along the edge of the Old Orchard, and whisked along on top of this old wall.

Now, that method of traveling didn't suit Timmy the Flying Squirrel at all. Timmy found out in which direction they were going. Then he quickly ran up to the top of the tree from which they were starting and jumped. Away he went, gliding down on the air! It was wonderful to see him go. He then alighted on the trunk of a tree far ahead of Chatterer, and waited for Chatterer to catch up. Then he did it again. When they reached the Old Orchard, Timmy jumped from apple tree to apple tree, until finally he arrived at the one nearest the end of the old stone wall and on the edge of Farmer Brown's dooryard. It was still almost dark, although it was growing lighter every minute.

The next story: "Chatterer Becomes Worried."

Chatterer joined Timmy. "I guess you won't be able to jump from here over to the corncrib," said Chatterer. "I guess you'll have to follow me across to that tall tree over there. From there you can easily jump down onto the corncrib. Come along before it gets any lighter."

Timmy shook his head. He shook it most decidedly. "If I can't get over to that corncrib without crossing that open place on the ground, I will go without corn" said he. "I am willing to take a chance on jumping, but I'm not willing to take a chance on running. I wasn't built for running."

Chatterer looked across the dooryard. Many times had he made the run across there. Always he felt a little thrill of excitement when he did it. He understood Timmy's feelings. Timmy wasn't built for running. He could hardly blame Timmy now. He looked anxiously this way and that way. In Farmer Brown's front yard were some tall trees. Timmy saw them at once. "I'll be over in that maple tree by the corncrib as soon as you are," said he, and started gliding from tree to tree toward those big trees in the front yard.

Chatterer didn't understand what Timmy's plan was, but he took Timmy's hint and scampered across to the big tree over near the corncrib. Hardly was he up in it when Timmy landed near the foot of it and came climbing up. From the Old Orchard he had glided over to one of the big trees in the front yard. From the top of that he had glided to the roof of Farmer Brown's house. He had run along the ridgepole to the back of the house and then had jumped and glided to the tree in which Chatterer was waiting for him.

"Now," said Timmy, "what about getting into that corncrib?"

"You jump from here down on the roof," explained Chatterer. "You run down to the edge of the roof on the other side and hang by your hind-feet. Then you will see a place I have gnawed to get in between two boards."

"All right," said Timmy. And without another word he jumped, landed on the roof of the corncrib and in a moment had disappeared.

"None, I only saw four," was the answer.

VIRGINIA ASSEMBLYMEN TO MISS NO-DUEL OATH

RICHMOND, Va.—(AP)—Members of the Virgina assembly, for the first time since long before the civil war, will meet January 8 without taking an oath to abstain from dueling.

The pledge, once regarded as necessary to prevent private skirmishes was rewritten into the state constitution as late as 1902, when the last constitutional convention was held.

An act deleting the no-dueling pledge from the oath was incorporated in the constitution in summer of 1928.

INSOMNIA

Recently a New York Dentist was on trial by jury for having pulled all of the teeth of a patient without the patient's consent. The dentist's defense was that he became temporarily insane when he recognized the man as a neighbor of his who had kept him awake of nights playing the Saxaphone. The Jury promptly rendered a verdict of not guilty without leaving their seats. However, Saxaphone playing is not the only cause of Insomnia. Eyestrain will bring on many cases of Sleeplessness. Having the eyes properly glassed has not only relieved insomnia but many other symptoms such as headache, high blood pressure, stomach trouble, etc. Oft-times eyestrain is the sole cause of the trouble.

VOLSTEAD LAW MERE JOKE TO VICTOR FREDERICK

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Jan. 23—The police this afternoon raided the residence of Victor Frederick, 33 Walbach street, where a quantity of liquor and home-brew was seized, together with the equipment used for the manufacture of the beer. Frederick and his employes Eugene Gianetti and John Bartolucci, were arrested, all charged with violation of the liquor law. They were released upon furnishing a surety on their respective bonds of $1,000 and will be tried in the police court tomorrow. Frederick has been arrested five times for violation of the liquor law and Gianetti has been arrested twice for the same offense, both times while in the employ of the Walbach street man. The police during the forenoon received information that Frederick was doing business on a large scale and a search warrant was issued by Judge Daniel M. Cronin. A raiding squad consisting of Sergeant John Courtney, Automobile Patrol Officers George Cockell and Clarence Martin and Patrolmen Michael Dorsey and Edward Skoczylas, went to the Walbach street house and seized 31 cases of beer, 30 cases of bottles, three gallons of alcohol, six quarts of wine, three quarts of whiskey, 15 gallons of malt, one case of whiskey bottles, box of caps, capping machine and two barrels of mash.

The officers of Trumbull commandery, No. 468, Order of the Golden Cross, were installed last night by Max Munsch, department grand commander, assisted by Henrietta M. JUDGE AVERY'S DECISION FINDS MRS. FRINK GUILTLESS IN ALIENATION

A defendant's verdict was handed down Thursday by Judge Christopher L. Avery of the superior court in the $35,000 damage suit brought against Mrs. Rose Beckley Frink, wife of Charles Frink, by Mrs. Helen Antzis, wife of Samuel Antzis, all of this city. Mrs. Antzis brought the $35,000 suit against Mrs. Frink, claiming that the latter alienated the affections of Mrs. Antzis' husband. The judge's decision, filed Thursday with the clerk of the court in this city, means that Mrs. Antzis loses her case against Mrs. Frink.

Attorney Edwin W. Higins, counsel for Mrs. Antzis, filed Thursday, a notice of appeal to the supreme court of errors, from Judge Avery's decision. The trial of the case which ended Wednesday, took up three and a half court days. Mrs. Antzis, in her suit, claimed that Mrs. Frink alienated her husband's affections while he was general manager of the Frink Dairy, Inc. Mrs. Frink was treasurer of the dairy concern. The court finds that from the evidence in the case, that there is nothing to show that Mrs. Frink did anything to alienate the affections of Mr. Antzis.

The decision of Judge Avery for the defendant was generally predicted after the trial was concluded by those who had been in court during the presentation of the evidence. In his decision Judge Avery says:

"The trial of this case consumed considerably more time than it ought to have done. Much time was wasted in going minutely into comparatively unimportant incidents. The evidence in the case wholly fails to show that the defendant did anything to alienate the affections of the plaintiff's husband from her. The plaintiff's husband was the superintendent of the Dairy Co., doing a large milk business, of which the defendant was treasurer. The evidence does not show that there was any relation between the defendant and the plaintiff's husband other than arose from the business. There is not any evidence of any affection between them, or of any impropriety. The absence of the plaintiff's husband from home appears to have been due to her own conduct, and not to any act on the part of the defendant."

Judgement may be entered in favor of the defendant.

SCOUT CAMPAIGN DIVISION HEADS TO HOLD LUNCHEON

Boy Scout campaign division heads will meet with H. D. Larrabee, campaign manager, this (Friday) noon at luncheon at the Wauregan hotel to complete the next step in the organization, namely the selection of captains. Selection of division heads is now complete and they are as follows: James L. Case, Division A; Frank R. Murdy, Division B; F. Russell Smith, Division C; H. E. Robbins, Division D, and Charles B. Gilbert, Division E. Further details of the campaign will be discussed at the luncheon and another meeting arranged for next week when captains and division heads can meet together for a few moments at the chamber of commerce rooms.

At the suggestion of James L. Case, the committee on arrangements, consisting of Earl W. Taggart, Jean Keiffer and Wilbur S. Williams, has decided to change the order of the dinners to the following: Friday, Feb. 7, Monday, Feb. 10; Tuesday, Feb. 11, and Wednesday, Feb. 12; holding Friday, Feb. 14 open, emphasizing the need to push the work of the campaign in the first three days of the campaign. The campaign proper will run from Feb. 7 to Feb. 14.

Through the courtesy of the Norwich commercial school, students from this school are assisting with stenographical work connected with lists. The Royal Typewriter company is furnishing machines. Managers of the theatres have been especially cooperative and are lining up a number of interesting features for the week. Indications from all sources are that everyone is getting behind the drive to put it over. Plans are now underway for several exhibits to be made in windows of downtown stores. Starting Monday a series of articles on scouting will appear in the daily newspapers. The American Legion is standing behind the Boy Scouts 100%. Letters are going to all legionaires announcing the starting of the new legion troop, Tuesday, January 28, at 7:15 p. m.

Many calls have been made at the local scout headquarters by boys from 9 to 12 who wish to be cubs, and just as soon as the campaign is over, the cub committee, consisting of George Warren Potter, A. W. Silverman, and Tom Burdick, assure parents of boys of this age that an effort will be made to start demonstration groups. The club program is of course dependent upon the funds which can be raised in the campaign. Norwich is fortunate in having one of the three men who spent all last year in formulating this program in the person of its scout executive. With the detail work connected with the campaign over, the executive will be better able to launch the first four cub dens.

Among the literature to be distributed by the local headquarters will be several hundred attractive blotters with the picture of a smiling Boy Scout and the endorsement of the president of the United States for the movement. This endorsement was recently written. It reads, "I have gladly assumed the honorary presidency of the Boy Scouts of America. I wish all success to the Boy Scouts themselves and to the scoutmasters who lead them, and I commend both to the unwearied support of the public that they so inspiringly serve."—Herbert Hoover.

At the Lions' club Thursday, absolute confidence in the Boy Scout movement was voted and the following committee was appointed to assist in the campaign: President Charles W. Cassidy, Joseph French, William R. Frisbie, Joseph Panek and Dr. Charles Solomon.

CARNEGIE MEDAL FOR SAVING MOOSUP GIRL

William O. Bussiere, 63, who has been living in Springfield, Mass., for 18 months, has just been awarded a bronze medal by the Carnegie Hero Fund commission for saving Rita Brennan, 9, from being killed by a gasoline railroad motor car at Moosup, July 25, 1928. He has already been awarded the medal for heroism of the Connecticut Humane society for this deed.

Bussiere lived in Moosup from 1920 to 1928 and was employed there as a carpenter and millwright.

While on his way home from work about 5 o'clock in the afternoon on the date named he noticed a group of six children playing near the farthest end of an 85 foot high railroad trestle which bridged a small mill stream.

The trestle was located about 500 feet from Bussiere's home and was 300 feet long. A railroad station was approximately 800 feet away from the structure on the other side. As he approached his house, Bussiere could see the motor car pull into the station and stop preparatory to crossing the trestle.

Realizing that the children, who had begun to cross the bridge from the end farthest from him, might be struck by the car, Bussiere yelled to them to get off the span. Of the two boys and four girls, not one heeded his directions at once.

Bussiere hollered at the children again and started toward them as fast as he could run. The oldest boy in the group, who was about 14 years of age, sensed the impending danger and grabbing his four years old sister, he rushed off the trestle. One boy and three girls were left and had run about 200 feet across the structure when Rita Brennan dropped to the guard rail, paralyzed with fear as the motor car started to cross.

The other three children reached the end in safety as Bussiere raced along the track toward the Brennan girl. He motioned and yelled to the car to stop but his signals were not seen or heard by the motorman who also did not see the child crouched on the guard rail.

Bussiere reached the girl just before the train which was approaching at a speed of 25 to 30 miles an hour. Not slackening his speed, Bussiere scooped up the girl with his right arm and flung himself to the side of the track with the train only a few feet away. The weight of the girl's body threw him off balance and as he leaned forward to regain his equilibrium, the side of the car scraped his forehead and right shoulder, causing him to fall backward off the trestle with the girl still clasped in his arm.

They landed together in a pool of water four feet deep with Bussiere still holding the girl. He was unable to gain footing at first and bounced around in the pool for several minutes before he could carry the girl to safety. The child was bruised only slightly. Bussiere suffered stiffness and soreness which disabled him for 10 days.

WATERFORD WOMAN SUES FOR AUTO ACCIDENT INJURIES

Suit for $5,000 damages has been brought in the superior court by Sadie Glynn of Waterford against Peter Talbot of Newport, R. I., as the result of an accident Nov. 29, last, in which she claimed she was seriously injured when struck by a machine operated by Talbot. The accident occurred while she was crossing the Boston Post road in the town of Waterford. She claims she received concussion of the brain, injury to her right leg, body bruised and contused, nervous shock, when she was violently thrown to the ground, according to the papers filed with Clerk John H. Walker.

STRIKE STARTED BY STUDENTS IS SPREADING

MADRID, Jan. 23—(AP)—A strike started by university students in protest of alleged government interference with the schools, tonight spread to other elements. Union taxi drivers quit their machines demanding the right to charge higher rates. Among the prisoners detained by police after a strike encounter in a cafe, were four men who were said to be army officers.

It was furthermore reported that one of the quartet was commandant of the Madrid garrison. The police refused to comment on this report or to divulge names of any of the prisoners.

Double guards were placed in all police districts late tonight to prevent possible strike disturbances.

PLANE WAS DAMAGED IN FORCED LANDING

DAYTON, O., Jan. 23—(AP)—A Ford tri-motored plane, piloted by Lieut. R. W. Warren on a flight from Mitchel field, N. Y., to the government air depot at Fairfield, near here, was damaged in a forced landing three miles outside of Dayton tonight. The plane was said to have carried five passengers besides the pilot. No one was injured, according to army officials at Fairfield.

The air depot refused to divulge any information concerning the accident or the identity of the passengers. Lieutenant Warren made a brief statement that one of the motors died and that the ship tore down a power line and nosed over when he was forced to land in a field about ten miles from Fairfield.

MURDER CONVICT KEEPS CAROLINA PRISON ZOO

Campbell, serving 20 years for murder, has a private zoo that includes white rats, a Texas ant bear, chinchillas, monkeys, a groundhog, snakes, foxes, a goat which shares its pen with an airedale dog, rabbits and cats.

He bought the animals with profits from a delicatessen for prisoners in which Otto Wood, also a murder convict, is a partner.

Campbell was sentenced to die in 1928 after he was convicted of killing a nurse in Oteen hospital near Asheville. The sentence was commuted to life imprisonment which later was reduced to 20 years.

MINNEAPOLIS—(AP)—An answer to an old dispute—is there oil in Minnesota?—is to be settled as a sporting proposition by a group of Minneapolis men. Harry E. Pence, capitalist, is head of a group to make tests near Cosmos. Geologists say there is no oil there. Residents say they found traces on pools of water.

IMPORTS PLANTS BEAT ARCHAIC AUSTRALIAN TYPE

NEW YORK—(AP)—Even the plants and animals of modern times have developed superior competitive abilities.

This is illustrated, says Dr. Foreman T. McLean, supervisor of public education of the New York Botanical garden, in the plants and animals being imported into Australia, which are starving out some of the Australian strains.

These Australian losers are oddities, creatures of an age that ended long ago everywhere else in the world, and they survived this long only because the plants and animals of the rest of the world have not heretofore had a chance to compete with them.

BILLIONTHS SPLIT BY TAINT DETECTOR

AUBURN, Ala.—(AP)—A method of chemical analysis so highly sensitive as to detect the presence of one part of a chemical in 10,000,000,000 parts of water is announced by Dr. Fred Allison, head of department of physics at Alabama Polytechnic institute.

The method has enabled completion in a few days of experiments that ordinarily would have required several weeks, says Dr. Allison.

WATER DIETING FOUND TO OPEN EPILEPSY CURE

Only a few months previously this same little band had been a pathetic group of epileptics, all pronounced incurable.

"But now," to quote a visiting physician, "there had been such a change for the better that even their own mothers and fathers scarcely would have recognized them."

The hospital was among the first to try a new experimental treatment for epilepsy. No cure is announced yet, but the story of the children is out.

The treatment is surprisingly simple. It is restriction of water intake—both in drink and food. It is a drying process, based on belief that excessive wetness of brain tissues is a contributory cause of convulsions in epilepsy.

It appears to be effective in stopping seizures of the children in a high percentage of cases, when properly carried out.

It is referred to in a paper before the Association for the Study of Internal Secretions by Dr. Oliver Kamm of Parke, Davis and company, for it has a bearing on his theories of water balance in the body. Dr. McQuarrie has reported it before medical societies and in the American Journal of Diseases of Children.

"We try to emphasize," Dr. McQuarrie said to The Associated Press," that the dietary and low-water regimen is not to be looked upon as a permanent cure, but as merely a more satisfactory and promising measure of control of symptoms than the older drug therapy."

SEA LEVEL VARIES; WATERS TILT NORTH

WASHINGTON—(AP)—Waters of the oceans are tilted and sea level is not the same the world over.

As a result of the phenomenon geodesists of the United States and Canada, now engaged in surveying the two countries, are faced with the need of selecting a single level on which to base standard elevations.

Mean sea level is higher for the United States along the Pacific coast than on the Atlantic, and along the individual coasts there is a definite tilt northward.

"Level lines run across the Isthmus of Panama, along the canal, place the plane on the Pacific side .69 foot higher than on the Atlantic," says Dr. William Bowie of the U. S. coast and geodetic survey.

There has been no satisfactory explanation of the phenomenon. It is believed that the variations are due to such meteorological conditions as prevailing directions of winds, differences in barometric pressure with latitude and differences in saltiness and density of ocean waters.

An arbitrary sea level, common to the United States and Canada, may be selected by officials of the two surveys.

WELL DRILLERS IN IOWA DROP SIMPLICITY OF OLD

DES MOINES—(AP)—Mellow simplicity has fled from the well-drilling business.

In the good old days the well driller had merely to sit and sing, or dream away the days, the while his bit bored into the earth's bowels in search of the liquid to fill the crystal cup.

At a recent well drillers' convention here the delegates were addressed upon "Relation of the Geological Survey to the Driller," "Bacteriology and Chemistry of the Water Supply," and "Underground Water and the Glacial Drift."

Among those who will decode science are Dr. Robert Andrews Millikan of the California Institute of Technology; Prof. Irving Fisher, economist of Yale university; H. F. Osborn, anthropologist, American Museum of Natural History, and Dr. Ales Hrdlicka, anthropologist, National museum.

NEARLY 30,000 TELEPHONE CALLS DAILY THROUGH NORWICH SWITCHBOARDS

Nearly 30,000 telephone calls are handled daily through the switchboards at the Norwich exchange of the Southern New England Telephone company, it was learned officially Thursday, thus establishing a high peak in the volume of telephone traffic locally.

A recent count of local and toll calls, taken by mechanical apparatus in the office here, showed a total of 28,550 calls on an average business day. Of this total 27,050 were local calls, from one subscriber to another in this exchange while 1,500 calls were to points outside of this exchange area. That the Norwich exchange has such a high calling rate in its use of toll service indicates rather forcefully that the business and residence subscribers here are quick to use their telephones for needs other than local. In such a manufacturing center as this the toll calling rate is quite likely to be high but Norwich's rate is, generally speaking, higher than most others about the state in proportion to the number of subscribers.

It is because of this rapidly growing business that the telephone company is now planning the construction of additional telephone facilities here during the year.

Exchange Manager Henry B. Lyon said Thursday that at present there are 46 operators in the exchange office, handling local and toll calls and he expressed the thought that these young women are doing an excellent job service-wise in keeping abreast of the conversational abilities of Norwich subscribers. Mr. Lyon pointed out that while 1,500 is given as the number of toll calls handled that figure represents only the outward calls. There is a nearly equal number of inward calls, no account of which is kept at the local office. Telephone calls are calculated only at the originating point.

There was a net increase of 301 telephones in the Norwich exchange during 1929, making the total in service at the beginning of the year [illegible] and an equally good year is in prospect, according to Manager Lyon.

Real Cod Liver Oil Vitamins In This Tablet

What would you say if a man handed you two sugar coated tablets—easy to swallow—and said to you—

There's just as many precious Vitamins A and D in these two tablets as there is in a teaspoonful of pure Cod Liver Oil.

You'll probably say, "If it's true, it's amazing."

Well it is true and it's more than amazing—it's a miracle. It took a learned chemist two and a half years to make the discovery.

What does that mean to the millions of men, women and children who rely on Cod Liver Oil to keep them strong and vigorous?

It means that they won't have to take the unpalatable, stomach upsetting oil any more—the very same Vitamins are in McCoy's Cod Liver Oil Extract Tablets.

Two tablets equal in Vitamin potency one teaspoonful of pure Cod Liver Oil and 8 tablets a day will supply any ordinary person with all the Vitamins they need.

And always remember this: When you take Cod Liver Oil its benecial health building Vitamins are what you are after—the greasy oil without the Vitamins has no value.

Instead of disagreeable Cod Liver Oil try McCoy's for a month—you can take them winter and summer and carry a whole week's supply in your vest pocket.

And the kiddies just love them.

For every ailment, malady or run-down condition for which Cod Liver Oil is prescribed, McCoy's Cod Liver Oil Extract Tablets are equally as good. Do you realize that we would not be allowed to make this statement if it were not true?

Get them at any drugstore in America—Precious but inexpensive. Take your Vitamins straight—60 tablets 60 cents. (c) 1929 McC. L., Inc.

Now you can protect her lovely hair!

Millions of men and women know how Danderine helps stop falling hair and dissolves the worst crust of dandruff; how easily it changes dull, lustreless, brittle hair into hair that is soft, sparkling, vigorous.

With Danderine it is so easy to "train" a child's hair; to keep it orderly, sparkling, clean. Danderine accentuates the natural curl of a child's hair. A girl's "waves" look more natural when "set" with it. And they stay in longer.

Use Danderine with children to overcome the evils of frequent washing. It puts back into hair and scalp the natural oils removed by soap and water.

Danderine isn't sticky or oily; doesn't show. It is no trouble to use. Just put a little on the brush each time the hair is arranged. That will keep the scalp healthy and encourage the growth of long, silky and abundant hair. Five million bottles used a year is proof of Danderine's effectiveness.

SARAZEN WITH BRILLIANT FINISH TAKES FIRST MONEY IN MEXICAN OPEN

(By Walter B. Clemson, Associated Press Staff Writer)

AGUA CALIENTE, Lower California, Mexico, Jan. 23—(AP)—Ten thousand dollars was pocketed by Gene Sarazen of New York tonight for four days of golf here. It was the biggest money purse ever offered in tournament play. He galloped into leadership of the Agua Caliente open, just like he broke into fame in 1922.

Coming from behind he established the course record here with a 68, but instead of just taking a one stroke lead like he did in the 1922 national open from Bobby Jones and John Black at Skokie, Chicago, today he passed Horton Smith of Joplin, Mo., and Al Espinosa, of Chicago by two strokes.

The fifty-two professionals and six amateurs played in this most colorful of all golf tournaments.

The winnings follow:

Gene Sarazen, New York, $10,000, score 295.

Horton Smith, Joplin, Mo., $3,750, score 297.

Al Espinosa, Chicago, $3,750, score 297.

Olin Dutra, Santa Monica, $1,250, score, 298.

Al Watrous, Detroit, $650, score, 300.

Joe Kirkwood, Philadelphia, $550, score, 301.

Henri Ciuci, Bridgeport, Conn., $450, score, 302.

Paul Runyon, Litle Rock, Ark., $235, score, 305.

John Farrell, St. Augustine, Fla., $225, score, 305.

Harold Long, Denver, $200, score, 306.

Neil Christian, Portland, Ore., $200, score, 306.

Abe Espinosa, Chicago, $200, score, 306.

John Golden, Paterson, N. J., $100, score, 307.

Ed Dudley, Wilmington, Del., $100, score, 307.

Of course there are those tonight who feel like many others in this salubrious Mexican climate, that dame luck has just turned against them. Take Walter Hagen, of Detroit, for instance. He came here with the record of $50 won in tournament play this year, and failed to change that record. And there were others, too, as the final list of standings appended hereto reveals.

Here is the way the stocky little winner of the biggest prize yet offered came in today, to collect his $10,000:

Par out—443 444 453—35
Sarazen—433 443 443—32
Par in—435 443 454—36—71
Sarazen—445 443 344—36—68

Noting that he was two over on the tenth and one over on the eleventh, it is evident that Gene was playing golf. On the three preceding days he rambled through the rain soaken course Monday and the driving wind Tuesday and Wednesday with a 75-73—79. But the fair weather today and his grit, soothed the heartache of yesterday's 79.

The Joplin youngster, Horton Smith, despite his 21 years being the best money winner in golf, had to be satisfied with $3,750 today and this is why:

Smith out—443 443 453—34
In—445 443 454—39—73

Smith went through the four days as follows: 74-72-77-72—297.

Al Espinosa split the second and third money with Horton Smith by a card of 73 today.

Low cards brings up the other matter of this tournament, the amateurs. There was the blonde George Von Elm of Detroit, internationally known. He played a brilliant game today four birdies today helping him to card out 70, one under par. He and Sarazen were the only ones to break par on this new course. His card:

In—435 443 354—34—70

George was among the six high with his 299, and had he been a professional he would have taken $1,250 home instead of the silver fitted traveling case.

Johnny Dawson, Chicago amateur, also placed himself in the playing range of money winners, making the 72 holes in 306, bracketed with those who got a $200 check each.

As a fitting climax to the tournament, in recognition of the big purse as well as the environment, the winners went over the brow of the hill beyond the first green into the new Agua Caliente Jockey club, where horse racing was in progress, and there between the races the prizes were distributed. Three black eyed little Mexican Senoritas, trundled in with wheel barrows, filled with real silver American dollars.

Gene Sarazen was given a spade and told to shovel some out, but this was merely a bit of by play, for after shoveling the piles of silver a bit, he was formally presented with a gold medal and a check for $10,000.

Massie B. Miller, professional at the Norwich Golf club, was just three strokes short of placing in the money, getting a 72-hole score of 310. He shot a 77 for the closing 18-hole round giving him a tournament card of 75-76-82-77—310, which placed him in about 28th position. That third round seems to be a sort of jinx for the local pro for in all other tournaments in the west he has been right up among the leaders for the first 36 holes and then slipped in the third round. However, Miller did not do so bad considering the calibre of men he was playing against and the bad weather conditions on the third day. This tourney is the last of the large tournaments in the west and the golfers will start the trek toward the east very shortly, many planning on the Texas open on their way to Florida for the Florida open and the LaGorce event which ranks next to the Mexican tourney.

BRUINS TAKE AMERICANS OVER IN LAST GAME

BOSTON, Mass., Jan. 23—(AP)—The Boston Bruins closed their season's account with the New York Americans here tonight by defeating the Star Spangled hockey outfit 2-1, in an overtime contest that was far from being an exciting affair. These teams have clashed four times, three games ending in victories for the Stanley cup champions.

Nothing much happened until the third period. The Bruins tried many a furious rush but the great Roy Worters had them in check. The New York goalie spoiled every trick in the Bruins' scoring bag until early in the third session. When Dutch Gainor [illegible] the rubber in his own zone and [illegible] easily down the middle. He [illegible] Rabbit McVeigh, slipped [illegible] Conacher and Burch and then [illegible] Worters for a score with a [illegible] of pace.

[illegible] minutes later, Simpson and Boyd charged and squared the contest, the former shooting a fast, high drive past Goalie Tiny Thompson.

The Bruins' winning tally came during the last half of the overtime going. Gainor again furnished the drive. He gained the puck inside of his blue line, bumped Holmes and Patterson out of his path and passed to Welland as they entered the New York defense zone. Welland outskated Bill Brydge and slapped a fast shot into Worters' net.

HIGH SCHOOL SPORTS

Athletic activity at the Academy will be at a standstill for the next week or so because of the mid-year examinations, which start in certain subjects this week end and conclude Friday, Jan. 31. The indoor track team, which opened its season last Saturday night at the state armory, is taking it easy this week and has no meet scheduled, the next competition being listed for either Friday or Saturday, Jan. 31, or Feb. 1, respectively.

Soon after the results of examinations become known, Coach Brigham will start planning the first indoor practice sessions for his baseball team. These will probably commence the latter part of February at the state armory. It all depends on these examinations whether the athletes will be eligible for competition for the rest of the school year, which includes the sports of indoor and outdoor track, baseball and tennis.

Chapman Tech has made a flying start toward another conference basketball championship with victories over Plainfield and Killingly and a defeat by Windham. Windham looks like Tech's chief rival for the title. Tech has won every certified championship of the circuit. The Whalers won in 1921, 1922, 1923, 1924, 1925, 1926, 1928 and 1929. In 1927, the year of the famed Academy-Tech squabble, the Wildcats finished ahead in percentage at the end of the season but the championship was not sanctioned, because of alleged ineligible players performing for the Red and White.

This year brought the famous game at the Y gym, when before a crowd that jammed the playing surface to capacity, Lloyd Jarvis threw in a field goal in the closing seconds for a victory.

On the Fordham quintet this year are Babe Hurley, of Hartford, Bill Szczokowski, Torrington and Zaleskie, New Britain, all former Connecticut high school stars.

Frank Schwell, of Montville, Academy graduate, is a member of the City College of New York wrestling squad.

This season, Chapman Tech, Windham, Putnam, Plainfield, Killingly, Lyman, Bacon Academy, Robert Fitch and Stonington have basketball teams and the two oldest rivals, Bulkeley and the Academy do not. Which fact will be remedied in another year as both the Wildcat and Tiger plan court representatives by the 1930-31 campaign.

MALONEY GOES AGAINST EMANUEL AT BOSTON TONIGHT

BOSTON, Jan. 23—(AP)—Jimmy Maloney, Boston heavyweight, will risk his chance to meet Tuffy Griffiths at Miami, here tomorrow night, when he clashes with Armand Emanuel, clever Californian, in the Boston Garden's feature ten-round bout.

Maloney has been promised a place on the Sharkey-Scott card but the promoters of that "battle of the palms" have refused to tender him a contract until he disposes of the formidable Emanuel.

SPRINGFIELD, Mass., Jan. 23—(AP)—President William E. Carey of the Eastern league, announced tonight that a league meeting will be held on Feb. 3, at 1 p. m., at the Hotel Commodore, in New York city. The league schedule committee consisting of Presidents A. J. Shean of Springfield, P. A. Wilkinson of Pittsfield and Fred J. Susie Says

Once in everybody's life there is a moment which sticks out like a wart on the nose.

Sometimes it is a thrill we get out of that moment and then again it may be the opposite sensation, but always there's that big moment.

I was talking with one of the local boys who just returned from the golfing wars of Florida last night, and I says, "Cy, what was the big thrill you got down there? . . ."

And Cy tells me about it. It seems he was playing in the Miami open and the course down there is one of those kind where many of the fairways are parallel.

Cy was playing the 11th hole, a neat spoon shot to a well trapped green which had in back of it a high wire screen that protected the 17th tee. Well, Cy tees up his ball and drives. It is a high one with a slight hook.

It just tops the screen and stops dead in the center of the 17th tee. Just as Cy gets to his ball, Gene Sarazen, the boy that won the $10,000 in the Mexican open yesterday, comes to the 17th tee to play the 17th hole.

With Sarazen is a gallery of several hundred people and a couple of other noted pros. Here's Cy all ready to play his ball. He can either chip to the side, for the screen is directly between his ball and the green, or he can risk a high niblick over the screen.

With several hundred people looking at you it's a mean shot to play over that screen. But Cy takes the chance and there's almost a groan as the gallery sees him get set for the shot. He cuts down on the ball and it rises in a graceful arc over the screen and plumps down on the green a few feet from the pin.

Sarazen could have done no better himself and there's a ripple of applause. It was a great thrill for Cy, one which he says he'll never forget. But he tells me it took him three putts to get the ball in the cup. Another thing he'll never forget.

And so it goes, a big moment once and then just the opposite. But that's the way you get the breaks in this life.

And speaking of golf, that boy Massie Miller is getting some tough breaks in his play out in the golden west. The kid seems to be playing as brilliant golf as any of the big shots until that third round when the old jinx seems to step in and knock him for a goal.

If he can get by that third round once or twice he's going to land some big money for himself one of these days. Norwich should be pretty proud of this youngster who is showing the way to some of the big boys.

Norwich, Conn., has gotten more mention in the press of the country during the past two months than it has in the past ten years. And all through this boy, Massie B. Miller, the Lilliputian of the golf world.

Are you going to the fights tonight? Don't miss the Beauregard-Moriarty bout, it will be a wow.

CARNERA MAKES DEBUT IN GARDEN TONIGHT

NEW YORK, Jan. 23—(AP)—A human monument from Italy, neatly erected in a pair of Venetian gondolas, will be unveiled for the entertainment of the faithful in Madison Square Garden, tomorrow night. The man mountain, Primo Carnera, is scheduled to box ten rounds with another massive heavyweight, Big Boy Peterson, of Minneapolis.

The event, which has already precipitated a complete sell-out at the battle palace, marks the first public appearance in fighting posture of the ambling alp, a giant six feet, eight and a half inches tall and weighing roughly 270 pounds.

As to his fighting ability, little is known or expected. His chief battles were fought in Europe a few months ago with Young Stribling, the grown-up Macon schoolboy, and both ended in fouls with the decision "easy." The general impression is that Carnera can't fight much but is a whale of a thing to look at. He is a 3 to 1 favorite to dispose of Peterson in rapid fashion.

The sensational fighting part of the program probably will be taken care of by Larry Johnson, lanky Chicago Negro, who knocked out Joe Sekyra in a round, and Fred Lenhart, Spokane light heavyweight, who belted out Phil Mercurio in his first start here. They meet in a ten round semi-final. Add Warren, Chapel Hill, N. C., heavyweight, and Buck Weaver, from Medicine Lodge, Kas., collide in the first ten.

In the middle of the Carnera hysteria, Phil Scott, the leaning tower of London, sailed into New York from England, ready to start training for his 15 round engagement with Jack Sharkey at Miami, February 27. Phil brought with him the "secret punch" with which he has promised to dispose of the Boston sailorman. It was turned over to the keeping of two private detectives.

Scott will leave for Miami, Tuesday and will do some training at Palm Beach.

REAL TORRID ACTION PROMISED IN SHYMA CLUB BOUTS TONIGHT

Tonight's Card

10 rounds—Main Bout—121 lbs.
Al Beauregard of Taftville vs. San Sanches of Mexico
8 rounds—Semi-Final—148 lbs.
Lou (Dynamite) Brouillard of Danielson vs. Arthur Lee of Bridgeport
Preliminaries
Ero Peterson of Worcester vs. Benny Novak of the Sub Base six rounds
Young Lav'gne of the Sub Base vs. Freddie Neal of Worcester
six rounds
four rounds

The above card of action is offered by the Shyma Boxing club of Taftville tonight at Parish hall, Taftville, for the approval of the boxing fraternity of eastern Connecticut. From past performances it can be said that this card will be one of the best ever shown in the eastern part of the state. On paper there is not a single bout that looks as though it might be a flop, all bouts promise plenty of action and any one should be worth the admission price.

Topping the card is Al Beauregard and San Sanchez, the winner of the Mexican bantam and featherweight titles. San Sanchez is substituting for Lou Piquette of Bridgeport who was unable to fulfill his engagement here owing to an infected cut on his eye. Sanches is an acceptable sub as he is much more of a slugger than Piquette who is more of a boxer. Sanchez should be able to give the fans much more action as he is a type that will mix with Beauregard. Beauregard is in nice shape for his go tonight and is confident that he can take Sanchez inside the ten rounds. He was pleased at the substitution as he thinks Sanchez will fight more his style than would Piquette who outboxed him a few months ago.

One bout that there is no doubt will be a whirlwind of action is the semi-final between Lou (Dynamite) Brouillard of Danielson and Arthur Lee, colored battler, of Bridgeport. Brouillard is a popular local favorite and from previous showings is picked to take over the Bridgeport tar baby. However, Lee is not any set-up but is a real clever lad with plenty of steam in his punches and it would not be surprising to see him walk off with the decision.

When Ero Peterson of Worcester, another local favorite, tackles Benny Novak of the Sub Base, the fans will see one sweet little scrap for six rounds. Novak is a real fighter and a clever boy in the ring although he is not doing as much ring work as the Worcester lad who is boxing every week. Peterson is coming along fast and has a large local following.

Another classy bout is the other six round preliminary between Freddie Neal of Worcester and Young Lavigne of the Sub Base. These boys seem evenly matched, the comparison being made through their bouts with Young Lizzio of Westerly, both winning.

The opening four round bout is attracting as much attention as any bout on the card. This bout brings together Minnew (Shires) Beauregard of Taftville, brother of Al Beauregard, and Mush Moriarty of Norwich. Both boys are extremely popular, Moriarty in Norwich and New London, and Beauregard in Taftville. There is a little story about how "Shires" Beauregard came to enter the professional ring.

It seems that after the last show the boys of Fancy Corner were discussing the showing of Pat Shea of Hartford against Alex Tourain. Someone said that Mush Moriarty would have made a better showing. Up speaks Minnew and says that they were all wet and that he could lick Mush any day in the week. And that started it. Immediately there was a clamor for a bout between the two. Minnew had made his wisecrack about Mush so there was nothing to do but go through with it.

This will not be Minnew's first appearance in a ring before a Taftville crowd. A couple of summers ago Minnew was a spectator at an athletic show at a carnival there. One of the local boys had been thrown by the professional wrestler and the pro was asking for more opponents when up walks Minnew. He climbs into the ring, peels off his coat and says, "Come on, you big Greek." The Greek comes on, Minnew catches him with a strangle hold and tosses the professional over his shoulder out of the ring and on the spectators. Minnew puts on his coat again and stalks out of the tent.

But tonight is another night and it's a boxing match instead of a wrestling bout. We shall see.

The opening bout is scheduled for 8:15 o'clock promptly.

Y SENIORS BATTLE FOR TOP PLACE SATURDAY

Not in years has Norwich had a basketball team as good as this season's edition of the Y Seniors and, outside of the Academy, has one of its team faced so important a game as the local boys do Saturday night when the Middletown Y five will the opposing force in a battle at the local gym.

The situation shows a triple tie for first place in the state Y league and Norwich and Middletown are two-thirds of that tie, they, with Greenwich each having lost but one game. Naturally the victor tomorrow night will take undisputed possession of first place and have a certain edge for the remainder of the championship race. There will be plenty to fight for and both teams are throwing everything into this one game.

Comparative scores show little edge for either team. Norwich beat Greenwich early in the season and Greenwich came back to beat Middletown last Saturday but those who saw this last game claim that Greenwich was a much improved team over its conflict against Norwich. The Seniors lost their only game to Bridgeport 42 to 33 here the last Saturday in December, but they also had an alibi if they wished to use it for Aubrey Brown, high-scoring forward, was not in the lineup.

However, Brown and his running-mate Tommy Lynch, Capt. Roland Harris, center and Les Pingree and Enos Eccleston, guards, will all be in the fray Saturday night for the acid test that may prove the most important night of the whole season for the Seniors' title possibilities. Practice sessions have been stiff this week. Since the game with Stamford was postponed Tuesday because of the snowstorm, Coach Demarest has been working his boys at top speed in order to keep them in stride.

This all-important state league clash should be enough to insure a packed gallery Saturday but, in addition, the local management is giving the fans another contest that is exciting much interest. This is the preliminary when Norwich and New London girls' teams clash. Norwich has had few girls' basketball tilts and, this, together with the fact that both clubs are figured to be fairly evenly matched, has added much lustre to the game.

Basketball in the city has so far had a dismal season in the money-box but if there are any basketball fans left they will turn out on the week end for what promises to be an evening of high-class basketball.

PHI DELTAS WIN FROM LYMAN HIGH, 28 TO 20

The Phi Delta Nu defeated the Lyman high school of Lebanon Thursday evening at the Y gym. The Deltas forged steadily ahead from the start of the game and kept a margin of at least 5 points the whole game. Armstrong starred for the Deltas with 12 points. Briker, diminutive forward for the high school, seemed to be able to dodge well and sink most of his team's baskets. In the preliminary the Central Baptists of the Church league defeated a makeshift Brothers of Joseph team winning handily. Score 44-32.

SCHMELING TO FIGHT SHARKEY-SCOTT VICTOR

MIAMI, Fla., Jan. 23—(AP)—Max Schmeling, German heavyweight, will meet the winner of the Jack Sharkey-Phil Scott fight in the Yankee stadium June 26, Johnny Buckley, manager of Sharkey announced here tonight.

"An understanding with Joe Jacobs, Schmeling's manager, has been arranged for such a bout," Buckley said. "That is why the Atlantic City contest was called off.

"Since New York boxing officials do not recognize Jacobs, an agreement has been made whereby Schmeling, upon his arrival in New York, will sign his own contracts. The fight will take place in the Yankee stadium the last Thursday in June, under the auspices of Madison Square Garden," Buckley added.

Sharkey and Scott will meet here under the direction of the Garden on February 27.

RANGERS WIN BRILLIANT VICTORY OVER SENATORS

NEW YORK, Jan. 23—(AP)—With the Cook brothers and Frankie Boucher passing and shooting in their best form, the New York Rangers took a fast and brilliantly played National Hockey league game from the Ottawa Senators tonight, 6 to 3. The victory tightened the Ranger grip on second place in the American group, making their margin over Chicago three points.

The second period, in which Bun Cook scored three times on passes from Brother Bill, gave the Rangers the victory. Bill tallied once in the first frame and Boucher counted in the last. The sixth Ranger goal was an accidental affair when Gagne deflected Goldsworthy's pass into his own net.

Ottawa was a serious threat from start to finish but Goalie Roach was performing at his best. He made 41 stops and was only beaten three times. Frank Finnigan counted twice and Bill Touhey once.

HITCHCOCK AND GUEST HEAD POLO PLAYERS

NEW YORK, Jan. 23—(AP)—Tommy Hitchcock, Jr., with a perfect ranking of ten goals, and Winston Guest, at nine goals, still head the list of American polo players.

Three players were reduced from eight goals to seven—J. Cheever Cowdin, Sands Point; Harry East, Hunting Valley; and W. A. Harriman, Sands Point.

The announcement was made from his bed in the University hospital where he is suffering from an infected finger. Doctors had advised him, he said, that his finger would not heal completely for two or three weeks.

Springfield Downs Wesleyan

MIDDLETOWN, Jan. 23—(AP)—Springfield college, displaying a fast passing attack and an excellent defense, defeated Wesleyan's basketball team here tonight 29 to 21. Captain Cameron, of Springfield, with ten points, was high scorer.

Springfield led at half time, 17 to 7 and opened the second period with an entire new team. The regulars were pressed into service, however, after Wesleyan had rallied to bring the score to 19 to 16.

BROWNS LOOKING TO YOUNG TALENT FOR STRENGTH

ST. LOUIS, Jan. 23—(AP)—The St. Louis Browns, who tied the World Champion Philadelphia Athletics in team fielding last year but wound up in fourth place because they weren't so good on offensive play, are looking to a flock of youngsters from Brownie farms for added strength this year.

Unless Bill Killefer, new manager who moved up from a coaching job to succeed Dan Howley, makes a few "finds" among the recruits or negotiates some last minute trades, the Browns will launch their 1930 pennant drive with about the same hustling crew that battled through the 1929 campaign.

Killefer has made an inspection of the Browns' farms, weeding out the older players and leaving only those he believes will develop into big league possibilities. If they fail to strengthen the club enough this year to upset Connie Mack et al, then Killefer hopes thy will develop within the next season or two.

The Browns, like many other clubs, had no luck in dickering for trades at the big league baseball meeting.

Prospects are that the new manager will start with a smaller catching staff with only the regulars, Dick Ferrell and Jimmy Manion, and perhaps some recruits. Wally Schang was traded to the Athletics.

New players include Sammy Hale, third baseman who came to the Browns in the trade for Schang, and Herman Holshouser, new pitcher, a right hander from Baltimore obtained in a swap for Outfielder Frank McGowan.

In the outfield there will be a curtailed squad of regulars, Schulte, Manush, McNeely and Badgro, and several young hopefuls. In this latter class is Ted J. Gullic, right handed home run slugger who played in the outfield for Tulsa and Wichita Falls last year and did some spectacular work at bat.

The infield will be much the same as last year with Blue at first, O'Rourke and Hale at third, Kress at short and Melillo at second.

As matters stand, the pitching staff also will be little changed from last season. It includes Alvin Crowder and Sam Gray, who led the attack in 1929, Richard Coffman, George Blaeholder, John Ogden and Warren Collins. Chad Kimsey, who was called in the latter part of last season, has been sent back to Tulsa.

The Browns sprang a surprise by finishing a strong third two years ago and made a bid for that same berth last season but weakening in the stretch. They were rated as a hustling, fighting club under Manager Howley and since the players favored promotion of Killefer when Howley stepped aside, there are indications they will continue to be a scrappy team this year.

They will start off with the longest spring training schedule they have faced in years and Killefer expects to have them well drilled for the pennant scramble.

OUTBOARD MOTOR BOAT RACING IN COLLEGE SPORTS

NEW YORK, Jan. 23—(AP)—With the distinction between amateurs and professionals settled for the present, outboard motor boat racing today gave signs of making rapid strides this season as a college sport.

Colgate university took the lead when E. P. Danforth and C. R. Rowe of of the Colgate Outing club appeared before the board of directors of the National Outboard association to announce that Cornell, Dartmouth, Syracuse, Hamilton and Union as well as Colgate are to be represented in a collegiate outboard regatta on Cazenovia Lake in central New York state May 16 and 17.

The Colgate Outing club which is staging the event expects a total of 60 individual entrants.

Other college regattas are expected during the season.

The new rules which do not grant recognition to records made by professionals were indorsed and their critics were forced to be content with the prospect of working quietly in the hope that sentiment will be changed before next year.

The scene of the national championship regatta was not determined although Oct. 4 and 5 were set as the dates.

Eugene F. McDonald, Chicago, was selected commodore of the association.

POETRY

To An Old Silver Spoon

Battered, banded, blackened spoon
Did a bride make her dragoon
Beaded juleps that you stirred
When he sulked without a word?

Did a baby cut its teeth
On your dented underneath?
Did blue, raiding soldiers come
With their rifles and a drum?

Were you buried where a lamp
Shadowed currant bushes; damp
With the breath of broken earth
Spaded swiftly for your berth?

And when years had pressed the ground
Long forgotten, were you found?
Such a story matches you,
I should like to think it's true;

Though I've heard—to my dismay—
Pappy toted you away
From a social, in his pocket,
With the lady of my locket!

—Sonia Ruthele Novak in the New York Sun.

Taking It Easy

I'm a-lingering along,
  Just a-lingering along;
A feller doesn't hurry
  Through the sweetness of a song!
When sun is on the meadows
  And white clouds are in the sky,
A feller isn't honin'
  For the day to hurry by.

I'm a-lingering along,
  I'm a-lingering along;
The world's so full o' goodness
  I can hardly see the wrong;
The world's so full o' children
  All so happy 'long the way
That I sort of wish that life would Last forever and a day.

I'm a-lingering along,
  I'm a-lingering along;
Lookin' round for dewy blossoms
  I can weave into a song;
They must be all kinds o' colors,
  And must be begemmed with dew,
If the song will half ways tell of What a world I'm goin' through.

—Judd Mortimer Lewis, in Houston Post-Dispatch.

A man-catcher attached to the front of all motor vehicles is the latest device being tested by the British ministry of transportation in an effort to reduce the growing toll of fatal street accidents in Great Britain. Deaths average fifteen a day. The new lifeguard is fitted to cover the front wheels of cars, much like a cow-catcher on a train, and is designed to carry the car's victim along the road. Each crossbar of the guard is fitted with a spongelike material and at the bottom a rubber fender prevents legs or arms from getting under the wheels. Tests by the ministry of transport included long hours with a dummy figure that was thrown into the path of a fast-moving one-ton truck from all conceivable angles. The dummy was not once run over.

Fire Alarms For Schools

In compliance with Rhode Island state law fire alarm boxes have been installed and are in working order in five of Westerly's public schools, according to a statement issued by Chief George E. Egger, of the fire department. The schools are the high school, Park avenue, Beach street, Quarry hill and White Rock, all in the more remote sections of the town. Chief Egger said that boxes have been placed in the other schools and the Anderson and Westerly hospitals but not connected with the system yet. He estimated that two or three weeks would be required before connections are completed. The boxes are installed in compliance with a state law passed a year ago and effective in July, 1929. Lack of funds has been given as the reason for Westerly's tardiness in securing the boxes.

HIS FAMOUS SADDLES HELD AGAINST AUTOS

LOS ANGELES—(AP)—Before the old west began to wane Robert W. Brydon, then 27, decided ranching was poor business.

He got a job as errand "boy" in a harness and saddle shop here at $5 a week. The other day he sold that same shop for $100,000.

Brydon's claim to fame lies in the saddles he and his associates made. It was not uncommon for a sheriff and the bandit he pursued both to riding Brydon saddles. They have been ridden nearly all over the world. One day a stranger looked over the shop and asked if those were all he had.

"I haven't anything good enough for you," said Brydon, playing a hunch. "What you need is a $1,000 saddle."

The stranger stared, for at that time no such saddle had been made in this country. "Can you make a saddle really worth $1,000?" he asked.

The man was "Klondike" Berry, who had discovered gold in Alaska. The fame of the saddle Brydon made for him spread far and wide. Later Brydon sold one to Anita Baldwin for $3,500.

E. L. Doheny, the oil magnate, and Tom Mix, screen cowboy, were among his customers. He made a special saddle for President Taft to use in his trip to the Grand Canyon.

When the first automobile chugged over the horizon, Brydon's associates became panicky and he bought them out. He began to specialize in saddles which would appeal to "society" riders.

Scores of shops went out of business but the one built up by Brydon is still selling riding gear at the address at which it was established 28 years ago.

ABANDONED TUNNEL WANTED BY NO ONE

SEATTLE—(AP)—Anyone wanting a second-hand tunnel, two and two-thirds miles long, can probably buy one in this state for a song.

It cost between $2,000,000 and $3,000,000 new but no one can be found now to claim ownership of it.

The tunnel was built by the Great Northern railroad in the nineties and abandoned last year upon completion of the new eight-mile bore under the Cascades between Seattle and Spokane.

The road denied ownership when a Seattle motorists, during shortlived use of the hole as a substitute highway for Stevens pass, became stalled in it. The rail company claimed title had reverted to the forests service.

The Northern Pacific road, on whose corporate doorstep the tunnel is located, denies owning it and the two counties it connects don't want it.

The state highway department has had both ends of the tunnel boarded up to prevent injury to motorists due to poor ventilation and in this condition it will stand until its legal owner can be determined.

U. S. FINDS 26 WOODS AVAILABLE FOR PLANES

MADISON, Wis.—(AP)—Twenty-six different kinds of wood are now available for airplane construction.

Experimental research conducted at the forest products laboratory of the United States forest service here shows that all the woods are available in forests of this country.

Experiments were started when war was declared in 1927. Spruce was then the chief wood used. Today there are many, chief among them douglas fir and hard woods used for propellers.

LAW PROTECTS A DRUNK IF HE SLEEPS IN AUTO

ATLANTA—(AP)—Gents whose celebrating has been too emphatic are assured technical privacy in Georgia if they choose to risk a stiff neck by "sleeping it off" in the rear seat of an automobile.

The state supreme court, in an appealed case, has ruled that one so engaged is not publicly drunk.

The statute, the high court held, is designed to prevent violent discussions, profanity and vulgarity.

Home

Where you are not afraid to put your feet up on a chair,
Where there is a refrigerator filled with things to eat,
Where you may smoke and you may read, and find your resting
Sweet.
Where people whom you love come by to sit a while with you;
Home is the place where you dream dreams you later make come true;
Home is where you have planted trees and watched and helped them grow,
While little children stood beside you in the long ago.

Home is an old house where the shutters rattle in the wind.
An old house that the children have gone on and left behind;
And it sits there with windows dim looking like weary eyes Across and through the smoke-clouds which rise up against the skies,
And seems to watch for something gone, children, and wonder when
They will come laughing back across the world to it again;
Home is an old place crowded by the city's onward flow,
A sort of island holding all the loves of long ago.

A home is where the walls still show the print of baby hands—
I sometimes wonder if when we go to the happy lands
We shall not find the old homes there, the old dooryards made
sweet
By voices of loved little ones, patter of little feet?
I think we shall. Old homes have souls; and we shall find them there,
And all the little loves of old the sunshine on their hair,
Will be there. For we would not think it heaven otherwise,
And there will be home-roses there, blooming 'neath cloudless skies.

THE FARMER'S TALK TO FARMERS

NEW ENGLAND FARMING

(Written Specially for The Bulletin)

It's apparently an almost universal trait of human nature to despise what it can have and to want what it can't have.

Whitcomb Riley once summed it up by saying:

"As a rule
Man's a fool:
When it's hot he wants it cool;
When it's cool he wants it hot;
Always wantin' what it's not.
Never pleased with what he's got:
I maintain, as a rule,
Man's a fool."

The same idea underlay the old darky song wherein you are described as coming to a highway intersection from which many roads diverge.—

"'Nd some goes east 'nd some goes west;
You takes de one you likes de best

Poet Pope's avouchment that "Whatever is is right" runs exactly counter to the majority feeling of the race. The most of us are firmly convinced that whatever we are or have, we really ought to have been or received something quite different.

Sambo wishes he had been born white; Stevedore Noakes wishes he had been born Reginald Astorbilt; Judge Parchment sitting in a smelly court-room and gazing wistfully through the bleary windows at the June world wishes he'd "gone in" for baseball instead of the law; the doctor, yanked out of bed at 2 a. m. to attend a colicky baby seven miles away, wishes he'd gone to sea rather than to medical school; the farmer, beset by bugs and slugs and worms and weeds and prowling vermin of all sorts, wishes he'd learned blacksmithing instead.

So it goes through the whole gamut. No one seems to be satisfied; everyone is more or less frankly envious of someone else.

We farmers are just as badly bitten by this particular bug as any other class. I know one who had a rather unusually good farm with an exceptionally good market for his produce. But he wanted something better, so sold out and moved to California. The last I heard he was thinking of buying "the old Beckwith place," and coming back east.

A dozen or so years ago another farmer, with a good quarter-section in Iowa, got sick of it, sold out, came east, and bought a 300-acre farm in one of our local intervales. Three years later he, too, had got enough, and was hunting for a buyer to take his holdings, so he could go back to "God's country" where, to use his own words, "a fellow doesn't have to put out $10 worth of manure and $10 worth of labor to get a $12 crop."

Reading about or perhaps motoring through the horizonless prairie lands of the fertile west the eastern farmer is more than likely to wish that he had settled there instead of on Hardscrabble hill.

The lonely plainsman of the west, similarly hearing of or seeing the homely eastern farm, nestling among friendly-looking hills, with neighbors just around every corner, and watered by cliff-fed springs, thinks his eastern compeer is a "lucky stiff," and bemoans his own harsher fate.

The simple truth seems to be that most every fellow's shoe pinches somewhere, and nobody else knows just where till he has tried to wear it a while himself.

We of the east, accustomed to the task of wringing reluctant crops from thin and obdurate soils are especially given to envy of our western brethren. "Oh, if my farm were only as level and stoneless and deep-loamed as a Kansas wheat bottom!" is the feeling of a great many. A perfectly understandable wish, in itself, and if that was all there was to it. But Mr. Grumbling Easterner should be reminded that there are two sides to every question and that, if he could swap his ledges for an equal acreage of prairie, he would simply exchange one set of troubles for another.

Senator Henry J. Allen in Kansas is understood to have bought a section of land in his home state, presumably with some idea of going into farming. This leads The Kansas City Star, which really loves Henry, to point out to him, in a spirit of solicitous affection that he's taking mighty big chances. However harsh and rugged may have been the road he has thus far travelled, however rampagious the enemies he has has met and overcome, however strenuous his battles against privilege and greed,—all were but skirmishes compared with what he's now up against. Says The Star:—

"But now he has brought trouble upon himself. In the role of farmer he has defied even the elements. The troubles that disturb him in politics are not to be reckoned with the troubles that must come upon him as a Kansas farmer. In addition to the lack of moisture there is too much moisture. Next spring, perhaps, the headwaters of the Smoky Hill will leave their banks and roam over the prairies where once the Indians roamed, uprooting Farmer Allen's wheat crop. The March winds will blow out of the ground what the floods fail to carry away. The grasshopper will follow, searching out the corn that is planted in his fields. The chinch bug will garner in what the grasshopper leaves. Murrain will attack the cattle, scab will get into the sheep and cholera will take the hogs. Taxes will be to pay and the mortgage will fall due.

"Armageddon was a picnic, the World war a recreation, the operation of the Kansas coal mines with the aid of state troops a pink tea. Farmer Allen now has jumped head first into the farm problem."

This recapitulation of "the joys of farming" in Kansas comes from local and expert authority. We submit that even a North Stonington agriculturist, skirting the ledges and dodging the boulders he has to plow beside or around, could hardly set forth a worse list of difficulties or fill a fuller "peck of trouble."

We're all of us all the time looking for an impossible Eden at The Other End of Nowhere. If we could really get to it, the chances are more than even that we should find it very much of a sameness with This End of Somewhere. As has been sagely remarked about 300,000 times, every rose has its thorn. There isn't any unmixed good in this messed-up world. The bitter seems always to brother the sweet. They're almost twins. The pyrite that gleams like gold from the broken rock turns out to be just sulphur and iron, when you've toilsomely dug it out. So far as classical tradition makes clear no one ever succeeded in tasting the Golden Apples of the Hesperides. If one had, he might very likely have found them really Apples of Sodom, fair enough on the outside but filled with ashes.

There are unquestionably many things to be said in favor of farming in the west. But, honestly now, why should we farmers of the east dwell upon them? The advantages and disadvantages of western farming are matters for western farmers to consider.

There are many things to be said of, in favor of eastern farming. It has its disadvantages, to be sure. But it also has its advantages.

"I'd like to know what they are," injects some doubting Thomas. Well, for one thing, it is done close to a steady, year-round, fairly appreciative market. It doesn't have to ship its produce across a continent or an ocean to find buyers. Few eastern farms but are within reach by flivver or even by Old Dobbin of a more or less hungry market. For another thing, churches and schools are handier by. A lady who had lived all her married life on a Kansas farm once said to me after her return to the east, that the sweetest music she ever knew was that pealing from the old steeple of a Sunday morning. "I hadn't heard a church bell for 20 years," she said. For still another thing, the eastern farmer is comparatively immune from destructive tornadoes, damaging floods, grasshopper and chinch-bug invasions, etc. For still another thing, he is often surrounded by an atmosphere of family associations and traditions which make the old house a real home, instead of merely a sleeping and feeding place for plowmen and harvest hands. That may be an intangible and unmarketable advantage. So are love and ambition and honor intangible and unmarketable. They are none the less significant and pregnant.

The western farmer has his peculiar problems, which he is, by the very nature of things, best fitted to grapple with. We eastern farmers have, also, our peculiar problems which we are best fitted to handle intelligently. Neither one is likely to find the life all beer and skittles. Nor need either consider it all one of set-backs and disappointments. The stone-heaps we call farms ask for a widely different treatment from that demanded by the loamy plains of the corn-belt states. They present their own difficulties. One of our jobs is to overcome these difficulties. At the same time, they offer certain compensations. Another of our jobs is to magnify these compensations and make the most of them.

It's quite as important to recognize and nourish our advantages as it is to meet our difficulties man-fashion.

And it makes vastly more for contentment. The man who is forever bragging about his achievements may, indeed, get on our nerves. But the Jeremiah who is always snivelling over his troubles makes himself an unbearable nuisance. He's unhappy himself and a radiating source of discomfort to all his neighbors.

When Shakespeare wrote:

"A merry heart goes all the day;
Your sad tires in a mile-a,"

he was simply putting into Elizabethan English Solomon's averment that "All the days of the afflicted are evil; but he that is of a merry heart hath a continual feast."

It is undoubtedly true that there's nothing on earth so good it mightn't be better. It is just exactly as true that there's nothing on earth so bad that it couldn't be worse.

Anybody who thinks that New England farming is a picnic or a pink tea is making one big mistake. Anybody who thinks it is a hopeless tragedy is making a still bigger one.

We may have to do things differently from what they do "out west," or differently from what father used to do.

But there's life in the "old dog" yet, for those who know how to invite it.

LEBANON

The church school officers elected Sunday, January 12th, are: Superintendent, Mrs. W. Vey; assistant superintendent, Miss Helen Nourse; secretary, Dorothy Kneeland; assistant secretary, Florence Paltz; treasurer, Stephen Manning; assistant treasurer, Lester Yerrington. The attendance at Sunday school has increased and it is expected during the coming year even greater interest will be shown.

Owing to the extremely cold weather over the week end the services were held in the basement of the church Sunday. There was a good attendance.

The topic for the C. E. meeting which was in charge of Mrs. Vey was "Shall We Abolish or Expand Missions, Why?" Next Sunday evening the meeting will be in charge of the Franklin young people under the leadership of Ray Beckwith. It was voted at the last meeting to make this a consecration meeting, as the society has been invited to the Norwich Town Congregational church Sunday evening February 2 to hear Rev. Wynn Fairfield, a missionary recently returned from China.

Thursday, January 16th, at the home of Mrs. MacDonald the meeting of the Woman's Missionary society was held. Mrs. MacDonald the vice president was in charge. There was a short devotional period, then items of interest from the missionary number of the Congregationalists were read. After this the meeting was in charge of the president Mrs. Madley and plans were made for a supper and entertainment, the proceeds to go toward some worthwhile project.

Mrs. O. L. Paltz gave a party Monday evening on the birthday of her son Laverne who is having a brief vacation from Worcester Polytechnic Institute.

Miss Evelyn Waterman, who was operated on at a private hospital in New London, expects to be home the latter part of the week.

Mr. Malo n, a teacher in Lyman Memorial high school is boarding at the home of Mrs. H. W. Sweet. Mrs. Johnson, state librarian, was an overnight guest at Mrs. Sweet's while doing work at the library in town.

Miss Helen Huntington of Willimantic was in town to attend a dinner party Tuesday, January 14th, given by Mrs. Leon Sweet in honor of the birthday of her mother, Mrs. Anna Perry. Mrs. Throop and Mrs. Mary Sweet were guests also.

BREAKER BOY FADES, SO DOES MINE MULE

PHILADELPHIA —(AP)— The mine mule and the breaker boy are disappearing from the anthracite mines says the Anthracite Bureau of Information.

In years to come the tottering old miner will not be referred to as "once a miner, twice a breaker boy," for mechanization of the anthracite industry is keeping step with the progress of machinery in other activities.

The human slate picker, usually young boys or old men incapacitated for heavier work, and once the subject of sob-producing stories peculiar to the anthracite industry, has disappeared, says the bureau.

Likewise, the mine mule, once occupying as an important a place in the anthracite industry as did his brother, the army mule, in the military establishment, has given, or is rapidly giving, place to a mechanical rival, a victim of the age of machinery.

WINTER SPORTS LURE IN NATIONAL FORESTS

WASHINGTON—(AP)—Winter sports in the national forests are on the increase.

The U. S. forest service says tobogganing, coasting, skating and skiing are pursued with zest in the Tahoe National forest in California and in the Pisgah National forest in North Carolina.

STATE NEEDS MAPS TO SHOW FARMING SOIL

Need of making a new topographical map which would aid the state of Connecticut in its program of utilization and conservation of land was stressed by Dr. George Alan Works, president of the Connecticut Agricultural college, in an address last week before the heads of state departments and institutions at Mansfield.

Other speakers were former Governor Everett J. Lake and Lieutenant Governor Ernest E. Rogers. Praise for the efficient and humane manner in which the Mansfield State hospital and Training school is being conducted was given.

The basic factor in the development of a policy of wiser utilization of land in the state of Connecticut is the preparation of an accurate soil map of the state, President Works averred, presenting to the meeting Connecticut's problems of the most economic and beneficial utilization and conservation of land.

Dr. Works referred to the 1929 report of the secretary of agriculture which stated that much of the economic hardship suffered by farmers has been caused by too rapid, or mis-directed, expansion of areas devoted to farming, and that to discourage the occupation and cultivation of lands ill-adapted to farm operation should be a part of a sound agricultural policy.

This same recommendation was upheld by a survey carried on in New York state relative to the abandonment of agricultural lands ill-adapted to farming. This survey found that abandonment was a painful process by which the land passed to successive owners, each of whom wasted money on land which could not be productive to farming, with a total result depressive to all agriculture. The survey concluded that since these lands should be kept from agricultural production and yet not remain idle, reforestation was the logical remedy.

These problems may be similar to those in Connecticut, Dr. Works stated, and while there are excellent opportunities for farming in the state they lie in the intelligent use of the best lands for production to which they are best suited. Nothing is to be gained and much may be lost by encouraging farming in areas which are ill-adapted to the task.

The most efficient way in which to select lands best suited to various agricultural production is by the use of the soil map, the president stated. In the preparation of this soil map the initial step would be the making of a new topographic map. The present one was prepared more than 30 years ago and the methods used then were less accurate than those of today. In addition, many changes in roads, reservoirs, streams and cover have taken place during this period.

The method now used in the making of these maps includes air photography which makes possible the making of a photographic map as well as a topographic map. The former is of use in classifying land of taxation purposes, Dr. Works pointed out. The United States geological survey is ready to cooperate with the state in making the topographic map, the president stated. As the survey would bear a portion of the cost, the expense to the state would be only about $150,000. As soon as the topographic map was started the work on the soil map could be begun. The United States bureau of soils would bear one-half the expense of this survey so that the cost to the state would not be over $40,000. The total cost to the state of these two enterprises would not exceed $200,000 which could be spread over a number of years. When once the soil map was completed it would be possible to proceed much more intelligently in the application of the results of soil research to farm and forest conditions.

KANSAS, RICH FROM OIL, SEES BANNER YEAR AHEAD

WICHITA, Kas.—(AP)—With $70,000,000 worth of oil produced from Kansas wells in 1929, oil men believe the state's greatest strike is yet to to come.

Last year saw the greatest oil development in Kansas history since the El Dorado boom days of 15 years ago. More than 10,000,000 acres of Kansas land now are under oil and gas leases.

Major companies have paid about $20,000,000 in cash bonuses for the right to explore this potential petroleum empire, and rentals will average half that much annually.

The Ritz pool in McPherson county, leading development of the year, is flowing a potential 12,000 barrels daily of high gravity oil. Strikes in 1929 extended from near the Colorado border to points adjacent to the Oklahoma line.

IDEAS REVISED SHARPLY AFTER BREAK IN STOCK

NEW YORK—(AP)—When the public turned against common stocks after the October-November break, it was no half way shift in sentiment.

Statistics on the collapse of stock values tell an interesting story of how the public shied away from new stock offerings.

During November, when business was marking time, new issues of all kinds fell to the lowest point of the year. In December, when bankers began to feel their way cautiously once more, there was a total of $367,000,000 in new issues.

Common stocks accounted for only $12,000,000 of this financing more than doubled.

TRADING IN MARKET WAS EXPANDED BY STAMPEDE OF SHORTS IN FOX FILM

NEW YORK, Jan. 23—(AP)—A stampede of shorts in Fox Film gave the bear crowd its worst scare of the month today, and boosted the stock market out of the narrow trading range in which it has been languishing for a fortnight.

After the close of the market, Bethlehem Steel Corp. published its annual and fourth quarter earnings statements. Profit for the final quarter showed but moderate contraction from the record levels of the two previous quarters, despite the disturbing influence of autumn stock market panic. The results for the entire year, showing net profit of about $11 per common share, calculated on the total now outstanding, set a new peace time record, and inspired optimistic predictions as United States Steel report, due next week.

Wall street was somewhat disappointed that the Bank of England again announced no change in its 5 per cent rate, which again proved an accurate guide to the action of the directors of the New York reserve bank, meeting later in the day, on its 4 1-2 per cent rate. In the excitement of the bear episode in Fox, and the appearance of the Bethlehem figures, however, this disappointment was soon forgotten. The market was the liveliest so far this year, although the turnover of 3,329,280 shares was unimpressive in the light of last year's experiences.

The weekly brokerage loan figures showed a negligible decline of only $24,000,000 but nothing interesting had been indicated by recent sluggish action of the market.

It was notable, however, that corporate and private funds were again coming into the call loan market, while bank funds were being withdrawn. The federal reserve condition statements showed further strengthening of reserve position. Call loan rates were unchanged, ruling at 4 1-2 per cent, but again sagging to 4 in the afternoon.

The bear panic in Fox Film "A" caused a turnover of more than half the total issue of 820,560 outstanding shares. The rush to cover short commitments was precipitated by a report that Mr. Fox had agreed upon turning over his interests to a new trusteeship, in connection with which such august names as Charles E. Hughes and John W. Davis were mentioned. This report was not borne out, however, when the corporation was ordered to show cause in federal court next week why a receiver should not be appointed. The stock was bid up 11 points in an enormous turnover to 34, quickly dropped back to about 25, then rallied to close at 27 1-2.

Shorts in the merchandising, chemical, copper, and other shares were frightened into covering. The steel shares were strong in anticipation of the Bethlehem statement. Rails were fairly firm, but it was notable that utilities, motors and oils failed to participate notably in the advance. The price index of 90 leading stocks showed a net gain of only 1 6-10 points, despite sharp gains in selected issues. Such recent favorites as the farm implements and amusements were in continued demand. The advance family shares were buoyant on rumors of negotiations for a merger with Allis Chalmers.

Shares gaining about 3 to 5 points included U. S. Steel, Air Reduction, Chesapeake and Ohio, Colorado Fuel, Eastman Kodak, General Electric, Loose Wiles, J. C. Penney, Safeway Stores and U. S. Industrial Alcohol. Underwood Elliott mounted about 6 and J. I. Case 7 points. Western Union and Endicott Johnson each lost a couple of points.

Leading commodities sagged. Wheat futures lost about a cent a bushel on bearish weather forecasts and slackening of export demand. Corn lost nearly as much, reflecting large receipts. Cotton lost about 50 cents a bale on lower Liverpool cables, after failing to respond to the light ginnings report.

Foreign exchanges were irregular. Dutch guilders reached a new low for the month. Sterling cables rallied 1-16 to $4.86 5-8 on retention of the 5 per cent London bank rate.

BOND MARKET

NEW YORK, Jan. 23.—(AP)—The bond market displayed further easiness today, although the undertone of the domestic list was a trifle steadier. Foreign government issues, which have been working steadily higher, took a breathing spell and minor recessions were scattered through the group, which showed a smaller turnover.

The current tendency of prices is regarded as only natural in view of the fact that new offerings since the first of the year total nearly $500,000,000. Although the decline in the last ten days has been steady, it has been by no means large and the fact that the list shows such strong underlying resistance is held to be reassuring.

Rails and utilities sagged moderately in today's characteristically quiet session, but the industrials exhibited a fair degree of firmness. United States governments were in small demand and closing prices were irregular. Time money was a trifle firmer, while call funds followed their now familiar course of renewing at 4 1-2 per cent and dropping to 4.

Declines in the rails diminished, although a handful of the high grade issues, including Baltimore & Ohio first 5s and St. Paul General 3 1-2s, lost a point or more. On the other hand, Atchison General 4s, Burlington 4 1-2s, Rock Island 4s, Missouri-Kansas-Texas prior lien 5s, Pennsylvania General 4 1-2s and Erie 5s were firm.

The demand for industrials carried several tobacco company bonds higher, among them Liggett & Myers 5s and Lorillard 7s and 5s. The second named rose a full point. American Type Founders 6s, International Mercantile Marine 6s, Pillsbury Flour 6s, Penn-Dixie Cement 6s and Shell Pipe Line 5s advanced 1-2 to 3 points. In the specialties group, Shulco 6 1-2s had another sharp rally, the series "A" issue rising 3 points and the "B's" 5. New York Tractions were strong.

Utilities moved in a thin market. American Telephone 5s of 1965, when issued, made the best showing from the standpoint of volume, but the fluctuation was extremely narrow.

Belgian stabilization loan 7s lost a point, while Australian 4 1-2s, Brazilian 6 1-2s and most of the Argentine 6s yielded fractionally. German and French bonds were firm and British 5 1-2s moved up 3-8 to 104 which compared with their high for the past year of 104 5-8.

Convertibles spent a dreary day, despite the buoyancy of the stock market. International Telephone 4 1-2s rallied 1 1-4 on small buying and New Haven 6s advanced 3 points on the sale of a few bonds.

New offerings scheduled for tomorrow include a $5,115,000 issue of Chicago, Milwaukee, St. Paul and Pacific Railroad 4 1-2 per cent equipment trust certificates, maturing serially. They are priced to yield 4.90 per cent.

Treasury Balance.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 23—(AP)—Treasury receipts for January 21 were $4,692,458.71; expenditures $4,202,908.13; balance $104,068,839.40.

The gold movement at the port of New York from Jan. 16 to 22, inclusive, comprised imports of $312,000, consisting of $150,000 from Brazil and $112,000 chiefly from other Latin American countries, and exports of $12,000 to Mexico. There was a net increase of $1,000,000 in the amount of gold earmarked for foreign account.

THE CURB MARKET

NEW YORK, Jan. 23—(AP)—The New York curb market failed to share extensively in the bullish enthusiasm displayed on the "big board" today, prices again fluctuating in an erratic manner, but most issues closed higher on the day although the gains were generally small. Trading fell short of 600,000 shares.

Fox Theatres was run up from 5 7-8 to 9 1-4 on reports that opposing interests had agreed upon a set of new trustees but the stock lost all its gain and closed fractionally lower at 6 5-8. The turn-over in the stock comprised more than one tenth of the day's entire volume of business.

In the public utility group, such recent leaders as Allied Power & Light, American Superpower, American & Foreign Power warrants, Cities Service, Electric Bond & Share and United Light & Power A either closed unchanged or fractionally higher. American Light & Traction ran up 15 points in odd lot trading, and General Public Service 6 per cent preferred broke 12 1-2, and Central States preferred, with warrants, 10 3-4.

Cosden Oil dropped 3 5-8 points on a few sales and Continental of Maine and Indian Territory lost about a point each, but some of the pipe line shares, particularly Cumberland and Northern, recorded good gains.

Goldman Sachs moved up nearly a point on rumors that the annual report, due tomorrow, would exceed earlier expectations. Electric Power Associates dropped a point but most of the other investment trust, trading and holding company shares displayed a firm undertone. A rise of nearly 4 points in Bellanca featured the aviation group.

CHICAGO GRAIN MARKET

CHICAGO, Jan. 23—(AP)—Wheat values here headed downgrade today, influenced by nearly complete halt in North American wheat export business simultaneous with much enlarged shipments from Argentina. Besides, for the first time in months, Canadian farmers' deliveries of wheat at country points were larger than a year ago. On the other hand, the export basis for domestic wheat at the Gulf of Mexico held firmly today at the best premiums asked so far this season.

Chicago closing quotations on wheat were nervous, 5-8c to 1 1-4c a bushel lower than yesterday's finish. Corn closed 5-8c to 1 3-8c down, and oats 1-8 and 1-4c to 1-4 a 3-8c off, with provisions varying from 5c setback to a small advance.

Counting at times as a disturbing influence on Chicago wheat prices today was a weakness of the Winnipeg market, in this connection, it was noticed that the Canadian government's final estimate on the season's wheat in all Canada showed nearly 6,000,000 bu. increase over the latest previous figures, which were issued Nov. 13 last. Today's estimate came out after trading in Chicago had ceased for the day. Meanwhile, Liverpool closing quotations today on future deliveries of wheat were lower than due, and North American export business, such as it was, consisted mostly of Canadian wheat.

Special notice today was taken of announcement that Argentine wheat shipments this week showed 1,497,000 bu., compared with the week previous, and that vessel rates to Europe for Argentine wheat are below any current in recent years. These circumstances were construed in some quarters as indicating sharpened competition ahead for wheat from North America. A good deal of attention was also given today to the fact that during February last year the United States wheat visible supply decreased only about 6,000,000 bu. and during March last year increased materially as compared with the year previous. Something of an offset, though, is that primary arrivals of domestic wheat are a good deal smaller than a week or a year ago or at this time in 1928.

Increased rural offerings of corn today tended to weaken the corn market and oats as well. The enlarged offerings of corn were mostly from Illinois.

Provisions averaged lower with grain, despite upturns in the value of hogs.

THE CURB MARKET

NEW YORK, Jan. 23—(AP)—It was estimated today by Dow, Jones & Co., that the 1929 report of the General Motors corporation will show net profits of about $243,000,000, equal to between $5.35 and $5.40 a share on 43,500,000 shares of common stock. This estimate compares with $276,468,108, or $6.14 a share in 1928, the record year, and is greater than any other year in the company's history.

The Associated Telephone Utilities Co. has purchased the Johnstown Telephone Co. of Johnstown, Pa., which operates 14 exchanges in and around the mid-western section of Pennsylvania. Subsidiaries of the associated system now operate in 20 states.

AGRICULTURAL INTERESTS

OPEN SHEDS FOR DAIRY COWS PRACTICAL IN MILD CLIMATE

The open shed or covered barnyard is a practical method of housing dairy cows in moderate climates, say dairy officials of the United States department of agriculture.

It provides the best-known method of preserving all the fertilizing constituents of the manure. When there is plenty of bedding, cows in open sheds keep cleaner than those confined to stanchions, even when manure is allowed to accumulate for several months at a time. At the experiment station of the bureau of dairy industry at Beltsville, Md. 65 per cent more bedding is used in the open shed than when the cows are stanchioned.

The open-shed method permits freedom of action of the cow and gets her off the hard floors of the cow barn. Also where a small milking barn is used, the open shed is a cheaper method of housing than the customary dairy barn.

The bureau of dairy industry is now building sheds at some of its field stations and dividing them into pens so the herd may be divided into small groups. Mangers with rigid stanchions are built at the feed alley, so the cows may be fastened and fed individually. This is desirable because timid cows are often fought away from feed racks when the cows are not fastened at time of feeding. Cows housed in open sheds should be dehorned.

CHESTNUT TREES RETAIN TANNIN LONG AFTER DEATH

Good news to the tanning industry is that chestnut trees retain their tannin content for a long time after being killed by blight. This has been proved by the United States department of Agriculture, working in cooperation with chemists from the tannin industries. More than half of our domestic supply of tanning comes from chestnut trees, and it now seems certain that chestnut blight will exterminate the American species.

Studies made in a number of localities in the Southern Appalachians indicate that the percentage of tannin in trees dead from other causes than the blight as long as 25 to 30 years is not materially less than that in living trees. These trees are considered fairly comparable to blight-killed chestnuts. Blight killed trees lose their sapwood and bark within a few years after their death. However, the sapwood has a low tannin content and its loss is not a serious matter. Even the loss of the bark is not always a handicap since it is often peeled off before the extraction of the tannin, when the chips are to be further utilized for making paper.

The probability of finding and growing enough blight-resistant chestnuts in time to provide for the continuation of the present extract industry is now rather small. The results of extensive searches for blight-resistant American chestnuts have been rather disappointing as most of the trees have turned out to be blight-escaping instead of blight-resistant. Despite the rather discouraging outlook work is being continued with the most promising sprouts and trees.

Asiatic chestnuts are more promising than native varieties and an expedition from the bureau of plant industry has spent two years in Japan and Korea selecting seeds from blight-resistant forest trees. These seeds have been planted in this country and now many thousands of seedlings are growing here in nurseries.

BANDS AROUND APPLE TREES USED AS TRAPS FOR INSECTS

Bandages on apple trees are not necessarily a sign they are suffering from injuries. The chances are that the orchardist has bandaged the trees to set a trap for an old enemy, the codling moth, an insect which causes a $20,000,000 loss to apple growers annually. When the larvae of this insect are ready to make their cocoons they look for a sheltered spot on the tree, and if there is a band around the trunk, that makes an ideal place.

This method of trapping larvae of the codling moth was generally used before arsenical sprays were developed, and is still used as a supplementary control measure. Recent work of the United States department of agriculture sheds new light on this practice.

With the ordinary paper or burlap bands commonly used it is necessary to send men through the orchard at intervals to destroy the larvae collected in the bands. In an effort to eliminate this job, specialists of the department have been experimenting with bands treated with various chemicals which will kill the larvae. They report that a combination of beta-naphthol and lubricating oil gives satisfactory results and causes no apparent injury to the trees.

Further experiments will be necessary before the department can state conclusively that no injury to the tree will result from the use of these treated bands. For this reason it is recommended that all tests with such bands be made on a small scale and only on trees of full-bearing capacity.

In a test comparing various materials for bands it was found that those made of paper burlap were equal or superior to those of 3-ply cloth burlap, the kind commonly used in commercial orchards. The paper-burlap band is much less expensive than the one made of burlap, which means a substantial saving to fruit growers. Heavy roofing paper and light crepe paper were the least effective materials tried.

ADVISES DAIRYMEN TO ADJUST BY CULLING THEIR HERDS

With the present butter storage situation and the recent decline in price of butter and other dairy products, now is a good time for dairymen to eliminate from their herds the low producers, in the opinion of O. E. Reed, chief of the bureau of dairy industry, U. S. department of agriculture. In an address given before the Nebraska State Dairymen's association at Lincoln, January 8, Mr. Reed said that from 5 to 10 per cent of the lowest producers could be culled from herds without any danger of causing a shortage of dairy products. In this connection, he said that while three months ago cows producing from 300 to 350 pounds of butterfat a year may have made a profit, today it takes a better cow.

"It has been estimated," Mr. Reed continued, "that one-third of our dairy cows are not returning a profit to their owners. The points at which profitable production per cow begins and ends depend primarily on the kind and cost of feed, price of product, cost of labor and quality of cow. Where feed is of superior quality and cheap, feed cost per cow is relatively low. Where home-grown feeds are low in yield and purchased feeds are high in price, feed cost per cow is relatively high.

"With the beginning of the new year dairymen are faced with the problem of adjusting production to demand. It is difficult for dairymen to change the production to meet the demand in as short a time as can other industries." Mr. Reed illustrated this point with a statement from Mr. Legge, chairman of the federal farm board, to the effect that the steel industry recently felt a decreased demand, and as a result only 65 per cent of the blast furnaces are in operation today. Dairymen can not hope to adjust production to demand so quickly, said Mr. Reed, but they should face the situation and use this opportunity to rid themselves of unprofitable cows.

Going back to the figures compiled by the bureau of agricultural economics on the dairy industry for the year 1928, Mr. Reed explained that it was necessary to import only enough dairy products for about two days' supply. "Should a surplus amounting to 2.5 days' supply be accumulated in the United States," he said, "we could eliminate the surplus by culling out 2 per cent of our lowest producing cows—cows that are producing at a loss.

"An important factor that influences the limit of profitable production is the quality of our dairy products. Quality has a definite relation to demand. The production of a clean, wholesome, safe supply of milk is very largely the problem of the producer. It has been estimated that every year approximately $40,000,000 is lost to the dairy industry through low-grade milk and cream, and much of this loss is suffered by the farmer.

"The producer of dairy products should be interested in doing everything possible to insure the delivery of a good wholesome, safe product to the consumer. In far too many cases the producer of market milk waits for the milk inspector to inform him how to produce clean milk. In many other cases the producer objects to certain rules that should be followed if clean milk is to be produced.

"The demand for dairy products will never reach its highest point until the product offered for sale is of the highest quality. The dairymen should be the leaders in an effort to produce a clean wholesome, safe milk supply regardless of whether they produce milk for direct consumption or for manufacturing purposes. Milk that is unfit for consumption as fluid milk by the city consumer or by members of the farm family should not be used in the manufacture of any dairy product."

STATEMENT OF RESULTS.

(1). Pigs with initial weights of 100 pounds or more and gaining at least 1 1-3 pounds daily on a mixture of ground corn (9 parts or 12 parts) and ground soybeans (1 part) self-fed, free choice, with mineral (mixture in dry lot, through a period of approximately 9 weeks or longer), have produced firm carcasses in the majority of cases.

(2). Pigs with initial weights of 100 pounds or less and gaining a maximum of 1 pound daily on a mixture of ground corn (9 part or 12 parts) and ground soybeans (1 part) self-fed, free choice, with mineral mixture in dry lot, through a period of 15 weeks or less, have produced soft carcasses in the majority of cases.

(3). Pigs with initial weights ranging from approximately 40 to approximately 70 pounds fed raw soybeans with corn and minerals in comparison with cooked soybeans with corn and minerals both rations in dry lot (have produced carcasses of approximately the same degree of firmness) at comparable finished weights.

(4). Pigs with initial weights of approximately 50 pounds gaining a maximum of 50 pounds on rations of rice polish or rice bran with tankage and minerals during an eight-week feeding period followed by a gain of at least 70 pounds on brewers' rice with tankage and minerals during a period of eight weeks or more have produced firm carcasses in the usual cases.

(5). Pigs fed low-fat rations varying widely in protein content, with dried blood the principal source of protein, have produced carcasses which were strikingly uniform in composition and firmness of fat. All rations were composed of hominy, dried blood, alfalfa meal, and minerals. Owing to variations in the nutritive ratios of the rations varied from approximately 1:2 to 1:10. (The nutritive ratio is the proportion of digestible protein in relation to the sum of the digestible carbohydrates and the digestible fat.)

(6). Experiments have shown that when corn oil, peanut oil, and soybean oil are present in the ration, (either as naturally contained or as added), they have a softening effect on the body fat which increases with increase in the oil content of the ration. Cottonseed oil, on the other hand, has shown a distinct hardening effect when added to the extent of 4 per cent. of the mixture to basal rations of corn or hominy with supplements. When the amount of cottonseed oil is increased to 8 and 12 per cent, respectively, a progressive decrease in firmness results. The 8 per cent. addition of cottonseed oil produced hard or medium hard carcasses, and the 12 per cent. addition medium-soft or soft carcasses, as compared to hard carcasses on the 4 per cent. addition.

NEW STRAINS OF CORN MAY ERADICATE BORER

MONROE, Mich.—(AP)—Because he is an epicurean, the European corn borer may make possible his own defeat.

A. Russell Marston, entomologist at the Michigan state college corn borer experiment station, has developed a strain of corn from which the borer shies in distaste.

Why, Marston cannot tell. There is something in it the borer does not like; he knows the strain intuitively, and lets it alone.

There are other things the borer knows better than man. Even an expert can't tell the difference between a young corn plant and a young sorghum plant. But, Marston says the borer knows it instantly and will never touch the sorghum.

The resistant strain Marston has developed is a cross between the Maize Amargo, a South American strain the borer will not attack, and a commercially productive North American strain.

Amargo is not adapted to conditions of the northern hemisphere. It took three years of experimentation to produce a successful cross-bred strain which is nearly 100 per cent resistant to borer attacks.

Although Marston is hopeful, he says it remains to be proven that the resistant breed can be combined with commercial varieties of corn without serious loss of resistance.

He expects it to take five years to prove that it can and to produce resistant seed for the farmers—if it can be done at all.

However, there had been so much progress by the end of the 1929 season that plots of corn in which the resistant strain grew were entirely free from borers in sufficient number of instances to lead Marston to believe his methods are satisfactory.

Plots of resistant corn, free from the borer, grew adjacent to plots of other corn which were found to be 28 per cent infested. The uninfested corn is to be used in future attempts to produce a commercial strain that can be grown profitably under corn borer conditions.

HIGHESTT DRESSING HOG NOT MOST PROFITABLE

AMES, Iowa—(AP)—It's a wise little pig nowadays which knows whether to grow into a fat hog or a lean one.

Rex Beresford, head livestock specialist in the extension service at Iowa state college, has conducted slaughter tests that indicate the highest dressing hog is not always the more profitable per hundred pounds of live weight.

"A fat hog," he says, "may make a higher dressing percentage than a hog not so fat because dressing percentage includes all the usable meat and lard.

"The leaner hog may bring the packer a higher dollar value per hundred pounds of live pork because lard now is cheap while certain cuts of lean meat are high priced."

Pigs classed as "light butchers" at the packing plant where the tests were conducted, weighing 140 to 160 pounds, showed a much higher dollar yield per hundred pounds of live weight than fatter hogs which had a higher dressing per cent.

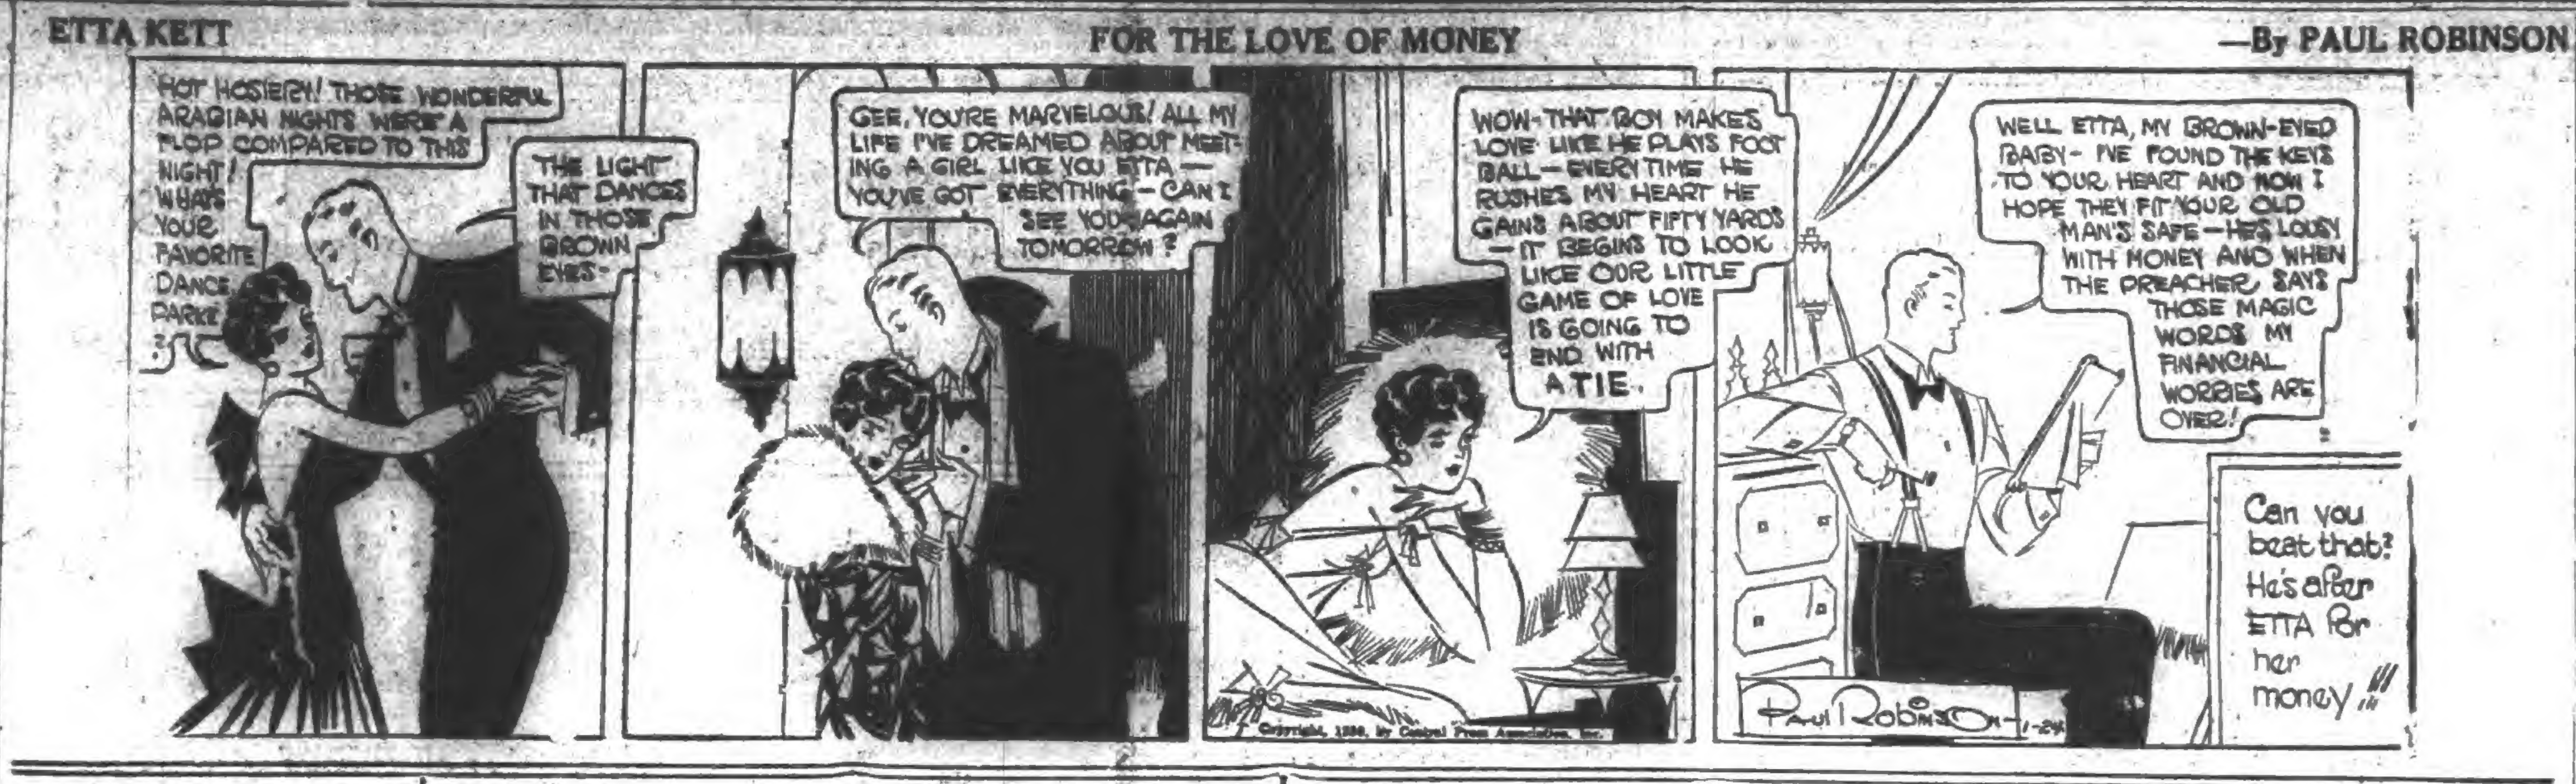
ETTA KETT — FOR THE LOVE OF MONEY —By PAUL ROBINSON



HOT HOSIERY! THOSE WONDERFUL ARABIAN NIGHTS WERE A FLOP COMPARED TO THIS NIGHT! WHAT'S YOUR FAVORITE DANCE PARK?
THE LIGHT THAT DANCES IN THOSE BROWN EYES-
GEE, YOU'RE MARVELOUS! ALL MY LIFE I'VE DREAMED ABOUT MEETING A GIRL LIKE YOU ETTA— YOU'VE GOT EVERYTHING — CAN'T I SEE YOU AGAIN TOMORROW?
WOW- THAT BOY MAKES LOVE LIKE HE PLAYS FOOT BALL— EVERY TIME HE RUSHES MY HEART HE GAINS ABOUT FIFTY YARDS — IT BEGINS TO LOOK LIKE OUR LITTLE GAME OF LOVE IS GOING TO END WITH A TIE.
WELL ETTA, MY BROWN-EYED BABY- I'VE FOUND THE KEYS TO YOUR HEART AND NOW I HOPE THEY FIT YOUR OLD MAN'S SAFE—HE'S LOUSY WITH MONEY AND WHEN THE PREACHER SAYS THOSE MAGIC WORDS MY FINANCIAL WORRIES ARE OVER!
Can you beat that? He's after ETTA for her money!!!

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Palace Theatre

The mad Prince Christian, soldier and lover whose romantic adventures in Eighteenth Century Europe make a vivid story is portrayed by John Barrymore in his first talking picture, "General Crack," which opens at the Palace theater here Saturday, for a four days' engagement. Thus is one of Hollywood's most distinguished stars brought to this city in a distinguished and alluring picture.

Said to be his most fascinating characterization, Barrymore, in the title role, is seen as a storming individual in eternal conflict with his gipsy and his aristocratic tastes—a man who became the dominant military genius of his time as well as the Prince of Lovers. In the prologue to the actual story he acts the part of his father, a doddering old soldier. Later in the film he takes the part of his father's ghost who appears as a guiding influence in an important turning point in the story.

Words can scarcely describe the turbulent glitter of barbaric gipsy camps in which a large part of the story is set. Nor is it possible to bring out the full glitter and glory of the military life of that resplendent age. The romance, adventure, love of the period are all faithfully portrayed in this glorious talking epic of the screen, and it is fortunate indeed that the title role can be played by so great and sympathetic an actor as Barrymore.

More will be told of the beautiful story of "General Crack" later, and for the present, we wish to remind patrons of the Palace that one of the great double feature programs in screen history may now be seen at the popular local theater which is playing "Three Live Ghosts" and "A Most Immoral Lady."

Majestic Radios.

"The Colotura Dynamic Speaker is the greatest improvement yet offered in radio reproduction. It is the first speaker to reproduce both instrumental music and the human voice with equal clarity and realism. All radios before this have fallen short on one or the other . . . have made either voice or instrument sound unnatural and distorted. But in the new Colotura Dynamic, Majestic engineers have overcome all obstacles and made it possible for you to get any program, instrumental or vocal—whether solo, combination or chorus, with absolute life-like clearness! The Colotura is also the first speaker to handle tremendous volume without overloading and consequent distortion. It is more sensitive on every wave length on the dial, therefore demanding less power and increasing the range of your set."

According to a report of less than four months ago, there were at that time 4,100,000 modern A. C. sets in use. This represents 15 per cent. of the total number of wired homes in the United States, which leaves a potential market for modern A. C. receivers of better than 4 per cent. of the total number of wired homes, so it can readily be seen that there is still plenty of room for the manufacturers of high grade radio sets to substantially increase their business in 1930.

In the past four months, the number of radios sold has increased these figures and the number of wired homes have also increased proportionately. But still, the fact that Grigsby-Grunow company have made and sold well over 2,000,000 electric receivers to date, shows that Majestic is well in the lead in the radio field.

Breed Theatre

Phyllis Haver's last role, before she left the screen for married life, is that of the heroine in Lon Chaney's new railroad picture, "Thunder," now playing at the Breed theatre, with sound synchronization. She plays a night club dancer, fiancee of James Murray, who is Chaney's son in the picture. Chaney plays a veteran railroad engineer in this new Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer production, and actually ran a locomotive for many miles in the filming of this graphic story. George Duryea, Frances Morris and others of note are in the cast. It is an original story by Byron Morgan, directed by William Nigh.

"Thunder," spectacular story of railroad life in which Lon Chaney plays a veteran locomotive engineer, was filmed largely on the lines of the Chicago Northwestern railroad, and it shows in detail the operation of trains and the building of locomotives. Phyllis Haver, James Murray and others are shining in the cast.

Broadway Theatre.

William Powell and Helen Kane sharing honors in that racy picture of back-stage life, "Pointed Heels" will close at the Broadway with tonight's showings, and will be followed tomorrow with the production that all Norwich has been waiting for, "The Love Parade," with that prince of entertainers, Maurice Chevalier. That smiling, debonair Frenchman with his flashing teeth, sparkling eyes, and heart-stirring voice, rises to greater heights even than in his famous "Innocents of Paris," and will undoubtedly be responsible for many incipient cases of heart trouble during his four-day visit at the Broadway. Telling a somewhat naughty, but extremely nice story of a lovely queen, who in her heart was but a weak woman after all, seeking love and romance to soften the hardships of state, and whose choice fell on a common courtier, much a man, but alas, a gay philanderer, who naively confessed his escapades to the wondering queen, "The Love Parade" is a thoroughly delightful comedy of life. The beauteous queen is Jeannette MacDonald, truly regal and very lovely, and with a very tender and appealing voice, especially in her already popular song, "Dream Lover." The production abounds with song hits, and Chevalier's marvelous voice was never displayed to better advantage than in his many "Love Parade" numbers. As though Chevalier himself were not enough even though he is the outstanding star of the screen world today, the producers introduce a pair of sparkling comedians into the cast in the role of two palace maniacs, who romp and clown, furnishing plenty of comedy. Lillian Roth and Lupino Lane are the two palace servants, basking in the brilliant warmth of Chevalier's hectic romance with the love-sick queen. The cast includes many well-known stage and screen stars and a chorus of several hundred voices. The scenic effects can be described only as marvelous. The entire New York production, which played to packed houses will be shown on the Broadway screen. Tomorrow's performance is continuous, with two complete shows Sunday.

Bill Swan and Frank Connell picked him up out of the state road and carried him into Porter's Mill house, where Dr. Cyrus E. Pendleton, of Colchester, examined him and pronounced him badly shaken up and having a fractured left knee. George Petrie, of Providence, was called by telephone and came and took Valley and the truck back to Providence. The transmission fell out of the car and after shifting the gear, Valley lost control of the car, ran into a stonewall, knocked a door off, then back to the state road, turned around nearly a dozen times, then turned over, minus considerable parts of the machinery. The truck demolished three state fence posts and part of a side railing. The car, in turning around, threw cookies and cracker boxes to left and right on all sides of the state road. The truck was filled with stock on the way to East Hampton.

COUNTRY'S MULE CAPITAL NOW BOASTS OF ITS COWS

FULTON, Mo.—(AP)—Meek dairy cows are supplanting obstreperous mules in Gallaway county, once the nation's mule capital.

Instead of hailing the country's position in the mule business, farmers now are extolling its virtues as a dairying section: Its natural blue grass country, they point out, makes it favorable for dairying.

Many farmers, who used to say they would "starve before milking cows," have capitulated. The uncertainties of the mule market in this mortorized age make dairying attractive to those desiring a stable income. Others, however, are yet to be convinced.

GREENEVILLE

YOUNGSTERS ENJOY FINE COASTING TO THE FULLEST

The youngsters of Greeneville for the past two days have been enjoying the ideal coasting on the hills about this section. The Boswell avenue hill has drawn the largest crowds, nearly 100 being out last evening. This hill gives the youngsters the longest ride, for they coast from Seventh street to Fourteenth street, with some of the coasters cutting down Tenth street to coast to Central avenue. One double-ripper, when it made its first appearance on the hill last evening, drew a lot of attention for it had a bell on it that sounded like an ambulance warning signal and windows were thrown open and heads appeared to see if any accidents had occurred.

ATTENDED FUNERAL OF COUSIN, DR. L. L. GAUCHER

Mr. and Mrs. Homer Larose and son, Harry Larose, have returned to their home on Fourth street, after attending the funeral of Mrs. Larose's cousin, Dr. Lorenzo Lionel Gaucher, which was held from his home, 208 Newberry street, Hartford. Services were held at St. Augustine's church, where a solemn requiem mass was offered, with Rev. U. O. Bellerose of Baltic as celebrant, Rev. Edward G. Rosenberger deacon and Rev. James E. Dargan sub-deacon. Seated in the sanctuary were Rev. M. W. Barry, pastor, of St. Augustine's church, Rev. Francis W. Eagan, Rev. Patrick J. O'Connell and Rev. Anthony Murphy, chaplain of St. Francis' hospital. Burial was in Mt. St. Benedict cemetery, Hartford, where a committal service was conducted by Rev. Father Bellerose, assisted by Fathers Rosenberger, Barry, Eagan and O'Connell.

When 25 local women met in the auxiliary room of the W. W. Backus hospital Wednesday afternoon to make bandages for the hospital, over 1,600 were completed by the ladies.

FUNERAL

Mrs. Thomas A. Perkins

Mrs. Charles T. Sears and son, Nathan Sears, have returned to their home on Prospect street, after attending the funeral of Mrs. Sears' mother, Mrs. Thomas A. Perkins, which was held Tuesday afternoon at 2 o'clock from the home of her daughter, Mrs. Alfred Free, at Winchendon, Mass. Burial was in Union cemetery, Waterford, Wednesday afternoon at 2 o'clock, and Rev. Herbert Hutchins, pastor of the Quaker Hill Baptist church, read the committal service. The bearers were Harold Burt, Fitch Rogers, John Rogers and Thomas Sears. There were many friends and relatives in attendance and there was a wealth of beautiful floral remembrances. Undertaker George Grant of Taftville had charge of the funeral arrangements.

Jerome Theve

On Thursday morning the funeral of Jerome Theve, for many years an overseer at the J. B. Martin Co., was held from his late residence, No. 3 Elijah street at 8:15 o'clock, followed by a mass of requiem at 9 o'clock at St. Mary's Memorial church, which was celebrated by the pastor, Rev. William A. Keefe. During the mass a musical program was presented by Mrs. Michael J. Farrell, church organist, and Mrs. John B. Marshall. At the offertory Mrs. Marshall rendered Pie Jesu and as a waiting hymn Mrs. Farrell sang Meet Me On My Homeward Way. Lead Kindly Light was sung at the recessional by the choir. Burial was in the family plot in St. Joseph's cemetery, where Rev. Frederick M. Coholan was in charge of the committal service. The bearers, all employes of the J. B. Martin Co., were Ernest Trechette, Narcisse Raymond, Arthur Brodeur, August Dupont, Joseph Jankowski and George Henry.

UNITED CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH VOTES TO SELL COMMUNITY HOUSE

At the annual meeting of the United Congregational church, held Thursday evening, it was voted to sell the so-called Community house on Church street, including the organ, for $30,000 cash to the Community Synagogue of Norwich, of which Abner Schwartz is president. The gas stoves and the numbered cane seated chairs in the building are not included in this sale price, and it is provided that the church will have the use of the building without charge, until April 1.

The vote on the sale was by 146 for and 38 against and was taken after a long discussion of the subject, during the course of which a motion to postpone the vote until a meeting in February had been defeated. The discussion and vote on the sale prolonged the meeting until 11 o'clock before the business was concluded.

The church meeting was held in the social room in the Community house, which is a large stone church edifice that was formerly the Second Congregational church, but has been known as the Community house since changes were made in it after the consolidation of the Second church and the Broadway church into the United Congregational church. It contains the Pope Memorial organ, a very fine instrument that was presented to the Second church in 1918 by Miss Sarah E. Pope in memory of her sister, Miss Sylvia A. Pope.

Preceding the annual church meeting at the Community house, there was a supper for the congregation with an attendance of about 250 at which the menu served was roast ham, mashed potatoes, mashed turnips, cabbage salad, rolls, apple pie, ice cream and coffee.

Rev. Alexander H. Abbott, the pastor, was moderator at the business meeting at which annual reports were made by all departments of the church and the financial reports were given by Treasurer Arthur M. Thompson and by John H. Perkins, custodian of the trust funds. The department reports showed a busy year in many lines and a net gain of 31 in membership was made, bringing the church membership now to 834.

TAFTVILLE

Fred Dugas, president of the Taftville Rod and Gun club, has received 18 full grown cottontail rabbits from Kansas, which are to be liberated in the woods in this vicinity in about 10 days, after they have been inspected by a representative of the state fish and game commission. When the shipment arrived there was only one dead animal in the lot. This is the first time that the club has tried the importation of rabbits from other states, the present experiment being made because of the great scarcity of this specie of game here; and if this attempt is successful, the club plans to make further expenditures to purchase cottontails, to furnish shooting for local sportsmen. Owing to disease which sometimes infects rabbits, it was necessary for the club to obtain the permission of the fish and game commission to make this experiment, and an examination of the animals will be required before they are released from quarantine. The committee, Edward Duprey and Joseph E. Benac, plan to liberate the rabbits in Lisbon and in sections of the woods surrounding Taftville where this sort of game has been reported as scarce.

When the Home department of the Taftville Congregational church school holds its monthly meeting tonight (Friday) at the church vestry, the committee in charge of the evening's program consists of Mrs. John Haffiger, Mrs. Gustave Hedler, Mrs. Edward Heinrich and Mrs. Alfred Linderson.

Mrs. Margaret Nolan and little daughter, who for a number of years have resided on North A street, have left town for New York where they are to take up their residence with Mrs. Nolan's sister, Miss Catherine Fitzmaurice, formerly of Taftville.

The snow is furnishing great sport to the junior ski enthusiasts of the town, the favorite skiing place being the large lot opposite the Providence street baseball ground.

A meeting of the members of the Wequonnoc school orchestra was held Thursday afternoon at the school, for business and rehearsal.

The next meeting of the Thimble club is to be held with Mrs. Walter S. Grant of the Old Canterbury turnpike.

CLAIM GASOLINE DEALERS OWE STATE $50,000

An investigation being conducted by inspectors of the state motor vehicle department into the accounts of wholesale distributors of gasoline in Connecticut is expected to disclose that approximately $50,000 is due the state in uncollected taxes because of apparently unintentional errors in reports of sales. This amount represents the tax on amounts of gasoline which dealers believed equaled the shrinkage occurring in the handling of their product. The motor vehicle department claims that in many cases the shrinkage allowance has been too large.

Thus far, the inspection has covered the records of 12 companies, or about one-seventh of the number of wholesalers doing business in Connecticut. It shows, according to the state's figures, that payments have been $6,233.64 short of the total which the department considers should have been paid in taxes. This amount represents the tax on 311,683 gallons of gasoline, or about 1.7 per cent of the total handled by the 12 companies in the period covered by the examination.

Some of the dealers whose records have been examined have admitted, in whole or in part, that payments have been below the actual amount of tax due and have paid more than half the shortage claimed by the state, or $3,175.22.

Of the 12 companies investigated thus far, only one has been found to have made exact tax payments. Two have admitted the claims of the state in full and made adjustments. Two have made payments on the claims in part, and the other seven have questioned the figures of the department. The amount to be adjusted is $3,058.42, on the tax on 152,921 gallons of gasoline.

The department also announces that it is conducting an examination of the records of retail gasoline distributing stations. Many violations of the laws and regulations affecting these places have been discovered. Thus far, 1,220 of the 4,298 stations in the state have been examined. Twenty-six were found to be operating in violation of transfer regulations, many have changed owners without giving the required notice to the state. Thirteen stations were operating without licenses. Fifteen were operating gasoline pumps without having applied for licenses. Thirty-nine additional outlets on pumps, besides 20 portable pumps were discovered to be unlicensed. About $500 in fees were involved in these violations.

NORWICH LIONS ENDORSE BOY SCOUT CAMPAIGN

The Norwich Lions club, at its regular weekly meeting Thursday noon at the Wauregan hotel, voted confidence in the Boy Scout movement. In the absence of the president, Charles W. Cassidy, Vice-President Charles Solomon presided and J. B. Caron was the song leader. There was a discussion during the meeting, regarding the coming financial campaign of the Eastern Connecticut Council of Boy Scouts. The club unanimously voted to aid the campaign in every way possible. The following were named a committee to assist in the campaign: President Charles W. Cassidy, Joseph N. French, William R. Frisbie, Joseph Panek, and Dr. Charles Solomon.

Mr. French, who attended the annual motor boat show in New York city, gave an interesting account of the advancement of the motor boat industry. After Mr. French's talk the meeting was brought to a close with the singing of The Star Spangled Banner.

SETTLEMENT WITHOUT TRIAL IN THREE BOWEN SUITS

Three suits brought by Mrs. Catherine Bowen against her husband, Dennis Bowen, both residents of the Greeneville section of the city, which were ready to go to trial here Thursday morning in the superior court before Judge C. L. Avery, were settled out of court without trial.

The settlements were reached after conference that lasted all the morning and were taken up by the attorneys after suggestions had been made by Judge Avery before the trial was begun.

In one of the suits, Mrs. Bowen brought a petition for support, in another she sought $11,000 damages on a claim of money due her from her husband and the third suit was for partition of property on Central avenue. In one of the suits, Elizabeth Daley, a daughter of Mr. Bowen, was made a party defendant.

The marriage of the couple took place Feb. 18, 1926, but they have been separated for almost a year. The plaintiff in the suits was Mr. Bowen's fourth wife and she had been married once before she married him.

Attachments on two savings bank accounts in the name of Mr. Bowen were made when the suits were brought, one of $6,897.39 in the Chelsea Savings bank and the other of $3,067.62 in the Norwich Savings society.

According to counsel in the case, the terms of settlement were that Mr. Bowen is to pay his wife $3,400, and she is to give him title to the real estate on Central avenue. Of the settlement total, the sum of $1,750 represents Mrs. Bowen's interest in the real estate and the balance of $1,650 is a lump sum which Mr. Bowen is to give his wife in lieu of weekly support.

The attorneys were John H. Barnes and Edward Moran for Mr. Bowen, William H. Shields, Arthur M. Brown and Thomas M. Shields for Mrs. Bowen.

According to the allegations of the $11,000 suit of Mrs. Bowen against her husband, she claimed that in consideration of marriage to Bowen and other good and valuable consideration, Bowen made and executed certain gifts of money deposited in certain savings banks in this city amounting to upwards of $11,000 for which sums deposit books were issued by savings banks for a joint account. The allegations set out that, thereafter, Bowen wrongfully took the bank book from her and took the deposits which he converted to his own use.

In another suit she alleged that her husband failed to support her, has ceased all association with her; has treated her uncivilly, insultingly and contemptuously and ignored her as a wife; threatened to do her grievious injury and bodily harm; has forced her to leave the house; has failed and refused to provide his wife with necessary food in the house; has continuously refused to speak to his wife.

Mrs. Bowen alleged that his conduct had become so unbearable that it has resulted in undermining and injuring her health and caused her much mental anguish, fears and sufferings, and made her life miserable.

SETTLEMENT EFFECTED IN LaBARRE FAMILY SUITS

Settlement was reached here Thursday in three Taftville superior court suits, in which members of the LaBarre family are litigants, one of which was scheduled to be tried Thursday before Judge C. L. Avery.

Albert LaBarre was the plaintiff in suits over property on Hunters avenue and the defendants were his sons, Napoleon and Alfred, and the wife of the latter, Marie Pratte LaBarre, all of Taftville. The property is the place where a bottling business was at one time conducted by the LaBarres.

Two of the suits were over foreclosures of mortgages, one for $10,350 and the other for $2,250, and the third suit was on an allegation of waste committed on the property by the sons, while they were in possession of it.

By the terms of the settlement, it is understood that the title to the property is to be vested in the father and his sons are to pay him a small consideration.

Attorneys Charles W. Cassidy and H. H. Pettis were counsel for Albert LaBarre, while Attorneys V. P. A. Quinn and Arthur T. Libby were counsel for Mr. and Mrs. Alfred LaBarre. Attorney Thomas M. Shields represented Napoleon LaBarre.

NEW RATE SCHEDULE FOR BOZRAH ELECTRIC

The public utilities commission of the state has recommended that a revised schedule of rates previously recommended by the Bozrah Electric Co., be put into effect Feb. 1 for a trial period of one year. The recommendation was made after the commission found that the rates charged by the company are discriminatory and that some of the practices of the company appear to be both illegal and unbusiness-like. The commission's ruling was made after a hearing on a petition by taxpayers of the town of Bozrah at Hartford Nov. 1.

A large number of clubs are expected to enter teams in this tourney, many of them from surrounding towns.

Ferguson, of No. 111 River avenue, was painfully burned about the face when the heater backfired. The fact that he was wearing glasses probably saved his eyes from serious burns. Mr. Ferguson was attended by Dr. William T. Driscoll.

JAS. L. MORRISON, NEW LONDON, DIES AS RESULT OF FALL ON ICY STEPS

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Jan. 23.—James L. Morrison, about 76, former railway mail clerk, died this evening at Lawrence Memorial hospital from a fractured skull sustained earlier in the week. He is survived by a son, George Morrison, who resides in Florida.

Mr. Morrison for many years was employed as mail clerk, having a run between New London and Brattleboro, Vt. During the latter years of mail service, he was employed at the mail transfer room at the Union station. He was retired about 12 years ago.

Mr. Morrison had been an inmate at Hillside home for several months and a few days ago left the home and started to walk to Garfield avenue. The steps to the horse were slippery because of recent storms and Mr. Morrison, not being of sure footing, slipped and fell. In landing, his head struck the steps with great force, causing him to be rendered unconscious. He was given medical treatment and then taken to the hospital, where he lingered until tonight.

Mr. Morrison's wife died several years ago.

He will be given a hearing in the police court tomorrow. Luby, about 65, went to the store late this afternoon and started taking socks, combs, talcum powder and numerous other articles from the counters when he believed the eyes of the clerks were not on him. The manager of the store was notified of Luby's act and watching him, the man was seen to take some article and thrust it into his pocket. The police were notified and Luby was arrested by Patrolman Dennis Murphy. The store manager said that a large quantity of stock had been stolen from the counters recently, but it is not known whether today was the first time that Luby started his pilfering.

The child refused to give her name or to accompany Allison to the office of a physician. The police are continuing their search for the pair of degenerates, one of whom Tuesday night annoyed operators of the Southern New England Telephone company by exposing himself on Washington street, and the other who mistreated a youth of 9, residing on Howard street, in a vacant lot the same evening. Last night, an officer maintained a watch of the telephone company's building when the operators were leaving or entering and a young man detected loitering there was questioned, but when he was taken to the building none of the operators could identify him as their annoyer of the night before, so he was released. In the case of the fellow who abused the Howard street boy, the police have obtained a clue as to his identity.

Oliver Abernathy, clerk, 178 Ocean avenue; Francis Axsom, laborer, 159 Ocean avenue, and Oliver Harris, New Haven railroad lineman, 69 Montauk avenue, were presented in the police court this morning charged with tampering with a gasoline service station pump for the purpose of theft. Abernathy and Axsom were sentenced to 60 days in jail, but execution of the sentence was suspended and each was fined $25 and costs. The charge against Harris was nolled. The young men were arrested Sunday morning at 5 o'clock by Automobile Patrol Officer Augustus Ray. The officer was passing through Broad street and observed Abernathy and Axsom at one of the gasoline supply pumps of the Shell Gas company, 193. The officer found that the lock of the pump had been broken and that the two tanks of the Abernathy car had been made ready to receive a supply of fuel. The lock was also found in Abernathy's machine. Harris had remained in the auto through the efforts of Abernathy and Axsom to steal the gasoline. After their arrest, Abernathy and Axsom confessed, stating that they decided to attempt the theft of the gasoline and that Harris did not play a part in the attempt to replenish the gasoline tanks. Since their arrests the three had been at liberty in bail of $2000 each.

Other than the trivial injury to the driver, the only other occupant of the car to sustain injury was Miss Berg, who received two fractured fingers and abrasions. LALONE AND MOULTHROPE, ESCAPED CONN. CONVICTS, CAPTURED IN PENSACOLA

Moulthrope Was Arrested At a Dry Dock Where He Was Working—Lalone Was Captured in a House—Both Men Surrendered Without Violence—Admitted Their Identity When Confronted With Photographs and Fingerprints—They Are Wanted in Jacksonville For Murder of a Detective.

PENSACOLA, Fla., Jan. 24.—(P)—Watson Moulthrope and Roland Lalone, escaped Connecticut convicts, wanted in Jacksonville for the murder of a detective, were arrested by police here late today.

Chief of Police William O'Connell said both men readily admitted their identity when confronted with photographs, fingerprints and other evidence.

Moulthrope was arrested at a dry dock, where he had been working several days, Chief O'Connell said. Lalone also had been working at the dry dock on a ship, but was arrested at a house in the city where police said he went after learning that Moulthrope had been arrested.

Moulthrope told police he had not been in Jacksonville and that he and Lalone, who escaped from the Connecticut state penitentiary with Leo Landry, who is in jail at Jacksonville, had separated before reaching Florida.

Chief O'Connell said Lalone admitted being in Jacksonville on the night City Detective Willie Smith was killed and Detective Willie Jones was seriously wounded.

Moulthrope and Lalone surrendered without violence.

Landry was arrested in Jacksonville a few days after the shooting of the detective on a vagrancy charge and was recognized from pictures as one of the three men wanted. He confessed, police said, that he was one of the trio, but said the shooting had been done by his companions.

The Jacksonville officers were shot when they attempted to arrest the three men for questioning in connection with a series of minor hold-ups.

The bandits fled, each taking a different direction, after the officers were shot. Smith died in a hospital and Jones is now recovering. Lalone was serving a life term in the Connecticut prison for murder of a policeman. Moulthrope was sentenced to from 18 to 25 years on several counts of robbery, and Landry was serving a three to four year term for robbery. They escaped from the Connecticut state penitentiary on January 4 and made their way south in stolen automobiles, changing them three times along the route.

The three men had been identified in Jacksonville as the same ones wanted for the shooting of the detectives, through their pictures.

Both Moulthrope and Lalone denied to police that they had any part in the shooting in Jacksonville. After preliminary questioning the men were turned over to Escambia county authorities and will be held without bond pending the arrival of Jacksonville police.

Boats operating under the direction of Walter Over, field representative of the Red Cross, and J. G. Little, chairman of the Mississippi county relief committee, brought more than 50 persons, many of them women and children, to the Roseland Ditch field base this afternoon. Overnight rescues and the number previously ferried to safety increased the total rescued to about 100.

Ban On Importation Of Parrots From S. A.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 24—(P)—President Hoover today signed a proclamation prohibiting the importation of parrots from South America.

Mr. Hoover issued the proclamation on recommendation of the public health service in view of the appearance of parrot fever in the United States.

Issuance of such a proclamation had been suggested as a means of preventing additional cases of "parrot fever," or psittacosis, more than 50 cases of which have been reported to Surgeon General Cumming.

Going into effect immediately, the restriction against the birds will be administered by quarantine officers.

Rare, and in some respects mysterious, the disease came to the attention of scientists in 1879, Dr. Cumming said, but it was comparatively unknown as a human ailment in the United States until early this month, when three members of an Annapolis, Maryland, family were suddenly stricken with it. Their new pet parrot, Dr. Cumming said, had died shortly before they became ill.

Since the Annapolis case, the disease has been reported in Minnesota, Ohio, Florida, California, Rhode Island, Connecticut, Massachusetts, Pennsylvania and New York.

Burglars Don't Seek the Limelight.

Darkness is their stock in trade. They work by stealth—unheard and unseen—their movements cloaked in secrecy. It's honest folk that seek the light. They are the only ones who can risk it.

It's the same way in business. The manufacturer or the merchant who is not sure of his goods does not dare advertise. Advertising would hasten the end of his business career—put him to a test he could not meet.

The man who advertises deliberately invites your inspection. He knows his product is good. That's one reason why it pays you to read the advertisements in The Bulletin. It is through advertising that you are able to keep in touch with the good things that progressive business men are spending their money to introduce and to keep before you.

Eunice Pringle Asks Damages of $500,000 for Actual Injury and $500,000 For Exemplary Purposes—Theatrical Multi-Millionaire, Now in Jail at Los Angeles On Fifty Year Sentence, Declined to be Interviewed About the Suit.

LOS ANGELES, Jan. 24.—(P)—Eunice Pringle, co-ed dancer, filed suit in superior court here today against Alexander Pantages, theatre multi-millionaire, asking $1,000,000 damage for the criminal attack she alleges was made upon her by the showman last August 9.

The 17-year-old girl asked damages on two counts, $500,000 for actual injury, and $500,000 for exemplary purposes.

The complaint which was made in brief form was filed by Hugh L. Dickson and Theodore Gottsdanker. Gottsdanker was one of the persons whom Pantages claimed Miss Pringle consulted in an effort to "blackmail" him.

The plaintiff cited the alleged attack of which Pantages was convicted and which occurred in a secret conference room of the multi-millionaire's theatre building here. Pantages is in jail here awaiting the outcome of his appeal against a one to fifty year prison sentence.

Miss Pringle alleged that the act caused damage to her name through "the wide publicity in the newspapers; that in the course of the commission of the act x x x the defendant x x x severely injured x x her x x x; that as a result x x x the plaintiff has suffered great physical pain and mental anguish and humiliation and still continues to suffer great anguish and humiliation."

During Pantages' recent trial the girl's mother Mrs. Lou Irene Pringle, was cross-examined regarding her asserted visit to Gottsdanker's office the morning after the attack, August 10. She was asked if it were not true that she discussed with him the matter of bringing a damage suit for $500,000. She denied this, saying the attorney mentioned the possibility of bringing such a suit and that she replied she was not interested in money but only in justice for her daughter.

The alleged attack occurred during a visit by the girl to Pantages' office to confer with him on a dancing skit she desired to place on his vaudeville circuit. Pantages claimed that the girl leaped on him, screaming, and that her alleged act was an attempt to blackmail, prompted by his refusal to accept her play.

Newspapermen, who attempted to interview Pantages in his cell shortly after the suit was filed, were met with the statement by him: "I don't know anything about it. I haven't anything to say and if I did, I wouldn't say it. And I don't want any newspaper people up here bothering around.

DR. W. P. S. KEATING RESIGNS AS LEGION POST COMMANDER

(Special to The Bulletin)

WILLIMANTIC, Jan. 24—Dr. William P. S. Keating, who has recently been appointed as surgeon at Fitch's Home for Soldiers at Noroton, tendered his resignations as commander and state aid officer of James J. Shea post No. 19, American Legion, at the regular meeting held Thursday night. The resignations were accepted with regret. That of commander is to take effect March 31 and that of state aid officer on February 27. T. Frank Cunningham, Lester H. Blish and Roy W. Downer were named a committee to co-operate with other veterans' organizations of the city in staging a brilliant farewell party for Dr. Keating, who is to take up his duties at Noroton March 1. The party will be in the form of a banquet according to tentative plans.

The new gavel of the post was in use for the first time. It was made by Joseph Roux from a block of wood presented to the post from the National Lumbermen's association. The block was part of the white house burned by the British in 1812. Vice-Commander Abraham Sussman reported for the membership committee that the present enrollment of the post was 135, a gain of 17 since the last meeting. Everett E. Perkins was voted a member and three applications were received.

The busines session was followed by an entertainment in charge of a committee comprising Samuel Nield, Walter McNickle and Levi Goss. The programme included music by a five-piece orchestra, eccentric dancing by Jean Messier, a member of Taftville post No. 104; vocal solos by Samuel Nield and Euclide Pimpare; recitations by Walter McNickle and Albert J. Piche and group singing under direction of Joseph F. Gaudreau. Refreshments were served to the large gathering.

Temperature at 10 Below

Most everyone agreed that this morning was the coldest of the present winter. Thermometer readings ranged from zero to two above during the early hours. These readings were in the city. Amidon's store in Scotland reported four below, Potter Brothers' store in Windham Center, three below, and Superintendent W. N. Bowen of the pumping station at Mansfield said that a thermometer on his front porch read eight below at 7 a. m. The average reading at Storrs about 7 a. m. was two below. Odd and interesting souvenirs brought here by Mr. and Mrs. Said Haddad from Assyria, Jerusalem and Damascus, are on display in the show window of the Chocolate Shoppe on Jackson street. There are beads, stamps, cigarettes, rings and headgear in the collection. Two sets of silken cord head-bands are from the glittering attire of Arabian sheiks and there are also two pairs of wooden slippers used by the natives when they appear in their best attire.

Two of a Kind

Luck and a commendable measure of honesty seems to follow in the wake of two little pals, members of Polish families residing on Bain street. Last fall while the lads were together, Joseph Lenesky, aged 10, found a pocketbook containing over $40. He returned it to the owner, Wilfred Chartier and was justly rewarded. A few days ago Walter Kusmiercsak, aged 12, the other companion, found a valuable wrist watch which singularly enough, proved to be the property of William Chartier, brother of Wilfred. Again the pals returned the property and received the reward.

JEWETT CITY

FIREMEN'S ANNUAL BALL DUPLICATES PAST SUCCESSES

(Special to The Bulletin)

JEWETT CITY, Jan. 24.—The 32nd annual concert and ball of the A. A. Young, Jr., Hose and Ladder Co., No. 1, of Jewett City, was held this evening at Plainfield Community house. This is the third year that the fine Plainfield accommodations have been available for the firemen's annual ball. For 32 consecutive years, this leading social function has been an affair of especial local interest, always with a large list of guests who attend from outside the borough limits. Weather conditions tonight were favorable and the attendance was correspondingly large. The committee of arrangements had thought best to omit the usual grand march, and following the concert from 8 to 9, by Shepard & Swanson's orchestra, the dance program of 22 numbers began with a waltz. A new departure was the style of the program for this year's ball, in that the dance numbers were printed in the form of a booklet which, besides its liberal list of advertising patrons, contained the following text, which readily met with general favor:

When Firemen Play

This is the one night of the year that officers and members of the Jewett City Fire department, surrounded by friends, acquaintances and citizens, meet to enjoy themselves.

Our able committee has, we believe, provided for your enjoyment in a most pleasing manner. We hope that you will have a good time and that we shall see you again in 1931.

The officers, members, and the committee in charge of this affair, wish to acknowledge their thanks and express their appreciation of your attendance. Many bought tickets who are not here tonight, and they are included in this acknowledgment. The public is always generous in its response to our annual appeal to buy tickets, and we try to make them feel at home with us and to give them the best we are able, in providing for their enjoyment. If you have had a good time the Fire department is repaid for the work of arranging the festivities.

When Firemen Work

Firemen are on duty 365 days in the year and 24 hours in every day.

When an alarm rings in they leave their business if the call comes during business hours. If it is night, or in the early morning, they jump from their beds while other citizens count the strokes of the alarm and go back to sleep.

There is always danger to life and limb.

Notwithstanding the ever-present inconvenience to themselves, the possible danger, the occasional hardship, the fireman does not grumble. He performs his duty, because he likes his work and because it is a duty to his city and its citizens.

The citizens can help make the work more pleasant and less burdensome. Many calls that come in are needless ones. The frequent chimney fire is an aggravation to firemen and can easily be prevented if the property owner will see that chimneys are kept free from soot. It is not too much to ask.

Fire hazards should be removed. There is no possible excuse for their existence. A little thoughtfulness will go a long way in preventing fire loss. It is not much to ask of the citizens.

An attractive section of the program showed a halftone of the new engine, No. 1. The committees who received so many compliments for the perfection of all details for the ball included: Master of ceremonies, Chief Walter A. Field; general committee, Walter Field, Henry Ouillet, James Morey, Charles Saunders, Leslie Hyde; advertising committee, Leslie Hyde, Henry Ouillet, Walter Field; floor director, Mose Loranger.

Visitors were present from Norwich, New London, Willimantic, Wauregan, Moosup, Danielson, Baltic, Taftville, Providence and Bridgeport.

Finn's Sunday, 7 and 8:45; all-talking picture, Romance of the Rio Grande, with Warner Baxter and big cast.—adv.

DANIELSON

R. B. WITTER, WELL KNOWN AUCTIONEER, IS DEAD

(Special to The Bulletin)

DANIELSON, Jan. 24.—Riley B. Witter, 82, a native of Hampton, but practically a life-long resident of Brooklyn and one of its best known citizens, died during last night at his home there. He had been in feeble health for several years, but began to fail rapidly shortly after Thanksgiving and there had been practically no hope for his recovery for the past fortnight.

Mr. Witter was born in Hampton, July 11, 1847, a son of Nathan P. and Harriet Hawkins Witter. During his early years his father lived in Hampton and the western part of the town of Brooklyn, later moving to what has been known for more than three-quarters of a century as the Witter homestead, on the Brooklyn-Wauregan road. Mr. Witter's parents first occupied the place 77 years ago.

Having completed his education and grown to manhood, Mr. Witter engaged in business in Brooklyn. For many years he was one of the best known and capable auctioneers in eastern Connecticut, and there was constant demand for his services, his work taking him to many places in many communities. In connection with his engagements in the auction field he also was a dealer in farm implements, having sold them for half a century. During the early years of his business career Mr. Witter lived at what is now known as the Clark G. Lawton place, but about 51 years ago he purchased the property in Brooklyn Village where he has since lived and done business.

Mr. Witter, a widower, was thrice married. His first wife, who died many years ago, was Miss Belle Clapp of Hampton. His second wife, also long since dead, was Miss Rebecca Clark of Canterbury. Mr. Witter's third wife, Nannie Phillips, died about four years ago. Mr. Witter is survived by a daughter, Miss Helen, two brothers, Wolcott and George A. Witter, all of Brooklyn. J. Carl Witter and N. A. Witter, both of Danielson, and who were schooled in the auction business by Mr. Witter, are nephews.

Irritation caused by being pestered for payment of goods never ordered and never received is the lot of some Danielson people just now, and represents the recurrence of an annoying situation. This time the offending concern is operating from Fort Atkinson, Wisconsin. Apparently, at least a communication of the firm so alleges, boxes of Christmas cards were sent to a selected list of people here during December. Some of these people never received these cards, yet are being pestered, and threatened with penalties now if they do not pay at once. One threat is to make complaint about the matter to the employers of the persons written to here. Another is that a fine of 6 per cent will be added to the amount due. Further: "We positively do not pay postage, express or freight. You are required to accept shipments from your express office within three days, otherwise they charge 10 cents a day for storage. We do not accept the return of goods for credit or exchange if held over two days."

Well, the attitude of the average interested person here is to the effect that if this concern shipped postcards here without receiving orders to do so let the concern collect its money if it can, or come and get its cards if it wants them. The offended Danielson residents would like to ascertain some means, however, of making this concern financially responsible for its threat to discredit them with their employers, if they happen to be employed.

The name of the late Marinda C. Butler Robinson, for years a resident of Danielson, is among those in a list selected by the Connecticut League of Women Voters for a place on the state honor roll. The league is cooperating with the national organization in creating an endowment fund of $250,000, the interest of which is to be used in promoting the league's chief aim, that of educating women as responsible citizens. Special honor, as in the case of Mrs. Robinson, is being paid the women of the nation who pioneered for the enfranchisement of women.

Mention that Taftville men have procured 18 full grown cotton tail rabbits for release in territory near that community suggests that at no great distance from Danielson there may be quite a colony of Belgian hares during the next open hunting season. This assumption is based on the belief that a considerable number of the more than 150 that were in the rabbit yard of James Moran of East Franklin street when two dogs broke in a few weeks ago, escaped through the break in the wire where the dogs made their way in. Though many of the hares were killed, many more disappeared and never have been located. They were close to good rabbit country when, and if, they managed to get away. They should propagate rapidly. They were registered animals.

To Preach Sunday Evening

Rev. C. J. Armstrong has announced that he will preach at the Sunday evening service at the Baptist church on a topic selected following his interview yesterday morning with Prosecuting Attorney Arthur G. Bill relative to law enforcement in Danielson and that the sermon will be based on that interview. The subject will be: Must Danielson remain wet; are our officers and courts powerless? Is it possible to convict the big bootlegger? If convicted, is it possible to expect more than a small fine or a suspended sentence? What can Danielson's churches do about it?

A large indicator to show the progress of the drive for share sales of the Danielson Building and Loan association in the local home-building campaign will be put in place on the Dowe building Saturday, and from day to day the markings will show the progress of the drive, which it is hoped will be highly successful. The selling campaign opened today. Group leaders have been allotted sections of Danielson in which to make a canvass.

Brief Mention

With various sections of the town reporting 5 degrees below zero this was the coldest morning of the winter. The prospect of getting an ice crop now appears to be very good.

The corporate existence of the Westfield Textile Co., which several years ago operated the plant near the state armory, is to be dissolved. The plant has been shut down for a long time.

PUTNAM

EDWARD BURZCH THOUGHT TO HAVE GONE TO VISIT RELATIVES

(Special to The Bulletin)

PUTNAM, Jan. 24. — Forty-eight hours have elapsed since Edward Burzch, 15-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Burzch disappeared from his home on School street and no trace of him has been as yet reported to the police. Sergt. Alperie Spencey and Officer Joseph Page, assigned to the case by Captain A. J. Dubreuil, were making diligent efforts to locate the youth today. The parents of the boy were frantic tonight when no word of their son's whereabouts became available at a late hour. Descriptions and information concerning Burzch have been flashed to police of New York and Newark, N. J., and to all cities equipped with the police tel-type machines, requesting them to watch for Edward's appearance. The father said he believed the boy's financial resources were limited. Sergt. Spencey tonight advanced a theory that Edward had gone to the homes of relatives residing in New York and Newark. They are to be communicated with and urged to cooperate in the search. The possibility of the boy encountering foul play has been discarded.

Edward is a student at Putnam junior high school and reports from the school showed him to be an apt pupil, enjoying a good academic standing, which eliminated the prospect that a poor rating in school induced him to leave home.

MYSTERY STILL SHROUDS ATTACK ON POMFRET MAN

(Special to The Bulletin)

PUTNAM, Jan. 24.—Few developments have taken place in the case of the murderous attack upon George Serine of Pomfret, alleged to have taken place last Tuesday morning at an early hour, the story of which is being investigated by state police of Danielson barracks. Serine continues silent as to the identity of his assailant, who, in later reports procured by the investigating officers, engaged in a fistic encounter with him before the shot which penetrated Serine's sleeve and lodged in the wall of his home, was fired. There is much speculation as to whether Serine is covering up his assassin's identity or reasons for his sinister visit to the Serine home. State officers as yet have not unravelled the mysterious case, but it was understood today that a number of clues have been gathered from several persons involved that will eventually result in the undoing of the unknown gunman and the exposure of the real facts responsible for the murderous attack being made upon Serine.

KACEYS AGAIN WINNERS IN CARD TOURNAMENT

(Special to The Bulletin)

PUTNAM, Jan. 24.—The corps of card players representing the Cargill council, Knights of Columbus, were again victorious in the third round of the winter season tournament being played with the Israel Putnam lodge of Odd Fellows. The Casey's victory Thursday lengthened their seasonal lead over the Odd Fellows by a substantial margin.

The meeting will open promptly at eight p. m. and Mr. Putnam will speak on the subject, "Farm Management." His address will be a continuation of others that he has given at these meetings.

PEDRO IS DEAD AND SOLDIERS ARE GRIEVING

(Special to The Bulletin)

PUTNAM, Jan. 24.—Pedro, a mere sparrow, but a bird who possessed much more intelligence than the average member of his clan, is dead at his age of seven years—his keepers at the Armory garage on Harris street report. Pedro, in all probability first saw the light of day from a nest perched in the crack of a freight car reposed on the siding of the main line tracks of the New Haven division above Harris street. Soon after acquiring the art of taking to the air, it became his contention that a friendly attitude towards the human race was an easier way of obtaining a livelihood, than following the natural sparrow traits of shyness. Therefore, Pedro became intimate with the keepers and mechanics at the garage below the scene of his birth and each day he appeared at the garage and released a trio of chirps that evoked the attention of his friends who boliged with a square meal of choice bird food. The desk in the manager's office served as Pedro's dining quarters. Pedro, as he came to be known, was as punctual with his visits as the hours of the day. Every day, for seven years, he arrived at the garage door at noon and signaled his presence in order to be admitted. One day last week the usual spirit at the garage was dampened, denoting that all was not well. An inquiry brought forth the word that the winged visitor, who had performed so wonderfully for nearly a decade, had been found in a remote corner of the military building dead—apparently a victim of an unfriendly cat's sinister and sudden pounce.

The day of the large paper currency has passed, exactly as local bankers anticipated at the date of its issuance, less than a year ago. The large shipments of the smaller sized bills have almost abolished their better known cousins. Local bank officials said recently that the small money is fast supplanting the large bills.

Mercury Down To Zero

The mercury slumped to zero in the city this morning and before noon sub-zero temperatures were reported from the rural districts to have been the lowest depths to which the fluid has sunk this winter. At six o'clock the thermometer reached its lowest mark of 1 degree below in the urban areas, at nine o'clock it began to ascend until it reached a maximum of 20 degrees at three o'clock. Much damage was reported to have been caused by freezing water pipes in homes, which burst when quick efforts were made to thaw them out.

Mrs. Potter will be assisted in her efforts by a group of ladies delegated to serve on sub-committees.

Children Need Sliding Places

A decree issued in the interests of the safety and protection of the city's children went out to the police department from Mayor Charles A. Richard's office last evening, to the effect that children must not slide on public highways. Officer Harry Wallen, of the local police, was detailed by Captain Dubreuil to execute the mayor's order. Officer Wallen reported at the station last evening after accomplishing his difficult mission and jotted a terse phrase on the "blotter", "I did it, but I hated to, I was a kid once myself." It is Officer Wallen's paramount desire that the police committee of the common council will make an effort to allow children to enjoy the healthful benefits of winter sports on the city's hills under police protection.

THE RECAPTURED CONVICTS

It was gratifying news which came from Pensacola disclosing that the remaining members of the trio who escaped from the state prison at Wethersfield had been captured. Florida police appear to have done an excellent job in intercepting these convicts, desperate men who indicated not only their resourcefulness but, from the Jacksonville report, a willingness to take life.

Connecticut is going to feel easier that these men are once more behind bars. It has long been a mystery why Lalone, the worst of the three and who was involved in the killing of a state policeman in Windham county, was permitted to escape the punishment which it was believed he deserved. That he was at large with the possibility that he would manage to maintain his freedom indefinitely and continue his menace to humanity has been a sorry thought.

But while the trio has been captured there is uncertainty as to what will now be done with them. With the charge of killing a Jacksonville detective and wounding another being faced it will not be surprising if Florida insists upon dealing with them in its own manner. Florida is a state where electrocution is the penalty for murder, so that it would appear in the event of conviction that they had jumped from the frying pan into the fire in their resort to the use of firearms to insure a few days' liberty.

Connecticut is prepared to bring them back and to see that they are properly penalized for their escape and to make certain that they will be given no more opportunities to break out of the state institution at Wethersfield. That is what was to be expected in case of capture until their alleged use of firearms at Jacksonville involved them in more serious trouble, for if Florida has the evidence to convict them of murdering the detective, even Lalone with his life sentence before him must regard the outlook as decidedly more serious. When he was sentenced to life imprisonment he was given the chance to once more become a menace to human life. If the Jacksonville report is correct he has done just what he should have been prevented from doing after killing a Connecticut state policeman.

REACHING BYRD

Probably no expedition to the polar regions has been followed with greater interest or by greater numbers than has that of Admiral Byrd to the south pole. This is due in large measure to the elaborate preparations that were made and particularly to the fact that the world has been able to keep in touch with the explorer during his trip, by radio. He didn't go into the unknown to remain lost until he emerged. From the beginning his operations have been revealed as he went along, he has communicated with the outside world and in turn has been kept informed of what was going on elsewhere.

Thus when he and his party are about to depart from their camp and head for home there cannot fail to be keen interest in the endeavors which are being made to obtain needed help from staunch and powerful vessels belonging to other countries in that region. Had this situation developed a decade ago nothing could be made known about it. It would be a case of everybody to the agreement doing what he could. If the vessels sent to get the expedition encountered impossible conditions they would have to make the most of it and their plight as well as that of those on the ice would have to be met by the respective parties the best they could.

Today, being able to communicate with each other, being able to get into touch with those at home who can exert efforts and get authority for available assistance, the situation is vastly different. The aid of big steel whalers, capable of breaking the ice pack and reaching the Byrd camp has been sought and obtained. Now will come the battle with the ice and what is believed will be a successful rescue of the Byrd party from the polar camp in which the members are destined to remain unless vessels can reach them.

If there is any race in which the people of the world are more interested it isn't recalled. What the polar explorers do is always a matter of serious concern but in this instance there has been such close contact with all details of the flight to the south pole that interest will remain keen until the participants are once more back in civilization. Smashing through polar ice is a different proposition than ice breaking in our rivers, but if wishes have any influence it will be promptly and safely accomplished.

STOP, THINK, INVESTIGATE

How constantly one must keep on his guard against the swindler and fraud is well illustrated by the experience of a housewife in the city of Worcester. This woman was called to the door by a stranger who told her that her husband had won $40 in a pool and so he had brought the check. He represented to her that he was entitled to a commission of $10 and represented to her that he could not leave the check unless he received the money. Without doing any investigating to learn if her husband was playing a pool or had won a prize she paid over the $10. Later on she went to cash the check and it was found to be worthless.

How many times a day that game was played there is no way of telling except for the number of bad checks that were presented, but it is evident that one's suspicions must be ever on the alert to doubt the stranger and to question the probability of any sort of a scheme that is presented.

Every now and then the old, threadbare idea of selling a gold brick, the antiquated shell game, the every-ready worthless stock and the alluring proposition of buying a fair-sized fortune for a comparatively small sum are brought out into the open, tried and found to be profitable. They have been worked so much that it would seem that there would be no chance for further use, but people forget and new generations must have their own experiences. The result is that the crook continues to find a profitable field to work in with an occasional variation of his vehicle.

The gullibility of man has long been recognized. Do what they will, the crooks find plenty to encourage them in their work. They know how impossible it is for some to resist a glib tale of great possibilities. All that is necessary is to weave a story that will charm, tell of wonderful opportunities in such a way as to hypnotize and bear down on the fact that it is sure fire and that large riches are assured and the ways are greased for launching the flimsiest kind of a proposition. They not only fascinate but they get away with it because there are so many poor fish who swallow the bait, hook, sinker, line and all. Humanity seems unwilling to stop, think and investigate.

CONNECTICUT AGRICULTURE

Commissioner Buckingham of the state department of agriculture notes various improvements in agricultural conditions in Connecticut in his annual report and directs attention to opportunities which exist for betterment.

When he points out that transportation facilities have created a competition from ever-increasing distances that is forcing Connecticut growers of agricultural products to give more serious consideration to uniformity in grade and pack, standardization as to quality and availability to meet quantity demands, he indicates that the farmers of this state are giving real thought to the solution of the important problem of marketing, something long needed in order to keep the home market.

In connection with his reference to the sheep and swine of this state, he rightly declares that Connecticut cannot regard sheep farming as a once-crop business, but he believes, nevertheless, that the present number of sheep can be doubled with advantage and profit. It is a marked contrast today with the few thousand sheep to the days when there were more than 180,000. That number may never be reached again but there is an opportunity for getting much nearer to it than we are. The dogs are given as one of the reasons for fewer sheep but that doesn't hold in regard to swine, which are inclined to drop in number and value. The poultry business, however, is moving in the right direction.

It is quite evident that farming in Connecticut isn't what it used to be. It is encountering handicaps and changes quite the same as other lines of activity and it isn't keeping its end up. Thus we deplore the lack of native pork, native lamb, native wool and such products. We also encounter the lack of native lumber because of the failure to grow trees where other things cannot be produced.

CLEANING NEW YORK

In connection with plans for the cleaning up of New York city, a physical cleaning that will make it an example of attractiveness, the sanitation commissioner thinks he can do a pretty good job for $35,000,000. Of course, New York is a big city and there is a big job ahead of it if the cleaning is to be thorough but $35,000,000 seems like a lot of money for the purpose of removing a lot of dirt and filth which disfigure its streets.

Evidently the commissioner believes that there is no use trying to prevent this dirty condition until the community has been shown what spotlessness seems like. Then it may be able to devote some of its efforts to keeping the streets from getting dirty.

It cannot be overlooked by every community that the great reason for unsightly streets lies in the fact that too little attention is paid by the people who use them in preventing that condition. Dirty and filthy streets in New York could, in all probability, be dealt with by the regular force of street cleaners if there was the proper amount of cooperation given by the people of New York. Just as long as the street is used as the garbage and refuse can unsightly conditions will prevail and additional outlays will be required to eliminate them. With the people doing their part and refraining from littering up the streets with discarded material running all the way from tin boxes to abandoned autos, New York will take on a different appearance.

It might, however, require more than the $35,000,000 sought for clean-up work to educate the New Yorkers to a recognition of their duty in making and keeping the metropolis an example of cleanliness and beauty.

EDITORIAL NOTES

Some people seem to think they can drive on snowy streets quite the same as in mid-summer.

The present is not the only time when Commander Byrd has occupied an unenviable position.

The man on the corner says: Can overcrowded prisons be attributed to bargain counter psychology?

If it is proved that the Black Duck's rum-running activities were financed in Boston, it will explain the demonstration in that city after the vessel was captured.

THE MAN WHO TALKS

It has long been recognized that some aggravation [illegible] forms of nervous disorders, but recent scientific investigations have gone a step farther and proved that they are largely responsible for these disorders. The whole nervous system is a great mystery to the mind and the [illegible] of mortals, but it has been proven beyond a doubt that life would be devoid of what is richest and highest were it not for nervous sensibility. Human nature is responsive to music, art, literature, and to the wonderful beauties of nature because we are endowed with nervous sensibility. Without this keen sensibility we would be in some small measure responsive to these things, but would sit quietly by without these thrills, peacefully chewing the cud like cows which are not burdened with nerves.

Noise, however, can be carried to such an extent as to make life an intolerable burden, and hence the growing attempt in our large cities to reduce it to a minimum. There can be no question but what harsh, crashing noises from morn 'till evening in our big cities—or elsewhere for that matter—are making sensitive people neurotic. While it is agreed that heavy business can be done in comparative stillness, yet much of the noise today that we are called upon to endure can be subdued, if not entirely eliminated. Street traffic, water transportation, with its screeching sirens, ear-splitting whistles, trolley cars, elevated lines, subways, while they must be more or less noisy, yet science has shown that it can be greatly subdued. The greatest discovery along this line is the furnishing of rooms in such a way and of such material that noise will be to some important extent subdued. In an empty room loud noises are stunning but with right upholstering it can be greatly subdued.

The daily press and the magazines are again bringing to our notice a recurrence of starving conditions in China. In all probability, as in previous instances, America will face the horrible situation with her usual kindliness of spirit and generosity. And yet is it not about time that America should insist that China herself should put forth greater effort to remove, as far as possible, the causes of these starving conditions? The greatest enemy that China has to day, or has ever had, is almost incessant warfare, and most of it among her own provinces. For years they have had their factional strife. Nothing will use up a nation's resources so quickly as fighting. It is time that the civilized world sent its ultimatum to China, saying: "Stop fighting, settle your differences peacefully, and then we will help you to reconstruct."

When shortly since the news was flashed over the world that Clemenceau had gone, for a moment the nations stood still as a mental token of honor to "the grand old hero of the Marne." Clemenceau cannot be compared with any other personality produced in this age and generation. He seems to have been a precious relic handed down from some previous age. He was simply sui generis. The word "Tiger" seems to have fitted him as well as any other. He was absolutely devoid of fear. Bullets meant no more to him than paper wads. He would sometimes swear in the presence of potentates and shake his fist in their faces—and get away with it, so great was the force of his personality. But sometimes his tears would fall upon the face of some dying French soldier who was writhing in pain. For the place he was called to fill during the World war no other man—living or dead—could have done it as well.

On the back cover of a recent magazine that is reputed to have an enormous circulation is the picture of a comparatively young man whose face casts a big black shadow of his predicted likeness some fifteen or twenty years later. The outline is the face of one grown so obese as to be unnatural. The idea is to advertise a certain brand of cigarette which if used will prevent such monstrosity. Now the writer is not well enough acquainted with qualities of cigarettes to dogmatize in the matter. But there is no question that over eating and injudicious eating will produce such results. One thing is generally known as a good preventative of over weight and that is vigorous exercise in the fresh air, especially for those whose work is more largely mental than physical. Dr. Talmage said years ago that "more people dug their graves with knives and forks than with anything else."

It was a man who lived in the long ago—a man who was reputed to be wise above all others—who said, "there is nothing new under the sun." When one thinks of the evidently new things to-day it may not be presumption to call that statement unfounded, or at least as not applicable to the marvellous age in which we live. Probably Solomon would revise that statement were he living today. There is no evidence that automobiles went racing up and down Jerusalem, (if so what a high old time Solomon's three hundred concubines must have had!). Other self-moving machines are evidently the the product of later days. How about wireless, telephones, telegraph, radios, and airships. Solomon, no doubt was wise but he didn't know it all. Certainly along the line of disease and their curatives this is assuredly "a new heaven and a new earth" compared with what the age of Solomon had.

In line with the above let us look a little farther into the matter of disease. It is the testimony of science that some diseases once in vogue have now disappeared, while others have come that were once unknown. They now tell us of a new disease called psittibosis, a disease that is said to come from parrots. They used to say that disease came as a punishment for sin. There is no question but that some diseases do come from sin, but it is to much for us to say that all diseases do. It may be true in the case of parrots. Possibly this new disease is to remind parrots of the bad use they frequently make of their tongues; a sort of danger signal as to the choice of language they sometimes use in polite society. But it is too bad if parrots are made to bear the whole brunt of the battle.

About once in so often we have to hear that old "gag" brought from the archives about the church "going to the dogs," sometimes it is the fundamentalist who gets in his whack saying that secular parties and dancing and the various forms of social life indicate a very low ebb of spirituality and that the church is headed straight for destruction. At other times the modernist complains that we are still shackled with dead forms and dogmas that prevent advancement. Not long ago a statement was published to the effect that certain minister preached a sermon that fitted the age of Jonathan Edwards rather than our own. And thus you have it mostly from those who have no direct connection with any church. But as I read annual reports of the manifold activities in which most of our churches are engaged I cannot avoid the impression that some of them at least will live awhile. We can still sing: "Like a mighty army moves the church of God!"

NAMES OF NORWICH MEN AND PLACES ONCE BORNE BY NEW LONDON NORTHERN ENGINES

In the early days of railroading both lines that passed through Norwich named their locomotives after notable persons and places connected with their affairs. The names of the Norwich and Worcester tractive units have already been listed here. Those persons and place names which individualized the locomotives on the other local steam road are given in the subjoined table. This other road was chartered in 1847 as the New London, Willimantic and Palmer, was reorganized in 1859 as the New London Northern, and under that name was leased in 1871 to the Central Vermont, which still operates it.

Names and Builders

In the table below, the first column gives the number of the engine; the second, the individual name which it bore; the third indicates the name of the builder, or the place where the engine was built; and the fourth, the year (in the 1800's) when it was acquired. In the third column, the word "Hinckley" stands for the partnership of Hinckley & Drury of Boston, a firm famous in those days, that also built many of the Norwich & Worcester engines. It will be seen that there are duplications of the first four numbers, as well as of Nos. 9 and 12. Very likely the duplications signify replacements.

Eng. No.	Name	Blt. At.	Acq.
1	New London	Taunton	49
1	W. H. Barnes	Hinckley	79
2	Stafford	Taunton	49

5	Monson	Hinckley	51
6	Thames	Manchester	59
7	Montague	Manchester	65
8	Canada	Manchester	68
9	Ware	Southern	64

23	Yantic	Rhode Island	82
24	Naumkeag	Baldwin	73
25	Stafford	St. Albans	87
26	Amherst	St. Albans	87

The list shows two Staffords, two Palmers, three Amhersts and two Willimantics. The first Stafford was wrecked by a boiler explosion at New London, 1878, after 29 years of service. The first Willimantic, built in 1849, was rechristened the T. W. Williams in 1872, probably because the original T. W. Williams was then out of the New London Northern service. Both the first Willimantic and the first T. W. Williams were built at Taunton in 1849 and both bore the number three.

The name of the Canada (No 8) was changed to the Block Island in 1876. The Ware, the No. 11 Amherst and the first No. 12 Palmer were bought at second hand in 1864.

The Konomoc was a switcher; the second No. 12 Palmer, the Yantic and the No. 25 Stafford were moguls. Mogul is the railroad man's name for a type of locomotive used in either passenger or freight traffic which has two pilot-truck wheels and six driving wheels. This type was a favorite in the 1880's when they were added to the N. L. N.'s equipment. In size and power they would compare quite favorably with the locomotives of the present day.

On the other hand, the earliest power units on the road, such as the No. 1 New London, the No. 2, first Stafford, the No. 3, first Willimantic, were almost incredibly small. Some idea of their diminutive size may be obtained from the following description of another, and presumably bigger, engine that was published in the Norwich Courier for Aug. 5, 1845:

Magnificent Locomotive

"We were invited yesterday to take a look at the finest locomotive engine we ever did see. It was an engine that had just arrived from the manufactory of Hinckley and Drury of Boston and was on its way to Greenport to take its place on the Long Island road. It is certainly a splendid machine and as we learn from Mr. Drury himself, it is the largest one ever built in this country for passenger trains. Its weight in running trim is seventeen tons. It has 4 driving wheels of little more than 6 feet in diameter and the boiler cylinder is 40 inches in diameter; number of tubes, 121; diameter, 1 3-4 inches and 10 ft.-8 inches in length; cylinders, 14 inches with 21 inch stroke. Cost of engine was $7,800.

"Mr. Drury calculates that with an ordinary train it will easily run 40 miles and hour and if, put upon its metal, 60 miles. It is named The Boston. It is now at this present writing shipped on board the Daniel Webster, a fitting berth for the strong shoulders of "Black Dan." It is not the first time that one has been aloft by the other. The freight from this port to Greenport is $100."

By way of contrast, the dimensions of the largest freight locomotive in New England, one of the 10 engines in the 700-class used on the present Central Vermont for fast manifest trains are: Weight, 341.25 tons; length, 95 feet; number of driving wheels, 10, with 2 engine truck wheels, 4-wheel auxiliary truck under firebox and 2 pair of 6-wheel trucks under tender; capacity of tender, 20 tons of coal, 18,500 gallons of water; boiler pressure, 250 pounds; tractive effort, 88,000 pounds; evaporated surface of fire-box, 4,460 feet; super heater; feed-water heater system; power grate shakers; automatic shaker.

The present Central Vermont giant may not be able to compete with the old Boston's calculated speed of 40 to 60 miles per hour, but it can take 2,000 tons over the Roxbury mountain, and to say the least that is considerably better than Mr. Drury's wood-burner could do in the way of tractive effort.

A Washington Bystander

By KIRKE L. SIMPSON
Associated Press Staff Writer

WASHINGTON, Jan. 24—Among many public life veterans of Washington there stands one whom age has little withered nor custom staled.

He is Justice Oliver Wendell Holmes. And despite the long road of life he has traveled in his almost four-score and ten years, the jurist assumed the duties of chief justice on the temporary retirement of Chief Justice Taft to regain his health with that calm dignity of poise to which time and his own philosophy have schooled him.

Justice Holmes is the oldest man ever to have sat upon the federal bench, the Bystander has been told. And as the years have gathered to bend his shoulders a little and touch with snow his unbowed head, there has been no slackening in his attentive devotion to his duties.

Yet with all his seniority and his high place on the bench, there is another federal judge, still as active as ever, who had been 10 years presiding over a district court when President Roosevelt called Justice Holmes to Washington in 1902.

Another Veteran

This senior of seniors of all federal judges in point of service is Circuit Judge Joseph Buffington of Pittsburgh. He has been 38 years on the federal bench.

"This is not only the longest period of judicial service of any federal judge now living, but also the longest period of any federal judge, living or dead," Representative Beck of Pennsylvania said to the house.

"John Marshall served for 34 years. There may have been a few judges who served longer than Marshall, but the longest period of service on the federal bench in the annals of the republic unquestionably is that of Joseph Buffington."

What inspired Beck's tribute, and it was a glowing one, was the share Judge Buffington had in honoring the memory of Marshall at the dedication of the Marshall statue in Philadelphia.

As a former solicitor general of the United States, Mr. Beck knows his legal history. And he sought and obtained permission to place Judge Buffington's address on that occasion in the Congressional Record.

"Webster once said that the three attributes of a great oration were the man, the subject and the occasion," Beck said.

The Elements

"Well, this occasion was itself eloquent. The subject, John Marshall was of such eloquence that one might say, as Lincoln said of Washington, that one need only name him and in its naked, deathless splendor leave the great name of Marshall to shine on.

"And in this case there was the man, Joseph Buffington. In his incorruptible integrity and fine, unwavering devotion to his great office, Joseph Buffington is a [illegible] of the breed of John Marshall. What more could be, or need be, said.

"When Beck wound up his tribute to Judge Buffington by saying that he voiced 'the prayer of Horace that he may get late to heaven,'" the house applauded.

YOUR HEALTH

Don't Give the Baby Tuberculosis!

By J. J. Goldstein, M. D.,
New York
(From Gorgas Memorial Institute)

We all carry germs of many diseases, but do not succumb to them because our general health has built up an immunity. A baby does not have this immunity. It therefore follows that as tuberculosis infection is universal, it begins in very early infancy. Mother's milk, the most ideal food for babies, may contain the poisons of infection, if we allow a mother who has the germ in her sputum to nurse her baby and to kiss her infant on the lips, as mothers have done from time immemorial. That more infants do not die from this communicable disease acquired directly from the mother by contact of inhalation, or by promiscuous kissing by fond relatives, is attributed by some authorities to immunity products or antitoxins developed in this stricken mother's blood and indirectly in her milk.

Yet a far more common source of tuberculosis infection is without doubt the present almost universal diet of our dearly prized babies—cows' milk.

Milk from a healthy mother, or wet nurse, is of course the ideal food for a healthy, and surely for a sick infant, just as milk from a healthy cow is the ideal food for a calf. But there are mothers who have medically legitimate alibies for not nursing their infants, i.e., malnutrition, anemia, tuberculosis, or inherited mental or physical taints, and cows' milk, in one form or another, must therefore be resorted to for their infants. This milk, however, is an excellent medium for germ growth, and once germs are in the milk they multiply pretty rapidly, much faster than any living thing I know of, and they also produce poisonous products which pasteurization does not remove. Heating the milk to 140 degrees Fahrenheit is a great help and should be practiced everywhere, if there is any doubt as to sanitation in production.

The most dangerous germs to humans that can grow in milk are tubercle and typhoid bacilli, and the germ causing septic sore throat, or streptococcus. The tubercle bacillus and the poisons it produces usually come from within the cow before human hands can contaminate the milk.

It is therefore of utmost importance that milk must be obtained only from cows tuberculin tested under the most rigidly sanitary conditions and transported while being constantly iced from the source of supply to the refrigerator of the consumer. Milk must NOT be left on doorsteps or dumbwaiters, or it will acquire germ growth and the poisons germs produce.

Proper care will ensure the millions of babies consuming this vital fluid a healthy thriving future.

Sunday Morning Talk

Indifference.

Is not indifference one of the great drawbacks today with the better class of people? We do not see that indifference with those who are not doing right or working against the right. How diligent are all those who are working against the right, no effort or sacrifice is too great.

Why should not those who have given their hearts to the Saviour show even greater diligence in the cause of right. How can a true follower of the Master sit idly by and see those about them unsaved and without hope for the next life? What a serious thing it is, how heartless and selfish, to rest back feeling that they are safe but absolutely indifferent of the welfare of those about them. What would we think of a person who was passing the home of a friend in the evening, glancing in the window as he passed along he could see the family gathered, all happy and enjoying the evening; but as he reached the other end of the house he saw it all ablaze, the flames rapidly spreading toward the end of the house where the family were gathered, not realizing their great danger. What would we think of this friend and neighbor if he passed on without warning them of the great danger. Words would fail to express our contempt for such a person.

But how much more serious is the indifference for the eternal. Should it not be our greatest privilege to tell others of what our Saviour has done for us and which He has meant to us? May we awake from this terrible indifference before it is forever too late. May none be guilty of this heartless indifference.

BURGESS BEDTIME STORY

Chatterer Becomes Worried

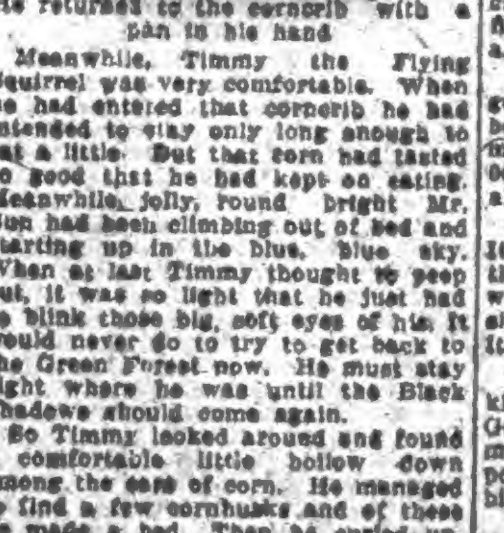
A worried person you will find,
Most often is of selfish mind.
—Old Mother Nature.

Jolly, round, bright Mr. Sun had begun his daily climb up in the blue, blue sky. It was broad daylight. Soon Farmer Brown's Boy would be coming out to get the corn for the hens and to do his daily work. Chatterer the Red Squirrel sat up in the tall tree near the cornerib and grew more and more anxious and nervous and fidgety. Timmy the Flying Squirrel had left him when it was still barely light. He had sailed down onto the roof of the cornerib and then had disappeared inside. Chatterer had expected him to reappear in a few minutes, for he knew that Timmy does not like the daylight. But Timmy had not reappeared.

"It must be something has happened to him," said Chatterer over and over to himself. "Perhaps he got caught in a trap in there. I forgot to tell him that Farmer Brown's Boy had set some traps for mice. Yes, sir, that must be just what has happened. He would have been up before this. He knows it is quite a long way back to the Green Forest and he wouldn't want to make that journey in daylight. He certainly must have been caught in a trap."

By and by Chatterer heard the door of the farmhouse open. Farmer Brown's Boy came out and went over to the barn. He returned to the cornerib with a pan in his hand. He opened the door of the cornerib and went inside. Chatterer could hear him whistling in there. How he did long to climb down that tree and scamper up those steps and look inside. Presently Farmer Brown's Boy came out of the cornerib. Chatterer fully expected to see him carrying Timmy, caught in a trap. But Farmer Brown's Boy didn't have any trap. Neither did he have Timmy. The only thing he carried was a pan of corn and with this he went straight over to the henyard.

"Perhaps he didn't look at the traps," thought Chatterer. "Perhaps Timmy dragged one of the traps out of sight. If he didn't get caught, where is he? He couldn't have left that cornerib and I not know it. No, sir, he couldn't have done it. Something has happened to him. I guess I won't be able to get any more corn after all." I suspect that Chatterer was worrying more about that than he was about Timmy.



He returned to the cornerib with a pan in his hand

Meanwhile, Timmy the Flying Squirrel was very comfortable. When he had entered that cornerib he had intended to stay only long enough to eat a little. But that corn had tasted so good that he had kept on eating. Meanwhile, jolly, round, bright Mr. Sun had been climbing out of bed and starting up in the blue, blue sky. When at last Timmy thought to peep out, it was so light that he just had to blink those big, soft eyes of his. It would never do to try to get back to the Green Forest now. He must stay right where he was until the Black Shadows should come again.

So Timmy looked around and found a comfortable little hollow down among the ears of corn. He managed to find a few cornhusks and of these he made a bed. Then he curled up, wrapped his tail around him and went to sleep. He was wakened by Farmer Brown's Boy and a very frightened Squirrel he was. But he wisely kept perfectly still, so, of course, Farmer Brown's Boy knew nothing about him. After Farmer Brown's Boy had departed Timmy curled up again and soon was sound asleep. He didn't give a thought to Chatterer. It didn't enter his head that Chatterer might be worrying about him.

POETRY

New England

New England! New England!
Thou star of the East,
That gilds the bright halls
Which encircle the West.
Thy sons and thy daughters
Though far they may roam,
Still trace in thy brightness
The magic word, home.

From out thy rude borders
Have spread far and wide
Thine own sturdy sons,
Once thy joy and thy pride,
To fell the thick forests,
To plough the rough plain,
Or gather bright laurels
Of glory and fame.

We love thy thick forests,
Thy tall ancient trees,
That bend to the tempests
Or sport in the breeze!
The surf-beaten rocks
Where our forefathers stood
And poured forth their souls
In thanksgiving to God.

In grandeur they rise:
The hills of New England,
Her proud, lofty mountains
That tower to the skies;
Each river and streamlet,
Vale, woodland and glade
Returns to fond mem'ry,
As oft we have strayed.

The homes of New England!
Ah! talk not of fame,
But give me a cot in
New England again,
With bright smiling faces
That greeted me there,
And welcomed me home to
The "old armchair."

—By Henry F. Wight.

By Candlelight

When gone is the golden daylight
There whispers a Voice to me,
"He has come from that awful plain of death,
He has come to thy garden's scented breath,
And, dear heart, to thee!"

And then, as I look down the pathway,
And the night grows gloomy and cold,
When my dream is o'er and the Voice is dumb,
I cry to God, "Will he come, will he come,
As he did of old?"

But when my candle is lighted,
And I toil up the darkened stair,
Where he met me with laughter in his eyes,
The Voice is wakened again, and it sighs,
"Lo! his shadow — there!"

SCOUTS' FAREWELL PARTY FOR WALLACE WAGNER

There was a surprise feature in the program of the meeting of Troop 2 Boy Scouts connected with the Methodist Episcopal church Friday night. The surprise was a farewell party for Patrol Leader Wallace Wagner who is to leave today (Saturday) to attend Mt. Hermon school, Northfield. Scout Wagner was one of the boys who helped organize the troop and had the honor of winning the first gold medal given in the efficiency contest. The meeting began in the Scout headquarters and was in charge of the scoutmaster, Rev. George Warren Potter. The troop was inspected by Assistant Scoutmaster Ralph Smith.

One hundred per cent pins were awarded the following Scouts for one or two months' service, Senior Patrol Leader Donald Olsen; Patrol Leaders Arthur Bennett, Clayton Rose, and Wallace Wagner; Assistant P. L. Earl Robinson, Albert Eyberse and Leon Ladd; Scribe Edward Eccleston, Bugler Edward Jordan and Scouts Fredrick Ross, John Laskowski, Edward Gallagher, Robert Beeman, and George Hardenbrook. Following the inspection the scoutmaster invited the troop to the parsonage for games. The party was arranged by P. L. Arthur Bennett, who during the course of the evening presented Scout Wagner a Boy Scout first aid kit in behalf of the troop. Scout Wagner thanked the troop and expressed his desire to remain an associate member. Scoutmaster Potter and Asst. S. M. Smith also made brief addresses. Then a lunch of sandwiches, cake and hot chocolate was served by Miss Alice Brown.

Deputy Scout Commissioner Wm. Wyman paid a surprise visit during the meeting and presented a 100 per cent year pin to Donald Olsen and Arthur Bennett, also a second-class Scout badge to Donald Waterman.

TWO UNDER ARREST FOR SERIES OF ROBBERIES AT BOZRAH STORE

Elmer Gallup, 25, of Bozrah, and Stanley W. Martin, 23, of Uncasville, were arrested Friday afternoon at Bozrah for a series of robberies alleged to have been committed at a small grocery store, conducted by I. Botnick at Bozrahville. The store, which is located on the Norwich-Colchester highway about midway between the two places, has been broken into periodically by the two men, it is alleged, and small quantities of groceries appropriated.

The accused are understood to have been caught at a house where they were staying near the Botnick home in Bozrahville. They were taken into custody by State Police Officer Murphy of the Groton barracks and Constable Daniel Marra of Fitchville. It is said that a part of the stolen property was recovered by the officers, who found it hidden away in outbuildings where the accused were living.

The stolen articles, in two bags, are now in possession of police officials. One bag was uncovered in a chicken house and the other was found in another outbuilding. The loot consisted of all kinds of groceries and other articles, but, according to the owner, no money was taken. Mr. Botnick places his loss on all breaks in the neighborhood of $300. His store has been broken into at various times during the winter, but only a small quantity of articles was taken each time. The most recent break occurred Tuesday evening, last when the largest haul was made.

Entrance to the building was made through a door by removing the lock.

The two men were brought to local police headquarters Friday evening, where they were locked up for the night. They are to be tried in justice court in Bozrahville on the charge of breaking and entering.

MAKING NOTABLE EXHIBIT OF PEASANT NEEDLEWORK

Members of the Women's City club were at Converse Art gallery Friday afternoon and evening for the exhibition of peasant needlework, arranged through the art committee of the club in co-operation with the art gallery. On Sunday afternoon from 3 to 5 and through the week daily up to 5 o'clock the exhibition will be open to the public without charge.

This offers a most unusual exhibit of beautiful embroidery, of which the big pieces are loaned from the guilds of foreign workers in New York city, showing the wonderful needlework of Italian, Dalmatian, Polish, Sardinian, Belgian and Turkish women. The big gallery is impressive in a decorative effect obtained by hand-wrought draperies so large that nine furnish the gallery, with bits of color in between, accentuated by an exhibition of pottery loaned by Carbone of Boston. The study rooms and the cases there are made interesting with pieces from private collections.

Some of the distinctive pieces to be noted are a lovely tufted coverlet, a copy from Florence, owned by the Sforza family in the 16th century; an English crewel curtain which is a mate to one done for Vassar college by the Italian women of New York and showing the India influence in the tree of life design; a Polish spread dated 1841-1842, which is one of the rare bits of the exhibition; a Tunis drapery in silk on linen loaned by C. D. White, and a chair seat in needlework on canvas with the coat of arms of Norwich, England, which was brought here many years ago and presented to Peck library.

Spanish blackwork, a bridal veil from the Sudan, Russian samovar towel, samplers by Dutch, English, Italian, Morocco and German girls, a white-work quilt from the Kentucky mountains, contribute in an important way to the value and interest of the exhibit. In one of the study rooms are arranged a number of recent acquisitions to the art gallery and in one of the cases is an exquisite display of baby clothes.

"THE LUCKIES" MET AT SHUNOC MEMBER'S HOME

"The Luckies," 4-H girls sewing club of North Stonington, met this week with Ruth Crider of Shunoc with every member present. One feature of the evening was a very interesting account of a trip to Storrs by Alvi Bergitha. This trip was taken with other New London county girls and boys for the purpose of broadcasting one of the weekly 4-H club radio programs. The business meeting was followed by a pajama parade in which the girls modeled pajamas just completed by themselves. After the parade refreshments were served. The next meeting will be held February 1st at the home of Marie [illegible].

NEW LONDON SLEUTHS WATCHING OUT FOR GUNWOMAN AS WELL AS GUNMAN

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Jan. 24.—The New London police tonight were requested by the police of Norwalk to be on the lookout for a pair of holdups, this time not two men, for one of the obtainers of easy money was a girl, who performed the role of gunman. Charles Anderson, of 34 Eastern avenue, West Hartford, was relieved of his roll of $62. Anderson has been employed until recently in New York and this week he decided to go to the residence of his sister, Mrs. Louise Alexander, West Hartford. In order to save carfare, Anderson started to hitch-hike to West Hartford. In South Norwalk a fellow and a girl offered Anderson a ride and he readily accepted. The car, which was a maroon colored sedan had traveled but a short distance when it was stopped and Anderson was held up. The girl placed a revolver at his back while the man rifled the pockets of the hitch-hiker. He was left in the highway and the auto, which carried Massachusetts registration, disappeared in an easterly direction. The girl is described of fair complexion, is about five feet five inches in height, weighs about 120 pounds, wore a gray raccoon coat and gray goloshes. The man is about 35 or 40, has a scar on his face, wore a brown, soft hat and light gray overcoat.

JAMES MORRISON PRAISED FOR FAITHFUL SERVICE

In the death last night of James Morrison, of 77 Brainard street, a veteran railway postal clerk ended a long and faithful career, both as a public servant and a citizen. During his long service as a handler of the mails, both on the railroad and at the transfer room at the Union state, Mr. Morrison ranked high in the service, was capable, conscientious and faithful to his work. As a citizen, Mr. Morrison was of high character that gained for him many friends in his wide acquaintanceship. He was born in Greeneville, Dec. 9, 1855, but had resided in New London since he was a comparatively young man.

A RAID AT BISCONTI'S RESULTS IN BOOZE SEIZURE

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Jan. 24.—The police this afternoon continued their raids upon drinking places which are rendez-vous for the United States Coast Guard. A raiding squad visited the home of Angelo Bisconti, 658 Bank street, and seized a quantity of liquor and wine. Bisconti, who was arrested, furnished a surety on his bond of $1000 and will be given a hearing in the police court tomorrow. Following three raids yesterday, the police became possessed of information that Bisconti, who has the reputation of dispensing strong drink, was continuing this form of violation of the law. Judge Daniel M. Cronin issued a search warrant and the raiding squad, Detective Sergeant John Cavanaugh, Sergeant Samuel Hick, and Automobile Patrol Officers George Cockell and Clarence Martin and Patrolman Arthur Feeley went to the house. Gaining entrance the officers made a thorough search of the rooms and were rewarded by finding a gallon jug of whiskey, a jug containing three-quarters of a gallon of whiskey, five pints of whiskey, bottle containing one and one-half pints of whiskey and a quart of wine. The liquor was seized as evidence against Bisconti, who will be presented in court on two counts.

Below-zero Temperature

At 5 o'clock this morning thermometers registered 6 above on State street. In other sections of the city and on the outskirts, strangely enough, the mercury registered higher, especially at Ocean beach where two thermometers showed a temperature of 12 above. At the Golden Spur a registration of 9 was noted and on the Hamburg road a great variance of temperature existed, for a thermometer there registered six below.

Another youthful coaster was injured this afternoon. Carl Reed, 9, was coasting on School street and at the corner of Pequot avenue his sled collided with an automobile driven by Dr. Julan G. Ely, 41 Huntington street. The physician examined the boy and found that he had sustained only minor bruises.

KNOCKED DOWN BY CAR, BUT WAS UNINJURED

An automobile driven by Samuel Katz, 47 John street, struck an unidentified man this evening on State street. The man would not reveal his identity for he said that he was uninjured. He is a resident of the Harris building apartments, State street, and was accompanied there by Katz. The pedestrian was crossing the street at the corner of Green street and walked against the left front fender of the auto, being knocked down.

Patrolman Frank Linehan was at Fort Wright, Fishers Island, today, being a witness in a court martial of a soldier recently apprehended in New London.

An automobile truck driven by Allen W. Jones, 22 Willetts avenue, struck an unidentified youth on Main street, near Masonic street, this afternoon. Although the boy was knocked down he evidently escaped injury for after regaining his feet he ran away before Jones could inquire his name and address.

Mrs. Henry Mitchell, of Willetts and Fairview avenues; Mrs. Warren Hewlitt and infant son, Waterford and Mrs. Frank Meyers and infant son, 12 1-2 Tilley street, patients at Lawrence-Memorial hospital, were discharged today.

The estate of Bryan F. Mahan, Alton T. Miner, administrator and Theodore Bodenwein have sold their respective undivided one-half interest in a building lot on Park avenue to Henry Appleton.

OBITUARY

Michael Joy

Michael Joy, about 73, died last night at Lawrence-Memorial hospital, where he had been a patient but a few days suffering from a fractured skull. He is survived by several children. Mr. Joy, who was born in Ireland, had resided in New London the greater part of his life and for many years was employed by the F. H. & A. H. Chappell Coal company. Mr. Joy was admitted to Hillside home about a fortnight ago and earlier in the week he slipped and fell on the stairs. In landing his head struck one of the steps, causing the fracture. He was given first aid treatment and then taken to the hospital.

Infant's Death

Pelligrino Pepe, aged one year, son of Mr. and Mrs. Marino Pepe, 44 Prest street, died this morning at the residence of the parents.

Leroi C. Potter

Leroi C. Potter, 56, a pharmaceutical clerk, died early today at his residence, 52 Thames street, after an illness of many months. He is survived by his wife. Mr. Potter, who was born in New Britain, the son of Frederick and Mary Potter, had been employed at the pharmacies of [illegible] Brothers and Nichols & Harris. He was a member of several Masonic fraternities.

An automobile driven by John Enos, Jr., of 272 Bayonet street, struck Berneil Gumbs, 9, of 21 Walbach street, this forenoon on Howard street. The youth was taken to the office of a physician where it was found that he had sustained only minor injuries.

Meriden Runaway Arrested

George Lippold, 17, of Broad street, Meriden, was arrested at the union station last night by Sergeant John McGrath, New Haven railroad special agent, as the youth had been loitering there for a long time. It developed that the boy had run away from home about a year ago and since then had been roaming about the country. The Meriden police were informed of the boy's arrest and his father was communicated with. The parent will come to New London and take charge of the erring youth.

Mrs. F. L. Hobron, 81 Blackhall street, reported to the police this forenoon that her automobile, a Star coupe, which she had parked in front of her home last night, had been stolen. Two hours after the report was received at police headquarters, Patrolman John Sullivan found the car abandoned but a short distance from where it had been taken. It is presumed that the auto was taken for a joy-ride by youths, who left it where it was recovered.

CASES OF FREDERICK AND BARKEEP CONTINUED

Victor Frederick, 33 Walbach street; Eugene Giannetti and John Bartolucci, employed by the former, were in the police court today charged with violation of the liquor law. The cases of Frederick and Bartolucci were continued until the 9th inst., and the charge against Gianetti was nolled. Frederick, Giannetti and Bartolucci were arrested yesterday afternoon by a raiding squad, who went to the Walbach street house after information had been received that much liquor was being dispensed there. The officers found and seized a large quantity of home-brew beer, whiskey, wine, alcohol and equipment for the business being carried on there.

WET GOODS DISCOVERED IN KITCHEN BARROOMS

Nazzarino Pongetti, 96 Smith street and Frank Pozzello, 73 Woodbridge street, were also charged with violation of the liquor law. Pongetti was fined $200 and costs on each of two counts, while the case of Pozzello was continued until Wednesday next. The latter furnished a surety on his bond of $1,000. The police obtained information yesterday that the residences of Pongetti and Pozzello were visited frequently by users of strong drink. Last night a raiding squad, Sergeant Samuel Hick, Automobile Patrol Officer Elwood Bailey and Patrolmen Frank Linehan, Dennis Murphy and Louis Pine, went to the residences and obtaining entrance, seized a quantity of liquor and beer in each house.

USED MATE'S LICENSE— HENDRICK PENALIZED $25

Arnold Hendrick and Carlton Christopher, both U. S. Coast Guard sailors, were charged with violation of the state motor vehicle laws, the former with reckless driving and the latter for loaning his driver's license. Hendrick was fined $25 and costs and the charge against Christopher was nolled. Hendrick was arrested yesterday afternoon by State Police Officer John Smith. The coast guardsman was driving in a manner that threatened the safety of other autoists and when stopped by the officer it was revealed that Hendrick did not possess a driver's license, but was using the credentials of Christopher in order to drive.

Court and Manager Lenient

David Luby, 97 Green street, employed as a dishwasher at the Hotel Mohican, was charged with shoplifting. Because of Luby's advanced age and his financial stress, the court extended leniency to him. He was sentenced to 30 days in jail, but execution of the sentence was suspended. Luby went to a Kresge chain store yesterday afternoon, taking merchandise from the various counters and thrusting the stolen goods into his pocket. The articles taken comprised such as could be used by the shoplifter or could easily be converted into cash. When the attention of the store manager was called to Luby's act he maintained watch of the man's movements and when Luby stole another article he was held, while the police were notified. Patrolman Dennis Murphy arrested Luby. The manager said that many articles had been stolen from the counters recently, but it is not known whether Luby was the sole perpetrator of the thefts.

HIKER AMOS O'TOOLE WRITES OF WINNING BET

Hiker Amos O'Toole, of California walked to Lowell, Mass., on a bet of $400 against a electric radio set, to do it in 40 days. Hiker O'Toole wrote Stretch Morrison this letter from the Bay State. Dear Friend Stretch—I arrived in Lowell, Mass., on my 36th day after a hike of 3,300 miles from the golden west and believe me I was some tired on that last 100 miles, though it was a week's walk, and slow as a catapillar. I was going along and in Mansfield, Mass., ran into a wild deer from the woods. The whole town, about 1,000 people, was afraid of the deer. I was coming along with the sign on my back telling why I was walking from California to Massachusetts. The red shirt firemen were in their brand new fire engine trying to chase the wild deer out of the road, but water would not move him. So the mayor of the town in his cut-away coat, soft boiled shirt and 10-gal. hat asked me if I knew how to tame a deer with my blue eyes. I said in my country I tame them and talk to them, so they will leave and run away and not hurt anybody.

"Well," the mayor said, "my young man, drive this wild reindeer away and we will be all happy." So telling the deer in words that the crowd could not make out, in a few seconds I had the deer runing away fast as Jack Elder made that 98-yard run on the gridiron. Then how that crowd cheered me. The mayor gave me a big time at city hall, also gave me the key to the city and a box of cigars. There was dancing, girls pretty as a picture on the wall were there to meet me. So I had to put on an evening suit and walkover shoes and such a good time!

The next day I got going, to make the final goal to win a bet where many hikers have failed. Along the line the crowd coming out at such an hour—around 6 o'clock—was watching me do my stuff. Gee! It sure was cold! But walking keeps a fellow warm. They gave me a great hand and one workingman said 'How many pair of shoes did you wear out so far?' Well, I don't know until I reach Lowell, but I have worn out 8 pairs so far. The eastern people are jolly and sure give you a hand for doing a stunt like mine. About 30 miles from the mill city I ran into a bad snowstorm and was afraid. I would not win out for the little village was snow-bound, street cars not running, etc. But the state highway trucks and men were getting the roads clear and that was luck for me, for I wanted to win that bet. My legs were cold from the snow and it was the second snowstorm I ever saw, for down in my country it is sunshine every day.

At last my dream came true; it was around 6 o'clock as the city was lit up like Broadway, so I step it up a little fast as my feet were sore and the last pair of shoes shot to pieces, making nine pairs in all used up. The crowd did not know what was coming up the Main street but when they read the sign they knew what I was doing it for. Stopping in a god lunch cart, I put plenty under my belt. I got a Massachusetts steak about 2 pounds, with French fried potatoes, 7 pieces of white bread and three cups of coffee. Gee! I was hungry from that long hike and being up in this cold part of North America for the first time. When I left, Dec. 5, men in their shirt sleeves were picking California cherries. But when I hit the wild city of Chicago where guns do the barking instead of words, I saw a snow storm for the first time. I got a handfull and looked at it for ten minutes: it was a real novelty to me.

But I sure have enjoyed the walk and never have got a lift in an automobile, although I've met some nice people. Never will I forget Noank, the fishing center of Connecticut and the little waiting room on the Main street where the village sheiks hang out; with the stove-pipe club members talking about the coming baseball season and fighting for the championship of Mouse Island! Then to see the salt water cod fish, some around 98 lbs. hanging from a mast on one of the fishing boats at the town dock. That was a real town even if they do turn in the sidewalks at 9 o'clock! I spent three hours there, but wish it was three weeks. The people are good to a stranger. On Prospect Hill, you can get a good view of the ocean and see Block Island without glasses on a clear day. I did not want to leave that village for I made friends with about 75 in that short time.

Will take a good rest here, then go back to my home town in the Golden state where no one needs overcoats and you can go without a cap or hat. I'm glad the walking bet is over; I lost 21 lbs. on it but got $400 and will have a couple of hundred to put in the bank, so as to buy a farm to raise chickens and get married and have a home when I am old.

Well, Stretch, don't forget to send me the Bulletin with this story in it to my home in sunny California, so I'll put it alongside my other clippings in a large scrap book.

It is time to hit the hay—I hear the sandman calling me and my feet are sore as a salt water boil! Glad I met you all in Noank, and hope some of you Noankers will some time be in California and be sure to look up Hiker Amos O'Toole, who passed through Connecticut on his way to Lowell, Mass.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Palace Theatre

A swashbuckling figure, clothed in romantic military costume and cutting his way in love and war through a hostile world—that is John Barrymore in the leading role of "General Crack," the mighty all-talking Vitaphone drama which opens for a four-day run at the Palace theater today, and seems likely to be one of the greatest screen hits ever to strike this town.

Barrymore the suave military leader, Barrymore the tall and tender lover, Barrymore the romantic, the beloved of women, in his first all-talking picture. That alone would be a thrill, but when we consider the fiery, exciting nature of the film itself, it is perceived that we have not only the thrill of seeing and hearing a great actor but of witnessing one of the tensest plays ever transfered to the screen. Formerly you merely saw Barrymore, and good as he was in the silent movies, he is immeasureably better in the talking. Now, besides his gestures, one hears his words and gets a taste of his marvelous intonations and other attributes which lifted him to the heights on the stage before he entered the movies.

Lowell Sherman, Marian Nixon and Hobart Bosworth are among the large supporting cast of this gypsy drama. It is the story of the famous "General Crack," a historical personage who reached the height of his power and notoriety during the reign of Leopold II of Austria. He was the son of the Duke of Kurland and a gypsy princess. Lust for power and cruelty, combined with unbridled passion which swept him from one love to another, made him a character both to be feared and admired.

Whatever side paid him the highest price secured the services of this dashing soldier of fortune. For instance when the affairs of Leopold became highly precarious, "General Crack" offered to help the emperor on two conditions. One was that he receive half the gold of the empire, and the other demand was for the hand of the emperor's sister, Maria Louise. Adventures intervene and it is some time before he sets eyes on the princess who amazes him by her fierce-burning beauty and drives him to abandon the passionate gypsy whom he has married.

Broadway Theatre

Excursion tickets for that mythical kingdom of Sylvania, which lies only a day's journey from the jungles of Hollywood, will be much in demand just as soon as you folks get a glimpse of that delightful country in Maurice Chevalier's heart-thrilling, romantic musical comedy "The Love Parade," which opens at the Broadway today. Chevalier is again his smiling, slightly devilish, entirely romantic self, his smile working every second, his eyes raising havoc, his voice always a charm, and that altogether delightful French accent ever more winning than ever. Sylvania is ruled by a lovely queen, Jeannette Macdonald, but alas she is unmarried, and her cabinet strongly demands that she provide herself with a husband. Having a will of her own, she as sternly refuses—that is, until she meets Chevalier, who as her military attache in Paris, has been sent home in disgrace on account of his notorious escapades with various ladies of the capital. His smile and wit win the susceptible queen away from her purpose of punishing the rascal, and immediately another and more dangerous flirtation develops—dangerous for the irresistible Maurice at least, for he is dragged to the altar—not as king, but just as "the queen's husband,"—a fact which he is never allowed to forget. Tense drama follows closely on the heels of uproarious comedy as the story unfolds, with hardly a second for the audience to catch its breath, so fast is the action. Miss Macdonald makes a lovely and lovable queen, and Chevalier is more dangerously fascinating than ever. Much comedy is furnished by Lillian Roth as the queen's maid and Lupino Lane as valet to the philandering Frenchman. The song hits number nearly a dozen and are already popular at the local record and sheet music stores. Scenic effects and costumes are nothing short of gorgeous and the production seems fully entitled to the New York critic's joint praise as the "only real $6.60 picture that is worth the money. Today's program is continuous from 1:30, and Sunday evening, two complete shows will be given at 6:30 and 8:45.

Careless Rapture

MARRIED LIFE PALLED FOR A YOUNG BUSINESS GIRL WHEN HER WOULD-BE AUTHOR-HUSBAND DIDN'T EARN EVEN THE POSTAGE HE USED ON HIS MANUSCRIPTS

PHOEBE sat very still in the corner of the green moire love seat in the bay window, still with that complete, overwhelming happiness that is like a warm drench of sunlight flooding through one; only more electric than that, she thought, more like sunlight with tiny needles in it.

It was her party, the christening of the new apartment. She saw the room in a glow of realization; the cream walls with the Picasso print and the crimson mandarin coat, the little Jacobean coffee table and the Voltaire chair, the bright yellow breakfast nook with the tiny cactus plant in a lacquer bowl, the toile de joie curtains that she had spent most of last week's pay on, and the Colonial windows through which you could see Washington Square.

"But you see," Dion was saying, his brown eyes alive with ardor, "America should be proud of us. We're going to do the real, the vital things. But she doesn't seem to care. She doesn't care about the people who are going to paint her great pictures or write her great novels. The great American novel will probably be written in a hall bedroom!"

He looked around at the rest of them and found his enthusiasm mirrored in their eyes. Why, he had taken the very words out of their mouths! They thought, lovingly, of the great pictures and the great American novels that were reposing uncompleted at that very moment in their own hall bedrooms.

"But one can't gamble on an unknown quantity," Mr. Henderson said slowly, a little uncomfortable among all this youthful genius. Phoebe looked at him with commiserating sympathy. He was sitting next to her on the love seat, the creases in his tuxedo trousers looking absurdly like a miniature railroad track running down into his shoes. His forehead was very shiny. She should have explained that the party was to be quite informal. Poor Mr. Henderson—he only worked in a bank! These people weren't really his people. He wasn't "artistic."

Then she remembered, guilty, that she worked in a bank too. It was the bank that had helped her out of a furnished room with a broken spring into this adorable two-room apartment with a bathroom done in green tile.

She was aware, achingly, of being on the outside looking in. She didn't write novels, or poetry, or study at the Art Students League; she was only a bank clerk, and a rather important one, which was worse. But she'd always wanted an apartment, where she could gather all these charming people around her and offer them cocktails and initialed cigarettes. She had felt that even if she couldn't write or paint perhaps by just listening quietly she could garner something of their charm, their aliveness—share in the ecstasy of their adventure.

Mr. Henderson coughed discreetly into her ear. "I think, Miss Martin, that I'd better be running along. I've a heavy day ahead of me tomorrow."

HER smile faded a little and she remembered that tomorrow was the last of the month and that she would have to stay overtime, too. Phoebe walked with him across the room and into the tiny foyer.

Poor Mr. Henderson, almost 35, practically middle-aged. "These youngsters," he said, his lips beginning to curl again. "They don't know what a full day's work is!"

A thin anger warmed her cheeks. Why, these were her friends, her people! "But they're going to do very beautiful things—some day! And we—we're only automatons. Who'll ever remember us?"

He looked back into the living room. Her eyes, following his, saw Dion seated at the piano playing one of those sentimental Gay Nineties ditties and watched Ines Clarey, a pillow stuffed into her dress and her hair pulled forward on the top of her head, doing her famous Gibson Girl burlesque. The rest of them were sitting around on the floor, their cigarette ends like sleepy fireflies in the lamplit dusk.

"Who'll ever want to remember them?" Mr. Henderson as saying.

She walked back into the room, her gray eyes very bright. Ines had by now started in on the naughty part of her burlesque. Phoebe nestled down on a cushion next to Dion's and she felt his hand—arm and soft instead of cold and firm like Mr. Henderson's—slip over her hand. And immediately, as if the very touch of his hand were enough, the tingling ecstasy crept back into her thoughts on dancing feet.

"Give me a cigarette, Di!" she whispered.

He passed her his case inattentively. Phoebe joined in the fun with the crowd, laughing at the right times, but inside she as beginning to feel heavy and inert again, just as if she had eaten cinkers for a 2 o'clock breakfast. She wished that she could get up and do something, too. Why must she always be like a not very bright child who sits in the corner with his hands in his lap? She wondered if they didn't rather despise her; if, after all, they thought she was trying to butt in.

At 3 o'clock the party began to show signs of ending. Maurice and Lou were nodding on the love seat; some one had fallen asleep under the table in the breakfast nook.

Phoebe and Dion stood for a moment in the foyer saying good night while the rest of the gang waited downstairs. She looked up at him, an absurd fear balancing her ecstasy. She didn't really know of what she was afraid; perhaps of losing him because she wasn't quite keen enough—oh, why hadn't she Di's carefreeness?

He looked at her suddenly, and a funny, wiggly smile twirked his lips. "I love you!" he said.

Phoebe stood at the door and watched Di and the rest of them troop downstairs and out into the night. Then she walked slowly back into the room, collected the ash trays and emptied them into the brand-new white-enameled garbage pail in the kitchenette.

After she had turned off the lamps and slipped under the covers and felt the pillow smooth and cool against her hot cheek she knew that she wouldn't be able to sleep.

Thoughts, like little imps playing leapfrog, tossed themselves about in her mind. She thought dutifully of the statements that would have to be got out at the bank tomorrow; she could hear the clack-clack of the bookkeeping machines, could feel her fingers limp and anxious against the keys. Oh, why did one have to work?

Phoebe sat up in bed clasping her slim, pajama-clad knees and stared at the pale, wan blur of the windows at the other end of the room. She thought, now, of Dion—of Dion in dungarees and a blue sweater, as she had first seen him in Provincetown last summer with the gang. She could never quite isolate Dion from the gang; he was so integral a part of it.

Phoebe had never known there could be anything like Provincetown. She had grown up in one of those sparse suburban communities that are little more than names on a timetable; rows of houses with imitation lace curtains at the windows and velour davenports in the parlors. She had gone to high school and then to business college with girls whose diminutive minds circled always about the boy friend, the corner movies and getting a wave twice a week.

When Phoebe came to New York, after her mother's death and her father's remarriage, she found that the girls there thought of the same things, only in a more sophisticated way.

BUT Provincetown! Quite by accident she had discovered it. Zoe Clark, who worked in the little lending library near the bank and who had become Phoebe's confidante, had asked her to come up to "the shack" for her two weeks' vacation. And Phoebe, terribly lonely, terribly eager for friends, jumped at the chance. She went, expecting to find a conventional seaside resort with a merry-go-round, roller-coasters and a dance hall.

Instead, she found a village lost in time, a village that smelled of the sea. Zoe's shack perched precariously over the beach, a ramshackle hut, with crimson curtains at the windows and a brass knocker on the door. Inside there were two beds, an old Franklin stove, a kitchen table painted bright green and a whaleoil lamp. Zoe seemed to know the whole colony; they came trooping into her place for informal parties—youngsters with sun-bleached hair and the smell of linseed oil about them. Tremendously vital they seemed to a Phoebe drunk with this new joy of living.

And Dion—he was doing bits with the Wharf Players, and had been put out of his rooming house for painting murals in the bathroom. He told Phoebe that she looked like a girl by Marie Laurencin.

She remembered Commercial street with its green and yellow shuttered windows and its sagging fences; she remembered eating at Nelly's with the crowd and going out to the beach in some one's battered old flivver. She remembered sunrises on the dunes and fishnets silver with brine spread out over the meadows—church spires in the sun—walking barelegged with the gang along the beach—roasting frankfurters on a driftwood fire——

And Dion, telling her that she was like a girl by Marie Laurencin; Dion holding her hand; Dion's lips, warm upon hers, Dion—Dion!

In May they were married. Dion brought her a corsage of orchids; the gang tendered them a wedding breakfast and the girls at the bank gave them a cut-glass cream-and-sugar set.

And then, because they didn't have enough money for a honeymoon—besides, they were going to Provincetown again on Phoebe's vacation—they came back to the apartment. Dion brought over his other suit and his typewriter and the half bottle of champagne that had been left from the wedding breakfast, and they were ready to settle down.

Phoebe helped him unpack, infinite tenderness in her fingertips as she lifted the few meager shirts and ties and socks—gracious, how they needed darning!—from the worn leather grip.

"I haven't very much to offer you," he said with a wounded sort of pride. His lips kept twitching at the corners. She looked up from where she knelt. "Nothing, Di, but your genius!" She was glad she had remembered to say that; she had been treasuring it up. "And you," she added, humming it as though it were a gay sort of tune, "just you!"

"You sound like a musical-comedy ingenue!" He laughed at her, all the humility gone now.

"Yes," she said, "I'd make a good one, wouldn't I?" She snapped her fingers provocatively and continued on with the tune, improvising as she went—but a tear overflowed and spilled on the front of her new china-blue silk dress.

Dion dropped at her side, his arms about her with a strength that made her gasp.

"I feel so preposterously happy!" she said in a tremulous whisper. "Just like the heroines of popular fiction do, just exactly that way, Di! Isn't it funny how banal we become just at the wrong time? How sentimental and drippy and everything? I can see Maurice sneering at me and the rest of the gang laughing up their sleeves—and—but life is beautiful, sometimes, isn't it, Di?"

"And what am I?" he was saying. "Nothing but a maybe—not even a hack writer who at least could bring in the bread and butter! Why should I ask you to gamble on me? But then I wanted you so much, Phoebe. I couldn't let you go."

SHE'D been so afraid he'd talk like that. Hurriedly, trying to divert him, she held up a pair of socks. "Are these mates, Di?" she asked him.

"I ought to go out and get a job tomorrow—somehow, somewhere—"

"Di! Di!" She got to her feet and pulled him up with her. "But you haven't seen our apple tree! A real apple tree—think of that, Di!"

They walked downstairs and out into the spring dusk and looked at the slim fragment of moon through the dusty old boughs. A black cat, frightened out of its snooze on the fence, jumped down into the Clancy ash barrel and upset the tin cover. Mrs. Clancy, who was the janitress and who lived in the basement, stuck her head out of the kitchen window.

"Oh, it's you, Miss Martin! Home a little early this evenin'?"

"Why—" Phoebe said, "I've just been married! I want you to meet my husband, Mrs. Clancy!"

"Lordy!" she said. "I didn't know you was plannin' on it so soon!" She squinted at him nearsightedly. "Does he work in the bank, too?"

"No!" Phoebe said, a tremendous pride in her voice. "He's a writer!"

But Mrs. Clancy had lived in Greenwich Village too long to be thrilled by that; there were too many unpaid rent bills fresh in her memory.

"Oh," she said. "One of them!" And she shut the window.

But the sarcasm of a hundred Mrs. Clancys was unavailing now.

Sometimes at the bank she would look at the other girls and smile her secret smile; sometimes she was almost glad that she could pity them. Their bright-colored frocks, their "dinner rings," their new spring coats gave her only the briefest twinge of envy.

Her days were busier now, filled with a hundred and one new adjustments to life. There was the budget to live up to—although Phoebe never limits, and a few days before payday seemed quite able to keep within its usually found them subsisting on beans and potato salad. But then on payday they always had steak and mushrooms and butterscotch pie.

Dion's novel was virtually completed. Phoebe came home from the bank to find him still working, with his typewriter on the little Jacobean coffee table and wads of paper strewn lavishly over the floor and cigarette butts littering the ash trays. She had had to scold him out once though, for putting them in the cactus plant.

And then in the evenings they would go out for a walk in the park, or for a ride on the top of a bus, and they would look at the stars and hold hands and talk about the future in those delicious phrases which seemed always to start off with "if" or "when" or "sometimes." Or perhaps—and this grew to be more and more the case—one of the gang would be throwing a party and, of course, they would have to go, although Phoebe always arose resolutely to depart at 12.30, tugging a grumbling Dion after her. For in the back of her mind there was always that inevitable specter, the alarm clock. Dion could sleep late in the mornings as he usually did but Phoebe's day started promptly at 7.30, and as she always liked to get Di's breakfast ready, it meant quick stepping. Not that she begrudged Dion his leisure. His work was so much the more important, so much more brilliant, so much more difficult. Hers was only a mechanism, a routine—even if it did bring in fifty-five a week.

"But," as she had explained to Mr. Henderson, "that is just an example of the false values that go to make up our American life today!" Although she didn't explain that that was what Di had said himself.

Yet after Dion's novel had started its trips back and forth to the publishers, and after they had had a few months of trying to stretch a budget that just wouldn't stretch, the first roseate glow of married life seemed to fade a little and grow slightly threadbare at the edges.

Di's novel came back with depressing regularity, and he didn't seem to write very much any more, and he would never show Phoebe what he had written. One day he told her that he guessed he wasn't the sort of fellow who should have got married—and she had agreed with him. Then he had gone out and slammed the door behind him and stayed out until midnight, and she had sat by the clock with clenched hands and aching eyes, envisioning him drunk in some tenement hallway. Finally he had come back with a pint of ice cream as a peace offering—he had borrowed half a dollar from her that afternoon.

SUMMER was advancing on the little apartment, and the toile de joie curtains—they were not quite so fresh-looking now—hung straight and lifeless at the windows, and at night you could smell people's dinners cooking.

It was Friday night and Phoebe was sitting on the love seat apportioning the contents of an all-too-small pay envelope. Rent, the grocer—item by item the crisp bills grew less in number. Finally she held up a lone $5 bill; all that they had between them until the next payday, which, incidentally, was the start of her vacation, the vacation that was to have been a honeymoon. She looked up from the bills and saw Provincetown vanishing into irrevocable distance.

"Oh, Di!" She looked at him; he was all hurry and seemed to be merging with the Voltaire chair. Bravely she tried to smile, but it was a stumbling smile that fell down at the corners.

He got up and went over to the window and stood looking out into the summer night. He looked so Byronic when he stood that way.

"It's no use," he said. "It's all been a fool's paradise."

"But that's so trite, Di," she said, still brave. Although it was so hard to be brave when all they had had for dinner had been potato chips and a chocolate cake she had made which had flopped in the middle.

"It's so darn true!" He wheeled around and his eyes were bright and rather terrible. She knew that when he looked like that there wasn't anything you could say. At the bank, sometimes, she thought of him, sitting there alone, just thinking, and waiting for his novel to come back. She knew how those hours must drag along on leaden feet. He was beginning to think that he was a failure. Oh, she could see it in his eyes! How she'd fought for him in her own thoughts! But she wouldn't let him go out and get a job—that could only have meant failure, definite, decisive.

"Why didn't you kick me out long ago?" he was asking in a perilously high voice. "Can't you see I'm a blowout? Don't you see I'm never going to amount to anything?"

"Oh, Di!" She went over to him; she was frightened to see how pale and gray his face was.

"I'll get a job!" he cried.

"You musn't, Di!" She put her fingers over her lips to keep them steady. "You can stay on here just this way—" Then she realized that she had said something terribly wrong.

"No! No more of your charity! That's all it was. Just a luxury for you. You practically said so then. Just like some women keep poodle dogs."

SOMETHING was burning inside her and sending shafts of flame up into her throat. "And so you call all the sacrifices I've made for you a luxury! You think that's all my love amounts to!" An intolerable bitterness settled upon her; there was a numbness in her fingertips, little cold weights on her eyes. Dully she said: "Well, Di, if you want to, you can go."

"I'm going!" he shouted. "I'm going and I'm never coming back!" He went over to the closet and got his shabby grip, opened the writing-desk drawers and took out shirts and socks, got his extra shoes from behind the piano.

She got up and walked toward him on feet that felt like pincushions full of pins. Was it all going to end—like this?

"You can sell my typewriter! I won't need it any more!"

"How can I? It's got a key missing and it was second-hand to begin with."

"I'll send you money. I'll get a job. I'll be a longshoreman, or something."

And he went. She leaned against the door, her palms outward on the warm, moist wood, and heard his footsteps stomping away into the distance.

She let down the folding bed and lay down. She closed her hot, stinging eyes and tried to sleep. Of course, tomorrow he would come back; yes, of course he would come back, and they could start all over again, and his novel would surely be accepted but where would he go tonight? He didn't have any money. Perhaps he would sleep on a bench in Washington Square and get arrested. But no, no, of course not! He'd go to his friends, the gang, and they'd always bemoaned her taking him away—and now they had him again!

Phoebe sat up suddenly, her face very white. "Oh, God," she prayer, "send him back!" Because she couldn't go on without Dion; there was simply no going on unless it were with him. No more breakfasts to get for him, no more rides on the top of a bus. Life had suddenly fallen about her in fragments. There wasn't any use living any more.

Then she remembered that she had forgotten to set the alarm for tomorrow morning.

But he didn't come back the next day, nor the next. Phoebe heard that he was staying with Maurice down in Minetta Lane. She couldn't call him up, for Maurice didn't have a telephone, and she wouldn't write. Much as she wanted him to come back she could not bend her stubborn small-town pride enough to go begging for him. Better to die of a broken heart than try to get him back.

MR. HENDERSON, who had always seemed to have a place in the outer fringes of Phoebe's consciousness, became an unexpected confidant. There was no one else in whom she could confide, for Zoe was in Provincetown now. They lunched together several times in the next week and Phoebe went over her lunch and told him the whole story. Mr. Henderson, who was a cashier and well used to diplomatic persuasion, suggested that Phoebe accompany him for her vacation to Atlantic City, where his aunt had a place. She agreed although she wondered how his vacation happened to coincide with hers.

She could not have borne to stay on at the apartment during those long two weeks. Even Atlantic City would be preferable. And so long as she was going to continue to live—although she wasn't quite sure that she wanted to—she would have to do something. There would have to be some escape.

So on Saturday morning she started to pack. She knelt by the side of her opened suitcase, averting her face so that the tears wouldn't spot the neatly-folded lingerie, and smoothed out her few good dresses. She thought of Atlantic City as a doomed murderer might think of the electric chair or perhaps—she modified that somewhat—as a prisoner might face life imprisonment. Then she wondered, suddenly, if that might be what this were going to lead to. Then she remembered that at Atlantic City one might be carried off by the surf and never be found again and a new resolution brightened her eyes. She almost managed to smile—a dolorous, tragic smile.

THE doorbell rang sharply—but before her hopes had had time to soar she heard the brief note of the postman's whistle. Probably that was Di's novel back again. She stooped to the suitcase, feeling very limp.

Then, suddenly, she heard footsteps on the stairs that sounded like some one coming up two steps at a time. She looked up, a tremendous, choking hope in her throat. The door burst inward.

"Di!" She tried to get up, but her knees wouldn't work. She could just sit there helplessly, her arms outstretched. "Oh, Di!"

"Look!" He stood before her, his hair on end, a thin slip of green paper in his hand. "A check for $500!" That was all he could say; he was all out of breath, but his eyes were eloquent.

"Every morning," he panted, "I followed the postman to the door thinking that this check would arrive—that is, after I knew my story was accepted, and besides, I had to get it before I could come back to you."

She went over to him and flung her arms about him, a strange singing in her heart. "I knew you'd do it!" she cried. "I knew you'd make good! Is this the first payment?"

"Oh, no!" He looked at her for a moment, mutely. "This isn't for my novel. This is a confession novelette I did that you didn't know about."

"Oh, Di!" But the singing was still going on; it wouldn't stop now.

"They want me to do some more! And now, Phoebe, we can go to Provincetown! We can have our honeymoon!"

"It's so grand and glorious! But Di, you don't know how I worried about you. I was afraid you might sleep on a park bench and get arrested or something and it would all have been my fault!"

"But it wasn't, darling. You did just the right thing. Made me come to my senses."

THE doorbell rang again, two sharp, businesslike rings. Di ran to the door and peered down into the lower hall. "It looks like a traveling salesman with his bag," he called back. "Shall I tell him you don't want anything today?"

"Oh," She ran to the door, guilt in her eyes. She leaned over the rail. There was Mr. Henderson, bag in hand, looking upward, his eyebrows like grotesque question points.

Poor Mr. Henderson! Phoebe, in her own happiness, almost felt sorry for him as he stood there.

"But Di's come back!" she cried. "I can't go now!"

He kept on looking up, his mouth open. Then his shoulders slumped, and he turned to go. He looked back for a moment, vindictive. "Well," he said, "perhaps, next time—"

She leaned over the rail again. "There isn't going to be any next time," she shouted. "There isn't going to be any next time—ever!"

Breed Theatre

"Jazz Heaven," a dramatic musical film with a theme that is a far departure from the conventional motion picture, opens tomorrow night for three days at the Breed theatre. It is a Radio Pictures all-talking production starring John Mack Brown and Sally O'Neil.

Critics agree wherever "Jazz Heaven" has been seen and heard that Melville Brown has turned in a real directorial achievement in this production which has its theme song the lilting love lyric "Someone."

Brown and Miss O'Neil are surrounded by a capable supporting cast including Clyde Cook, Albert Conti, Blanche Friderici, Joseph Cawthorn, J. Barney Sherry and numerous others. There is much comedy throughout and the settings alternate between a rooming house in New York, a music publishing house and a broadcast station.

Brown is cast as a song writer struggling for recognition that is slow in coming until the girl rooming next door to him introduces him to her bosses, Kemple and Klucke, music publishers. Even then success doesn't rush to greet him, although he finds himself falling in love with his benefactor. She, in her eagerness to get the song over, lays herself open to criticism and the boy is on the point of abandoning songwriting for good when the sun breaks through the clouds, the song sells and happiness comes to the boy and girl.

The theme song, "Someone," written by Oscar Levant and Sidney Clair, is sweeping the country and wins many new admirers with each audible showing of "Jazz Heaven."

Moving Pictures Y. M. C. A. Sunday

At 4 o'clock tomorrow (Sunday) afternoon in the large gymnasium of the local Young Men's Christian Association, a five reel moving picture of genuine interest will be shown. The picture is entitled "Bill."

This is a picture which is different. We cannot do better than quote from an article in the Ladies' Home Journal, entitled, "When the Movies are Good." "I have just seen a motion picture which in addition to being genuinely interesting has also a really high degree of artistry."

"Bill" is an adaption of Anatole France's story. A story of great human appeal, more far-reaching than any sex appeal, or heart interest, or suspense.

The saga of an old fruit vender who doesn't understand much of the world and against whom the world beats pitilessly.

"Bill" has an instinct for justice and he sees it meted out whenever he can in his small circle, particularly to the newspaper boy and his dog.

Alas, he never encounters justice for himself—therein lies the tragedy and the climax.

To this service the adult public is specially invited, and youths 16 and over. Those under sixteen must be accompanied by adults.

STRAIGHT 8

THIS IS THE NEW STRAIGHT 8 THAT STARTLED THE INDUSTRY

PRICED UNDER $1000

Weeks ago, leading newspapers were informed of a mysterious new eight-cylinder car which was performing incredible feats in the steep mountains of Pennsylvania.

Out of curiosity, and sensing a news story, automobile editors hurried to the mountains to investigate. There they saw feats of performance that set them to writing columns of praise about a new car whose very name was still a secret.

Now is revealed the name of that mysterious car—the car they proclaimed a sensation. It is the new Chrysler-built De Soto Straight Eight—priced at less than $1000.

"Another chapter in the history of the automobile industry . . ." "Never such excellent performance by an automobile in its price class . . ." "Of an entirely different style . . ." "The only car that stood up with it was one that sold for approximately $1500 more . . ." These are typical quotations from what the prominent automobile editors have been writing under their own signatures.

On the basis of overwhelming dollar value, the new De Soto Straight Eight is as outstanding in the eight-cylinder field as its famous companion car, the De Soto Six, is outstanding in the field of sixes. Every comparison verifies this fact.

You Never Can Tell

You never can tell what a word may do
When said in a friendly tone
To a friend who is feeling rather blue,
And a heart that is lorn and lone;
For there's many a man who stands in need
Of just such a word as this,
And often it proves the fruitful seed
Which flowers from the soil in bliss.

You never can tell where a kindness sends
As it wings on its way to bless,
How it pacifies foes and makes new friends,
Joys bright and troubles less;
For there's plenty of room on this sad old earth
For actions that spring from love,
And though you may think them of little worth,
They are priceless in heaven above.

Seed Catalogues

Still and cold my flowers sleep.
Winter winds beat at my door
All my garden's frozen deep.
Yet the postman's left a score
Of little books with vivid gleams
Of bright-hued blossoms flashing gay.
And so I plan with radiant dreams
The garden I will make in May.

There's tall foxglove and hollyhocks
With baby's breath and blanket flower,
Proud coxcombs and star-eyed phlox,
Spiced velvet pinks and virgin's bower,
Frail columbines with Queen Anne's laces,
The larkspur's blue and poppy's rose,
Forget-me-nots, blithe pansy faces,
Silver lilies and goldenglows.

My garden grows the while I read,
A paradise without a blot,
With hungry worm and wicked weed
And cruel drought and blight forgot.

Summer laughs within my rooms
While out-of-doors the snow drifts higher
I am growing perfect blooms
In my garden by the fire.

"Thy Hosiery"

Note: A Canadian soldier found the following inclosed in a pair of socks. A clean parody on "The Rosary."

The time I've spent on these here socks
Is like a thousand years to me.
Dear lad, how do they look to thee?
Thy hosiery! Thy hosiery!

Oh, maddening stitches, plain and purl,
Oft they've made my poor head whirl;
For men must fight—but I'm a girl,
And so I'm knitting socks for thee.

My mother taught me how to knit;
I hope with all my heart they fit—
If not as socks—well, as a mitt,
Or pass them on, thy hosiery!

Winter

Winter is beautiful,
Clear and chill,
With the fairy snow
On meadow and hill,
And the cozy glow
Of hearth fires bright,
But Oh! for a moonlight summer night.

Winter is gleeful
Bracing and keen,
With the ring of skates
'Gainst icy sheen,
And the tinkle of sleigh-bells
On frosty air.
But Oh, for the breath of a garden fair.

Winter is peaceful,
Calm and still,
With [illegible]
For brook and rill,
And quiet [illegible],
Sleeping till Spring,
But Oh! for the cry of a lark on the wing.

My Mother's Prayer

As I wandered 'round the homestead, many a dear familiar spot
Bro't within my recollections, scenes I'd seemingly forgot;
There, the orchard meadow yonder—here, the deep old fashioned well,
With its old moss-covered bucket, sent a thrill no tongue can tell.

Tho' the house was held by strangers, All remained the same within;
Just as when a child trampled up and down, and out and in;
To the garret dark ascending, once a source of childish dread,
Peering thro' the misty cobwebs, Lo! I saw my trundle bed.
Quick I drew it from the rubbish, covered o'er with dust so long;
When, behold, I heard in fancy strains of one familiar song,
Often sung by my dear mother to me in that trundle bed;
"Hush, my dear, lie still and slumber, Holy Angels guard the bed."

While I listen to the music stealing on in gentle strain,
I am carried back to childhood, I am now a child again;
'Tis the hour of my retiring, at the dusky even tide,
Near my trundle bed I'm kneeling, As of yore, by mother's side.

Hands are on my head so loving, As they were in childhood's days;
I, with weary tones, am trying to repeat the words she says;
"Tis a prayer in language simple as a mother's lips can frame;
Father, thou who art in heaven, hallowed ever be thy name."

Prayer is over; to my pillow with a "good-night!" Kiss I creep,
Scarcely waking while I whisper, "Now I lay me down to sleep."
Then my mother, o'er me bending, prays in earnest words, but mild:
"Hear my prayer, O heavenly father, bless, Oh bless my precious child."

Yet I am but only dreaming, Ne'er I'll be a child again;
Many years has that dear mother in the quiet church yard lain;
But the memory of her counsels o'er my path a light has shed,
Daily calling me to heaven, even from my trundle bed. "Hush, my dear, lie still and slumber, Holy Angels guard thy bed."

"Johnny's Hist'ry Lesson"

I think, of all the things at school
A boy has to do,
That studyin' history, as a rule,
Is worst of all, don't you?
Of dates there are an awful sight,
An' though I study day an' night,
There's only one I've got just right—
That's fourteen ninety-two.

Columbus crossed the Delaware
In fourteen ninety-two;
We whipped the British, fair and square,
In fourteen nine-ty-two;
At Concord an' at Lexington
We kept the redcoats on the run
While the band played "Johnny Get Your Gun,"
In fourteen ninety-two.

Pat Henry, with his dyin' breath—
In fourteen ninety-two—
Said, "Gimme liberty or death!"
In fourteen ninety-two.
An' Barbara Fritchie, so 'tis said,
Cried, "Shoot if you must this old gray head,
But I'd rather 'twould be your own instead!"
In fourteen ninety-two.

WILL NOT DO IT AGAIN

Dear Editor and Social Corner Members: Will try and do my bit by sending a few lines towards filling the page.

It is a long time since I have sent in a line before. I have been entertaining an infected toe not having been able to wear a shoe for four weeks. It was caused by cutting a corn and making it bleed. Never again for me will I try cutting them. I hope to be able to wear a shoe soon.

Was sorry not to be able to go to the last meeting. I see where one of the sisters has Red Arrow money to give away. Would be very pleased to have it as I have most $300 worth of it and am waiting to get more before I bid on anything as things are bid high.

Got a great many cards and thank all those that sent them.

I had so many beautiful gifts at Christmas which pleased and surprised me very much. We had a very handsome tree which gave cheer to all.

I had a bad fainting spell Saturday evening and fell. Don't know how long I was on the floor, but when I came to it did not take me long to call for help, not being able to get up alone. Have been resting in bed since Sunday though am sitting up today. Four days seems like a month to me when I am in bed.

Hoping to see you all at the next meeting. HOOT OWL.

DEATH OF O. H. O.

Dear Editor and Corner Members: It is many months since I have sent a letter to the Corner but had started two which never got finished, and Tish said, in a recent letter, "that it's the finish that counts," so if I do not finish this I will sign my name and send it along.

First, I thank a Social Corner member for the very pretty calendar. The effort to send and please so many year after year are highly appreciated and should be a reminder to us to be faithful to the Corner page and contribute frequently. I confess, I am guilty in that requirement but my reason for long silence is summed up in the fact that I was very busy indeed sewing and working for the church sale I was interested in and somewhat responsible for. Then after that, just as I was commencing my own Christmas work, a member of the family was quite ill so I had all my hands could do or mind to think about. But now that I am relieved of the anxiety and extra tasks that those days brought, I hope to accomplish neglected work. I was sorry to see the lack of letters to fill the page.

I note in Monday's paper in the Union town news the death of another Corner writer, who wrote under the name of O. H. O. Her name was Mrs. Lizzie Richards and her home was in Union 'till she entered the Johnson Memorial hospital at Stafford Springs five years ago and had been a patient there ever since. The article says, "Although her case had been hopeless from the first, and during the latter part of the time she became entirely helpless, as well as partially deaf and blind, she was contented and happy in the care and comfort she received at the hospital. She kept up her interest in her friends and association to the last." She was 69 years old. Her death occurred Jan. 13. I wonder how many of the sisters had sent her cards or letters to relieve the weary hours and months till she was called to give up the struggle.

Diana: I will try and write you soon. So sorry to know of your great loss and calamity in the death of your brother. THEODA.

BRAN MUFFINS

Dear Social Corner Editor and Sisters: If not too late a Happy New Year to you all.

Sumac: The poetry will appear in May in the Cappers Farmer.

Commuter: In Sept. 18, I had the pleasure of going through New York state. We spent the night at Herkimer between the trains and sleeping cold no rest at all.

Milky Way: Hope that you did not get more cold Friday night as it was very cold in the hall.

Bran Muffins: [illegible] 1 level cup whole wheat flour, 1 rounding teaspoon soda, small pinch of salt. Add 2 cups of post bran and mix thoroughly. Heat 1-2 cup of molasses and 1 tablespoon butter until it foams, and add to the dry ingredients with one cup of milk. Nuts or raisins may be added. I am not much on writing. I enjoy reading all the letters. I like the long best. Best wishes to all. BEERS. (Club 4.)

STARTS THE YEAR RIGHT

Dear Friends: I hope there isn't another in the corner as forgetful as I. I wrote a letter last week and while looking in the paper Saturday, remembered I hadn't mailed it. I thought I would start the new year like some others, with a letter every month but likely by next month I will forget we have a new year. You don't know how I miss the good times at the meetings but Tuesday is my busy day. I may get there some day.

Sumac: I made a lamp by the directions you had in the paper and it is pretty. I made the shade in the same way too. I wish you could see it. I got so interested in it that I went to bed and dreamed I covered myself all over with lining, also some steak I was cooking for dinner. I have started a small table lamp now. I also had a serving tray that was plain under the glass so I covered that too. It is real pretty, come over some time and see it. American Girl and E. L. M., so nice to be remembered; thanks. I thought I would try and get to the meeting today but don't think I can. All I can do is read about it Saturday.

I wonder if any one can tell me what to do for a very fine white insect that comes in the soil of my plants. I don't see them until I water the plant. Then they float on top of the water. They are so small you wouldn't think they were alive but they are. Milky Way: Your sister said she thought you would give me a slip of a cactus you have but I guess I will never see you again to ask you. Best wishes to all and sympathy to those who have sorrow and sickness. JUST A NUT.

GOOD OLD DAYS

Dear Social Corner Friends: How I did enjoy the letters in Saturday's paper. I am acquainted with the older members such as Crimson Rambler, Joan, Necia and a few others. Have enjoyed their company often at the gatherings and at picnics too. I used to attend Aunt Abbie's and Aunt Mary's picnics and had a lovely time. It is not convenient for me to get away now as times have changed in more ways than one. I like to go when I can though many thanks for my Christmas cards from a few members. I had a lovely hanky from one of the Corner ladies made by herself and it was pretty. I think a lot of any gift as I believe it is usually given as a token of friendship. I enjoy giving, and many a good thing I have given away to some needy person. The happiness on their face was enough to repay me for the gift. I do not write often as I should, but I am interested just the same. I was glad to find out where Crimson Rambler had gone to. I surely enjoy Georgette, she is so lively, just like I used to be a few years ago. I don't get time to put the life into things nowadays. It is hurry or something else all the time. I started a rag rug this winter and made lots of bed quilt blocks. Next it will be aprons and then some house cleaning and a continual performance all over again after that.

Necia: I have enough of those bed quilt blocks made to make a quilt. You gave me the pattern. Wish you could see it when I put it together. I may try the one with the basket next. Am in hopes to meet the Corner folks at their next meeting, if possible. I wish every one health and happiness in the New Year. "DEARIE."

A DISAPPOINTED WRITER

Dear Editor and Social Corner Readers: To say I was disappointed this morning does not half express my feelings. It is three years since I met with the club and to have it snow today is some discouraging. Maybe I will get there next month.

Ma of Greene Gables: I, too, worry over the fires. Am afraid of fires and will be glad to see the good old summer time.

Rose Lawn: Where are you? It is so long since we have heard from you. Why don't you write us a letter and tell us about your birds.

Mrs. Farmer: We miss you and your letters was so much disappointed not to see you today.

Hepatica: I sent it. About time you came to the seashore again. Bring your needle thread and thimble too and we will keep you busy.

Crimson Rambler: I always look for your letters.

Wurdy Belle: Well, I remember the trundle bed, we had one in our family when I was a girl.

Silent Reader: You never call me any more.

A happy New Year to all. MICHIE.

TAKES ANOTHER'S PENNAME

Dear Corneriter: Having heard and read so much about the Social Corner, I thought perhaps I'd like to join, and also send one of my favorite cake recipes—called the Sunshine cake: Yolks of 5 eggs, (beat 3 minutes), 1 cup of sugar, 1 3-4 cups of flour, 1-2 cup of sweet milk, 1 teaspoon cream tartar, 1-2 teaspoon soda, a little salt, 1 small teaspoon vanilla. Bake in two tins.

Bake in one Layer: White of 5 eggs (beat 2 minutes), 3-4 cup sugar, 1-2 cup flour, 1 small teaspoon cream tartar, a little salt, 1 small teaspoon vanilla.

I hope some of the members will try this cake as it makes a very nice cake. I put cream filling between layers and icing flavored with lemon on top. CHUBBY.

(This penname belongs to another member, so please select another and it will be included in the Social Corner list.—S. C. Editor.)

ADA'S FAMOUS GINGERBREAD

Dear Corneriters: I attended your meeting at Willimantic this month, and I had a lovely time. I have belonged for sometime but haven't attended a meeting for some years.

I thought I would send you my favorite gingerbread recipe. Hope some of you will try it. It is called Ada's Famous Gingerbread: 2 tablespoons molasses, 2 tablespoons melted butter, 1 cup sugar, 1 teaspoon salt, 1 teaspoon cinnamon, 1-2 teaspoon cloves, 1-4 teaspoon ginger, 1 egg, 1 cup sour milk, 1 teaspoon soda, 2 cups flour.

This makes a delicious gingerbread, especially when it's served warm with cream. MRS. O. J.

ANOTHER CORNER MEMBER

Editor of the Social Corner: I have been asked by L. W. to join the Corner, and although I live many miles from you all I would like to be one of you. I do not think I could attend the meetings of any of the clubs so maybe I would not be wanted.

I will take for my pen name "Jane of Rhode Island," and Rhode Island is not so far away after all. I enjoyed the chatty letter of Sarah [illegible] very much. JANE OF R. I.

SAUERKRAUT AND TRUNDLE BEDS

Dear Social Corner Friends: We have had more rain and I expect a great many people are rejoicing over the prospect of full wells and streams. We are fortunate in having a never failing well. There was 7 1-2 feet of water at all times during the drought and then we are near a stream, so the cows had plenty of water.

One day as I was walking down street I saw one of the big trucks unloading their goods at a store. On the side of the truck was advertised in big letters, "Sauerkraut." This was one of the old time standby's in the family larder. Some think it is common but it is good never-the-less. It comes put up in tin cans and I have seen it in barrels in grocery stores. We make our own and this year we made a 5-gallon crock full to the brim. It is not hard to make, but takes a little time, and am going to tell you how we make it.

After the cabbage has been trimmed off outside leaves, it is cut in quarters and shredded with a shredder or a sharp knife. A layer is placed in the crock and a tablespoon of salt is sprinkled over it. It is then bruised by pounding with a wooden masher until the juice flows. Add another layer of cabbage add salt and continue as before. When the crock is full cover with a large plate and weight it down with a clean stone, cover with a cloth and stand it behind the stove to ferment which takes about ten days. It is then ready to take down cellar or to a cool place. I like it cooked with a piece of salt pork. It makes a very appetizing dish as it has a flavor all its own.

Jennie, I too have had the pleasure of sleeping in a trundle bed. My sister and I slept in it. I think it was put together with rope same as the big beds were. Many times I have helped mother tighten up the rope when it became slack. My job was to drive in the peg after the rope was tightened with a wrench.

I wonder how many have seen a real log house. The one I have in mind is still standing and is now owned by a large estate who takes great pride in keeping it in good condition.

When I was a little girl I used to go to this house and once I stayed all night. It faced east and was always so sunny and bright. A little brook ran back of the house. And the woman and her husband always had so many flowers, lilacs, lilies, roses, and the big old fashioned red peonies. They made a good living off this little hillside farm but it was the old log house that always fascinated me.

Best wishes for a Happy and Prosperous New Year to all. WILTWYCK.

GREAT EVENTS IN FEW WORDS

Dear Social Corner: An item in the paper says that Calvin Coolidge is chosen to write a history of this country from the time of the Declaration of Independence until now, in 500 words or less. It is said only 500 words were required to tell of the creation of the entire world.

Many long books are written on subjects that could be summed up in a few words.

It is stated that all that is really known of the life of Shakespeare could be written in a single paragraph, but a book called "Life Of Shakespeare" has 500 pages.

Mr. Coolidge's world-wide reputation for brevity will be recalled by his contribution "I do not choose to run."

Caesar said: "I Came, I Saw, I Conquered."

Pershing: "Lafayette, We Are Here."

John Paul Jones: "I Have Not Yet Begun to Fight."

Gen. John Stark: "Tonight the American Flag Floats From Yonder Hill or Molly Stark Sleeps a Widow.

Alexander the Great: "If I Were Not Alexander, I Would Be Diogenes."

The Gladiators: "Hail Caesar! They Who Are About to Die, Salute You!"

Drake: "There Will be Time Enough to Finish The Game and Then We'll Go and Give the Dons a Thrashing!"

Madame Roland: "O Liberty! What Crimes are Committed in Thy Name!"

Lost Battalion, Whittlesey: "Our Mission is to Hold This Position at All Costs—No Falling back."

Woodrow Wilson: "There is Such a Thing as a Man Being Too Proud to Fight."

Patrick Henry: "If This is Treason, Make the Most of it!"

Cicero: "How Long Now, Cataline, Will You Abuse Our Patience?"

Gen. Zachary Taylor: "Give 'em Hell, Captain Bragg."

William Jennings Bryan: "You Shall Not Press Down Upon the Brow of Labor This Crown of Thorns; You Shall Not Crucify Mankind Upon a Cross of Gold!"

Admiral Farragut: Damn the Torpedoes, Go Ahead!"

Woodrow Wilson: "The World Must be Made Safe For Democracy."

Marshal Ney: "Come and See How a Marshal of France Can Die!"

Pyrrhus: "Another Victory Like This Will Send me Back Without a Man to Epirus."

Captain Philip: "Don't Cheer, Boys; the Poor Devils are Dying."

Sherman: "War is Hell!"

Franklin: "Ay, We Must All Hang Together Else We Shall All Hang Separately."

Colonel Prescott: "Don't Fire Till You Can See the Whites of Their Eyes."

Grant: I Propose to Fight it Out on This Line if it Takes All Summer."

Perry: "We Have Met the Enemy, and They are Ours."

Nathan Hale: I Only Regret That I Have But One Life to Lose For My Country."

Cornelia: "These Are My Jewels."

Ethan Allen: "In the Name of the Great Jehovah and the Continental Congress!"

Patrick Henry: "Give Me Liberty or Give Me Death."

Captain Parker: Don't Fire Unless Fired Upon; But if They Mean to Have War, Let it begin Here."

Cato: "Carthage Must Be Destroyed."

Madame de Pompadour: "After us, the Deluge!"

Foch: My Centre is Ceding; My Right is Retiring; Impossible to Manoeuvre; Excellent Situation; I Shall Attack.

Petain: "They Shall Not Pass."

Marie Antoinette: "If They Don't Want to Starve, Why Don't They Eat Cake?"

Dewey: "You May Fire When You Are Ready, Gridley."

Lindbergh: "Are There Any Mechanics Here?"

Mrs. Gann: "Be Seated, Ladies."

PLEASED WITH REMEMBRANCES

Dear Social Corner: Through your columns I wish to say "thank you" to the members who kindly remembered me at the holiday season. Connie, Skipper, Sumac, Rebecca, Icelcane, B Natural, T. Y., and the mysterious lady who sends us all a calendar. May the days of 1930 be sunny for you each.

You must congratulate Cosmos on her election to the office of lecturer in the grange. It is a case in which ability was recognized. She and Sumac are a pair for efficiency.

SURE CURE FOR A STYE

Dear Social Corner Sisters: Again we are trying to keep our New Year happy even though it's cold and stormy outside. Why not be the more jolly and cheerful to offset the weather. Why go south! You might be unlucky and have a flat tire or a nice smash for excitement, and may be the complete change would just make you home-sick for there is really no place like home. If you don't think so, try being away just anywhere you wish and plan to come home at a certain date and be quarantined, just to keep you from returning. I am sure the days never were as long and no matter how nice other ways your visit may be, you will be so uneasy to just get home even if it means a big sewing basket and dust which is sure to greet you. Then, those that are on the farms are sure there is some chore that will be forgotten and that must be seen to right away. Even before you get your cup of tea ready, you are saying how good it is to be at home.

Here is a sure cure for a stye. You know they are often company in the spring. When you first feel it a little sore and before your eye starts to swell, take an earthen pie plate or an old saucer you have baked the kiddies pie on and rub a tiny piece of butter on and bake the dish a little. There is a brown grease you will find comes out with the butter. Have a piece of gauze and rub off and apply as hot as you can to the eye. Do this 3 or 4 times in the half hour and it is all gone by morning. Very seldom do you have to repeat after the first treatment.

If Eclipse will write me I'll gladly send her some Red Arrow money as I do not get enough to do me any good and it may help her.

Aries: We received cards from Adam and no address, so can't thank him. Please do so for me. Hope you are well.

Wish all a happy New Year. GREEN HOLLOW.

REGRETS DEATH OF SAVILLA

Dear Editor and Social Corner Friends: I have just come in from an 85-mile drive. I have very kind friends who take me out often and I enjoy it very much.

Necia: We have missed you. Glad you are home again.

Wurdy Belle: Glad to hear your cold is better. Hoping you will soon be out again.

Auralee: Deborah and I were very much pleased with the lovely rug and so was Kittie Burdick.

Keziah Doolittle: I was very much disappointed not to see you at S. C. Tuesday. Come again soon, and we will go out shopping again.

Censi: Was it you or your sister who came to Jewett City with Pippin? Does your sister belong to the S. C.? If she does what is her penname?

—Pippin: Hope you are over your cold. Many thanks for pretty card.

Windham Blue Bell: We missed you at the Buckingham. Were you sick? We missed the catsup for it is the best ever I think.

Biddy: I hear you have another bad cold. Hope to hear you are feeling better.

Another dear S. C. sister has passed away, Savilla. We shall miss her. She was always a very kind friend. My deepest sympathy to them she has left.

Vesta: Why did you go home so soon?

Scottie: The cookies and cake were very well; thanks.

Country Cousin and Buddie: Did you get wet going home? How it did rain!

Isadore: How did you enjoy the rain?

Best wishes to all. I. J. B.

INVITATION TO EXHIBIT.

Corner Writers Everywhere: You have each and every one a cordial invitation from Mrs. Osias Dodge to attend a loan exhibition of marvelous needlework and embroidery she has been fortunate to get from guilds of New York city where the women of different nations do the needlework of their country. Knowing so many women do needle work Mrs. Dodge would like to reach as many as would be interested to see this display in Converse hall, entrance through Slater Memorial, from 10:30 a. m. to 5 p. m., Monday to Friday; Saturday and Sunday, open from 2 p. m. to 5 p. m. The Norwich Morning Bulletin has given a review of this exhibit. From Jan. 25 to Feb. 8. It is told of one old colored mammy, who on seeing this display of needlework, said, "Oh my, oh my, isn't it wonderful what a needle and thread can do." Don't get the idea that you are to see just a few pieces for the display will surprise you and, I believe customers are to be shown. We surely thank Mrs. Dodge for thinking of our Corner folks. A Corner writer and I assure you Mrs. Dodge who is there will be glad to tell you about the work. It is a free exhibit. CALLA LILY.

ERROR CORRECTED

Dear Social Corner Sisters: I would like to make a correction of an error that occurred in my last letter of Jan. 18. In regard to the date of the old diary, which I have, that was written by grandfather, the first entry was March 1846, but by error in print, the figures were reversed and read 1864.

Necia: Was glad to see you at the state grange, but sorry not to be able to speak with you after the close. It was announced the attendance that evening was 1175 people, which included 413 who took the sixth degree. I attended the installation of officers on Thursday afternoon and it appealed to me the most beautiful and impressive ceremonies I have ever witnessed. Thank you for your invitation to visit with you for over night for the date in March, but I do not think I can accept it, much as I would like to, and know I should enjoy it.

Am glad to hear from so many others who slept in a trundle bed, also the beautiful poem which Bulinka sent in.

I have received a very pretty calendar from a Social Corner member for which I return sincere thanks.

The month of January is fast going and the winter will be gone, not long from then, and I believe we shall all be glad to welcome spring.

Artie: Your New England maxims are just fine, and if we would all follow them surely we would have a better neighborhood. I received your card in response to my letter, am glad it was O. K.

Best wishes to all and sympathy for the [illegible].

[illegible] (Club 1.)

GREETINGS FROM AUNT JERUSHA

Dear Social Corner Editor and Friends: Guess it's about time I sent in a few lines to let you all know I am still interested in the Corner page. What a nice full page there was last week. I've just finished reading it and still better would like to meet with them all. Been a very long time since I did meet with the club.

Must thank the member for the pretty calendar I received as it comes so handy in my writing box. I don't have to get up to go looking on the big ones.

Violet: Saw your truck go by today. Pretty cold and I guess pretty rough riding especially on the crossroads. How did you find L. T. H.? Have not seen her for quite a while. Don't get out anywhere nowadays.

I was interested in the trundle beds as I had the pleasure of sleeping in one. All of my brothers and sisters, seven of us in all, used it and I used it for my three oldest to sleep in. Then I moved to Abington and I took it back to my father's and it is still there in the attic. It was painted the old fashion red. I guess it is in perfect order as it ever was and must be nearing 80 years sure.

Aries: I want to thank you for my cute little jar. No, I never could do such work. It is very pretty, will keep it for my penny jar for postage stamp money. That is the way I get my stamps, save all the pennies I get in a tiny box for that purpose. I had 56 pennies once to put out for stamps at one time. All I was ever noted for was dishwashing and bedmaking. I have always made my bread and butter since I was 14 years old, also have done pastry cooking but don't know much about fancy dishes and things like they do and have nowadays. So you see I'm rather old fashioned in my work, and dress too.

Well, today seems more like January weather than last week did but we needed the rain very much here. Now our well is filling up which has been dry since August. It is a job to fetch the water although we were well provided for as we have a well out in the same lot that has never been dry since we have lived here. It will be 30 years the 25th of next March but I saw by the paper where some had to haul water more than a mile for their cows, and housework too, so I guess they will rejoice to have their wells and springs fill up. Now this is about long enough for once so I will close wishing every one a very happy New Year and hope all sick ones are on the gain.

AUNT JERUSHA.

FAIRS IN FLORIDA

Dear Editor and Social Corner Sisters: Again I have been remembered with a pretty calendar and wish to thank the sister who sent it.

Certainly those calling for a full page had it last week and more.

I do enjoy reading the letters and reading is all I have been able to do in over six months. New resolutions are good but in my case cannot carry them out. I planned to write last week but it was impossible. Another thing I planned to do was to attend meetings of Club No. 5 last year. Instead I was able to go just once and that was the anniversary meeting in March and now I hope I can recover sufficient to be there this year. But those long stairs to climb may prevent my going. To me it seems a pity a place cannot be found to meet and not have to use up your strength and weaken your heart going up so many stairs.

Susanna has been away visiting and judging by her cards sent had a good time.

I notice Prairie Chicken, Sumac, E. L. M., Milky Way, and many I do not know are writing letters frequently and when we get the paper on Saturday find one from that group. Was sorry to read that Edward W. Bok had passed away.

I was a subscriber for the Ladies' Home Journal for many years and packed the papers in my attic and when I left the city, gave them to the Salvation Army. I visited the Singing Tower at Mountain lake near Lake Wales and heard the carillon. Am having the St. Petersburg paper and the visitors to hear the carillon are numerous and I doubt anyone spending the winter in Florida will fail to hear it and visit Mountain lake. Was there at the time the Winter Haven fair was on not far away and took in both the same day. Large fair closed last Friday and it is the only fair I ever attended that has a free admission and crowds are there every day and the money spent on the grounds and the exhibitors pay all the expenses. I visited it three times also Tampa fair. That is larger than Springfield, Mass., fair in some exhibits. Gasparilla day was a day never to be forgotten. To see the Indians come up the bay and take the city is exciting and then the parade of numerous decorated floats a sight never to be forgotten. One of the days we were there the admission was 70,000; some crowd! Autos at all of the fairs mentioned have to be parked outside, except those allowed for business purposes, and you pay for parking and any place you can leave one on the street is a long distance. The fireworks every night last year was the Fall of Bagdad. The immense grandstands are packed and Ringling Brothers circus has some of their wonderful performers there before the fireworks. While this is account of last year it is on the same scale each year. In closing I want to thank all who sent me Christmas cards and letters. Best wishes

B. NATURAL.

BRAN MUFFINS.

Dear Social Corner Editor and Social Corner Sisters: The page Saturday was full of nice interesting letters, and it was grand to hear from so many and to note how many had the pretty little calendar which is before me while I am writing. It is a pleasant reminder of the kind Social Corner sister who has us thoughtfully in mind, so we too think of her with the calendar ever before us.

All-Bran Muffins: 2 tablespoons shortening, 1-4 cup sugar, 1 egg, 1 cup sour milk, 1 cup Kellogg's All Bran, 1 cup flour, 1-2 teaspoon soda, 1-4 teaspoon salt, 1 teaspoon baking powder.

Cream shortening and sugar, add the egg, mix the sifted dry ingredients into the creamed mixture, add the All-Bran and the milk. Pour into greased muffin tins, and bake in a moderate oven 30 minutes. If sweet milk is used instead of sour milk, omit the 1-2 teaspoon of soda and use 3 teaspoons baking powder. Raisins or dates may be used if desired.

Best wishes to all. ECLIPSE.

SHOULD REPORT MEETINGS

Dear Editor and Social Corner Pals: Our Corner page of last Saturday plainly shows to what a pace we may be led. The practice of some of the members, aside from the workers, to report the meetings held would, no doubt, be a pleasure to shut-ins and others unable to attend. The January meeting of Club No. 1 was well attended. The hostess and her helpers gave us a good dinner and plenty of it with a short program for our enjoyment. "To Crack a Smile is Funnier Than to pluck an eyebrow."

A nice fruit compote: To 1 pound of prunes take 1-2 pound of dried apricots. Soak over night, cook, adding figs, citron or other dried fruit. To the juice add sugar, a little salt and cinnamon, lemon juice.

Our Christmas and holidays were most happy ones and as we all only live one day at a time, all are fine today. Same to you, and you, and you. HOPE COBWEB (Club No. 1.)

USING AND KEEPING FRESH PORK

Dear Editor and Social Corner Sisters: I want to thank the Social Corner writer for the lovely green (my favorite color for such) calendar. I have it hung up right beside my bureau so I can see it often.

Have been interested in the talk about the trundle bed. I never slept in one that I know of, but my oldest child slept in one when he was a year old.

Now, I wonder how many sisters care for pork. I mean fresh pork. I know the farmers do. This year I was afraid we would lose our fresh pork, so I made a weak brine to hold up a small potato and put the spare-ribs in it. A day or two ago, I took out a spare-rib to roast it. I soaked it over night in cold water, then I steamed it about two and one-half hours and then I made a dressing and spread it over the spare-rib, sprinkled a little flour over all and put it in my double roaster and put it in a hot oven and baked it about one and a half hours. Say, sisters, it was fit for a king. In other words it was delicious. I canned 15 quarts of shoulder meat, six quarts of soup made from the bones, 40 pounds of sausage, about ten pounds of headcheese, 75 pounds of lard and fat, also salted and smoked our own bacon and hams. I even canned the tongues and hearts. Then I was afraid of losing some liver left over and so I canned that up.

Some folks partly cook slices of pork then put it down in fat, but I think the weak brine far superior to any way. What say, sisters?

I. J. B.: Am wondering how you are this winter, glad for your sake the winter is open. How is your neighbor's girl? Does she come to see you now?

Deborah: How are you this winter? I never see your name in the paper.

Aunty No. 1: What say you about the date in Feb? I hope the weather will be good. Are you both well? Popover is still here. We are all well.

Best wishes to all. BIDDY.

PREVENTS EYEGLASSES FROM STEAMING

Dear Corneriters and Editor: Another beautiful snow storm is with us again being the 12th one so far this winter. I guess you all know it, so I'll say no more about it. I am alone again this stormy afternoon and will try and write a few lines to pass away the time. It is impossible to write when the radio is going for when there is good music, I must listen.

I was glad to see so many letters last week. The letters were all good and I enjoyed them. Perhaps some of you would like to know how to prevent eyeglasses from steaming up in cold weather. Here it is: Rub them with vaseline and polish them with a silk cloth.

"Life is a mirror—if you frown at it—it frowns back to you; if you smile it returns the compliment.

"With all the changes of fashion, a smiling face is something that never goes out of style."

Deziah Doolittle: I am sorry I cannot help you with the rest of the poem you have asked for. Hope you will be able to find it.

O. W. Holmes said:

Lord, fold the whole earth in peace,
Under thy wings,
Make all the nations one,
All hearts beneath the sun,
Great king of kings.

ANN TENNA (Club 4.)

LIKES HER BOOKS.

Dear Editor and Sisters: I want to thank my assistants for the help they gave me last Tuesday. Even though it was such a stormy day we had nearly 40 out. I was both pleased and surprised to see Nereid Connie, Cosmos, Havena, who live so far away as well as E. L. M., Y. T. and Skipper, who came from Stonington and all those who came from White Rock. It looks as though the Cornerites don't let snow bother them much. American Girls' pirates were certainly a blood thirsty looking crowd. I'd hate to meet them on a dark night.

I can't seem to raise a bit of enthusiasm over this snow. The children enjoy the sliding though so I guess I can put up with it a while. Surely Club No. 4 did fine in last week's paper and I hope they keep it up. There are a lot of members whose names we will forget if they don't write soon.

I am glad to see the letters about books. I don't read as much as I would like but try to go through the reviews and once in a while a new book. I wish I could afford to join a "Book of the Month club." Some people don't approve of having their books picked for them but it seems to me a good way to accumulate a library of late books. Of course there are always old writers whose books we would like to own but we must read some new literature to keep abreast of the times. I have read The Three Musketeers three or four times and I don't remember how many times I have read Scott's Ivanhoe, Quentin Durward and Guy Mannering, Conan Doyle's The White Company I have read several times. The Adventures of Jimmie Dale and Further Adventures of Jimmie Dale by Packard are as good mystery stories as I ever read. Some how I never could get interested in Dickens but some time I am going to try again. I think I've read all the Tarzan stories and Rider Haggard. I like to live the story when I read a book and some of the Haggard books give you that creepy feeling so you are afraid of what you would see if you glanced over your shoulders. I expect we should read more biography or worth while books than so much fiction but when one is tired it is hard to wade through a lot of uninteresting material to get a little that might improve our minds. We should find out something about the author of a book though in order to fully appreciate it. The later books I have had were Scarlet Sister Mary, Wolf Solent (which it seems to me could have been condensed into one volume without losing anything), The Galaxy, Dodsworth and Dark Hester, All's Quiet on the Western Front and Gibbons' The Red Napoleon, were also good. There are so many I would like to read and haven't time for that it is hard to pick out the best ones. That is why I would like to belong to a Book of the Month club and have them picked for me. For children's stories Thornton Burgess is by far the outstanding author and his stories are true, too, that is they are based on facts. He has made a thorough study of birds and

RECOVERY IN STOCK PRICES HALTED BY HEAVY WEEK-END PROFIT-TAKING

NEW YORK, Jan. 24—(AP)—The recovery in stock prices gained sufficient momentum today to carry the general average of 90 stocks to a new high level for the year, although heavy week-end profit taking and a renewal of bear selling cut down many of the early gains. Trading showed a further expansion in volume, the day's sales of 2,480,830 shares setting a new high level for the year.

While the recent upturn in steel mill activity, the decrease in unemployment and indications of an easing credit situation have created a more cheerful sentiment in speculative circles, many of the recent advances have nevertheless been attributed to the correction of a temporarily oversold position. The precipitous retreat of the short interest in Fox Film yesterday undoubtedly has forced many timid shorts into covering their commitments, although many issues, particularly in the merchandising group, again gave evidence today that professional "bear" traders had renewed their attacks.

Weekly mercantile reviews reported further irregularities in the general situation, but confirmed the increased activities in the heavier industries, notably steel and automotive. The excellent Bethlehem Steel report, issued after the close of yesterday's market, naturally led to expectations of a splendid showing by the United States Steel Corp. in its quarterly report to be issued after the directors' meeting next Tuesday.

The breaking down of the merger negotiations between Advance Rumely and Allis Chalmers was followed by a sharp decline in the common and preferred stocks of the former. Fox Film fluctuated in an erratic manner all day because of the uncertainty regarding the outcome of the receivership hearing next Monday, the stock closing fractionally lower at 26 3-4 after having sold as high as 29 3-4 and as low as 24 1-2.

U. S. Steel common touched a new high on the current recovery at 177 1-2, or 3 1-2 points above the recent offering price of stock to employes under the partial payment plan, and then sagged to 176 for a net gain of 1 point. Bethlehem crossed par for a net gain of more than 2 points but eased to 99 1-2 at the close.

Montgomery Ward, Sears Roebuck and Safeway Stores bore the brunt of the selling in the merchandising and chain store groups, but the net declines were held to a point or two.

Allied Chemical, American Bank Note, Atlas Powder, General Electric (old), Otis Elevator, Van Raalte and White Motor were among the few issues which retained their early gains of 4 points or more.

Call money went through its usual performance of renewing unchanged at 4 1-2 per cent and then dropping to 4 when the supply of funds became so plentiful that the official renewal rate was lowered in the outside market. Other monetary accommodations were unchanged. No change was made by the Chicago Federal Reserve bank in its rediscount rate of 4 1-2 per cent.

Wheat futures declined about a cent a bushel on selling inspired by the poor demand for flour, small exports and a bearish Canadian crop estimate. Corn lost about 1 1-2 cents a bushel in reflection of the bearish government report on hogs, larger receipts and easier cash markets. Cotton closed practically unchanged.

Except for a jump of 18 points in Spanish pesetas, there were no changes of consequence in the foreign exchange market. Sterling cables held steady at $4.86 5-8.

CHICAGO GRAIN MARKET.

CHICAGO, Jan. 24—(AP)—Wheat values pursued a general downward course today notwithstanding rallies associated with Oklahoma grain growers' efforts looking to famine relief shipments of wheat to China. Weakness of wheat prices at Winnipeg and Liverpool today had an unsettling influence here, together with the fact that no export wheat sales of any moment were in evidence either in Canada or this country, whereas southern hemisphere exports showed enlargement. Owing to signs of a broadening out of corn receipts at terminal markets, lowest prices yet this season were touched today by all deliveries of corn.

Wheat in Chicago closed heavy, near the day's bottom figures, 1c to 1 3-8c a bushel lower than yesterday's finish. Corn closed 1 3-8c to 1 3-4@1 7-8c down and oats 3-8c to 3-4c off, but with provisions showing 7c to 45c advance.

Dragging down the wheat market here and at other leading centers were advices that wheat shipments from Australia and Argentina this week total 2,061,000 bushels more than last week. Furthermore, the wheat visible supply in Australia was reproted at 6,000,000 bushels greater than a week ago, with government elevators in New South Wales declining any additional receipts.

Corn was under much selling pressure throughout the entire day. Contributing to the downward action of corn values was a bearish construction placed on official announcement that there are 4,280,000 fewer hogs on farms than a year ago. Oats followed corn, with July oats selling at a new low level for the season.

Provisions advanced owing largely to the government report showing decrease of the number of hogs on farms

THE CURB MARKET

NEW YORK, Jan. 24—(AP)—Trading on the New York curb market increased in volume today but the price movement was still irregular, with gains predominating. Trading in the new Baltimore & Ohio convertible 4 1-2 per cent. bonds, which went to a premium of 7 1-2 points above the price of 95 that they re offered to stockholders, attracted the most interest. Rights to subscribe to the bonds also changed hands in large volume between 1 1-8 and 1 3-4.

Public utilities were again in brisk demand although rather large offerings appeard on the rallies, and held many of the net gains to fractions. American Gas & Electric ran up 3 1-4 points and Associated Gas & Electric A. and Eastern States Power B each advanced more than a point.

Fox Theatres was run up from 6 1-2 to 8 1-3 and then eased to 6 7-8, up 1-4 net. Federal Judge Coleman's decision on the application for a receivership is due Monday afternoon. Bellanca Aircraft, which was strong yesterday, fell back 2 points. High grade mining shares displayed a firm undertone, Newmont advancing 3 1-2 points and Hudson Bay and Noranda improving fractionally.

Most of the investment trust, trading corporation shares showed some improvement, Mayflower Associates standing out with a gain of 4 points. Transamerica (new) changed hands in large volume, closing 1 1-2 points higher, and moderate gains also were recorded by Interstate Equities, convertible preferred, Lehman Corporation and Third National Investors. Goldman Sachs closed nearly a point lower despite the publication of the annual report and balance sheet showing net worth in excess of $40 a share.

Oils displayed a firm undertone in quiet trading, Cosden and Standard Oil of Nebraska advancing 1 7-8 and 2 3-4 points, respectively, on a small turnover. Deere & Co., ran up 25 points. Celluloid first preferred 15 and General Public Service preferred 10 in odd lot trading.

BOND MARKET

NEW YORK, Jan. 24.—(AP)—United States government securities enjoyed a lively rally in the late bond trading today, but domestic corporation obligations, notably the rails, were under moderate pressure and again lost ground.

The gain in the government group was general, although with the exception of two issues only small blocks of obligations were involved. The Treasury 4s moved up half a point while the fourth Liberties rose 1-3, both on turnovers of more than $100,000, principal amount. The improvement, which followed a week of easing prices in these barometers of credit conditions, was interpreted in some circles as forecasting lower money rates. Time funds today were unchanged at 4 1-2 to 4 3-4 per cent for all maturities.

Foreign bonds were rather mixed. French 7s made a new high for the past year on heavy transactions. Belgian and German Agricultural bank issues were firm, but Australian 5s and 4 1-2s, New South Wales 5s, Greek 6s, Rio De Janeiro 6s and most of the Argentine 6s sagged.

Santa Fe general 4s, with a net decline of 1 1-2, indicated the tone of the high-grade rails, although most of the losses were fractional. Baltimore & Ohio bonds, Pennsylvania gold 4s, Union Pacific refunding 4s, New York Central general 3 1-2s, St. Louis & San Francisco 4 1-2s and Burlington refunding 4 1-2s gave ground. Chesapeake & Ohio general 4 1-2s, Rock Island 4 1-2s and 4s and Pennsylvania general 4 1-2s, on the other hand, firmed.

Indications that interest is not lacking in new convertible offerings was seen in the trading in the proposed issue of Baltimore & Ohio 4 1-2s, which are offered to stockholders at 96. On approval of the interstate commerce commission, the bonds, traded "when issued" on the curb market, sold up to 102 1-2, closing at 101 3-4 on a turnover of more than $1,000,000.

Convertibles listed on the "big board" attracted wider attention as stocks gained strength. Missouri Pacific 5 1-2s, New Haven 6s and Atchison 4 1-2s rose about a point, while American Telephone 4 1-2s, changing hands briskly, closed 1-4 higher. Public Service of New Jersey 4 1-2s, on which the conversion privilege soon expires, climbed 2 3-8.

Most of the outstanding changes in industrials appeared in bonds of liberal yield. American Writing Paper 6s rose 5 points, Gotham Silk Hosiery 6s gained 3 and Certainteed 5 1-2s advanced 3 1-4. Among the specialties, National Dairy 5 1-4s surpassed their 1929 high at 99 1-8 and Schulco 6 1-2s, series A, moved up 2 points.

Washington Water Power 5s, an inactive, lost 4 1-2 points on the announcement that this subsidiary of American Power & Light was soon to market a $15,000,000 issue of 30-year 5s at 98 1-2. As a group, the utilities were quiet, although Montana Power 5s, Northern States Power 5s and Pacific Gas & Electric 5s drew rather active inquiry.

DAD SHAW WRITES CLUB NO 2

To Social Corner Members of Club No. 2: Now the question confronts me: How shall I address you? Shall I say, My beloved Sisters, or be more formal and just say, My dear Sisters? But, again a thought. I will waive all that and just tell you—

Through the columns of The Bulletin I note you are to have a meeting, incidentally a dinner, and perhaps a cup of tea. The cup that cheers, but not inebriates, and the meeting place, Buckingham Memorial.

What memories are centered here! Perhaps the past is more deeply impressed upon my mind than the happenings of today, for as I walk in imagination, up to the door and knock, I seem to see the kindly face once again of him who was called the war governor of the state, William Alfred Buckingham.

In fancy, I see him as I saw him, and as I knew him. It seems as though it were but yesterday, as I gazed on him and said, "He is not dead, but sleeps; and soon will arise and take me by the hand. I know he will awake and smile on me, as he did yesterday; and he will have some gentle word to say, some kindly deed to do, for loving thought was that of which his life was wrought. He is not dead. Such souls forever live in boundless measures of the love they give."

How true this all is. What a truth is here expressed in words, that convey a world of meaning. And here beneath this roof, you all meet, ofttimes to plan, to work and to reach out a helping hand to help someone in distress, to meet your friends, and to carry on the work that is of vital importance. The greatest happiness in this life, is the thought that through our actions we make others happy. Angels of mercy, every one of you.

And here in this building, with its hallowed memories, you meet and cement in a stronger tie, the bonds of friendship, to carry on that which is the greatest work of mankind, charity. Surely, all this is pleasing in the eye of Him, who has said, "In as much as ye do it unto the least of these, ye do it unto me."

Here, I wish to extend to each and every one, my sincere wish that you will have a good time, that the year will bring to you happiness and health, and with it, prosperity.

Let all your work be governed by the counsel as laid down in Galatians, Chapter 5th, 9th, 10th and 11th verses.

C. H. "DAD" SHAW.

RECOLLECTIONS OF HAMPTON

Dear Social Corner Members: I thank a Social Corner member who remembered me with a calendar. It brightens up the Corner of my box of stationery. I noticed handwriting on back changed.

Bo Peep: I am living in the past. Get some pleasure out of it. I am just going to keep on with recollections of Hampton.

Walking on to the north from the old shop we come to a lane leading to a pasture on the side hill. One day Abbie decided to go down this lane to gather a few berries. While picking she heard a peculiar noise and looking up saw what looked like a hoop coming towards her. She immediately changed her position and the thing continued down the hill and struck an apple tree with its tail. It proved to be a hoop snake. Their mode of speeding is to take the tail in their mouth, start for the object selected and strike object with the tail. Now some of our members may think, "Cretia, I'll believe this story if you won't tell another." Some have said, "No such kind of a snake," while quite recently a man said "There is."

A barn stood on the left side of the lane in a lot where apple trees bore fruit. The only kind I remember of eating from this orchard was a Mexico red with a small white spot on one side. It was such a good eating apple, but I do not believe they were used for cooking.

We are now at top of North Bigelow hill, rought and crooked, yet we used to ride on sled down it. Going down the hill on the right side by a large gate admitting a team used to be a thrifty vine bearing blue thimble berries. They were not common and we did enjoy them fresh from the vine. William Brown used the gate to go to a barn on the low land where he kept sheep. Going on farther we crossed Little river bridge and went on up hill to North Bigelow cemetery which was formed during the glacial period. The history of Windham county referring to the glacial action and deposits reads thus: "One of the most curious examples of this kind may be seen in the valley just northeast of Hampton Hill, here an almost perfect dome of earth, an acre or more in extent, rests upon the bosom of the deep valley, plainly showing that it as deposited there by the settling of a glacial burden beneath the flood of prehistoric waters, then its sides were smoothed and rounded by the action of those waters as they receded. This mound is now beautifully occupied as a burial place for the dead.

Returning on right side we passed Col. Morley's sheep barn and soon came to the Taunton lot with a small brook where we gathered spearmint that mother dried for sickness of stomach as it was called then. Going up, up, the hill our legs begin to ache but we arrive at the top of the hill and the Samuel Morley place standing between North Bigelow road and the road to station.

As to keeping diaries [illegible]. They are valuable to the owner in court cases. My husband's helped to win an important law suit for company that employed him. He used lead pencil in writing them and he began keeping them when 21 and kept a diary up to 70 years old. We left us them, and now I have boxes full of them. They are to read if we find interesting items. Eleven years have passed yet I have the diaries and can not decide to destroy them yet.

Ready: Received card and will write soon.

Keddie: Glad to read article from you.

Never kept geese or picked any, dead or alive. When a youngster a great uncle of mine, a single man, kept many. He had a lot called the goose pasture and kept geese there much of the time. One day I went up to his house, a short walk from grandmother's and got nearly to his door when the gander came with raised wings, mouth open making hissing noise and running towards me which frightened me. My uncle said the goose was setting in the house for the mend the gander was afraid I'd disturb her. I saw my uncle cooking a goose in his fireplace hung by the feet, head down, occasionally giving it a turn. The operation did not work on my sympathies in the least as to the roasting. I did like to see the downy goslings in the spring.

Now I wish all a happy New Year in or out of Corner. Is it worth while?

RUMMAGING IN THE GARRET

Dear Social Corner: It is such a long time since I wrote that I hardly feel as if I was entitled to be called a member. I always read the Social Corner with interest; but so many of the oldest and much loved writers have either given up writing or passed on to the better land, that it hardly seems as social as it used to be. I haven't much excuse to offer only that the thing put off till some other and more convenient time almost never gets done, for tomorrow is never here.

Again I wish to thank the unknown member who always sends us the pretty calendars and it is pleasant to feel that we are remembered even if we don't know the giver.

I can appreciate Eveline Burr's experience with feather beds, for like her I have in bygone days had my full share of "making them up", shaking and patting and smoothing. If there is anything more satisfactory than a big, heavy, plump feather bed, which humps up in one place and settles down in another just as you think you have got it nicely adjusted, I have yet to find it. My mother could make one up so there wouldn't be a wrinkle or a depression in it, but not me, perhaps I was in too much of a hurry.

Does any one remember the old-fashioned valances that draped the lower part of the bedstead that had to be kept snowy white, and starched and would smooth as glass. Though I will admit that a bed made up nice and smooth and white with a white valance looked well I was glad when that fashion passed on, as all fashions do with time, but like many other things of the past days, it may come back.

And some of the fashions of the past that we think so odd and almost ridiculous now were really pretty then, and the next generation will think the same of the fashions of today. "One generation passeth away and another generation cometh."

I never slept in a trundle bed but I believe there was an old, broken one stored away in the garret, which, like the garrets of all those old houses, held many relics of the past, some dilapidated and useless, and stored away for the good they had done, probably, and some that had been discarded for newer and more modern things, and others that were saved for no special reason, only that sometime they might come in handy. They never did but it was considered wasteful to throw anything away and get rid of it for all time effectually. My memory wanders back to a big spinning wheel, a small flax or linen wheel, which my great aunt brought down when I was a little girl and spun on for a little while so that I could say I had seen some one spinning. Also there were swifts used for winding yarn. I believe an old wooden "up and down" churn which I can dimly remember being used when I was very young, an old red cradle, a reel, a hatchel used for dressing flax, a bread trough, a stove with an elevated oven, a set of warping bars, boxes and barrels of old magazines and newspapers, for in those days newspapers in the country only came once a week and people looked forward eagerly for the day when the paper came and stored them away for future reading or reference and now we have so many that we find it hard to get rid of them.

In the corners under the eaves were bandboxes of old hats and bonnets, old hair trunks and footstoves. In the summertime one of my great aunts used to set up the quilting frames there and put on a bed quilt to quilt in fine and intricate patterns carefully marked with a chalk line or a comfortable to tie.

I used to like to browse around there in the summer when the windows at each end were open and it was pleasant and sunny but in winter it was deadly cold and in spring and fall the windows at certain times were full of wasps and as I have no liking for them I gave it a wide berth.

The garret, as it used to be called, (nowadays it is an attic) exists now only in memory, for the old house is torn down and another has taken its place. The houses built now don't have room for storing so much and that is well, too, but when several generations of a family occupied the same house with plenty of room and didn't have to pick up and move it was different.

Also the garret was an excellent place for drying and storing herbs, which everybody did, thoroughwort or boneset, tansy, hardtack, catnip, hops, wormwood and many others which made a pleasant aromatic smell. And I recall a bedstead called a "turn up bedstead," corded, made so that two thirds of it could be turned back against the other part and stood against the wall and so take up less room and there were strange shaped wooden pieces called bonnet blocks, for shaping and pressing over the large old fashioned straw bonnets. But I have probably enlarged on the subject of the old garret of my younger days sufficiently and will not tire of the patience of the readers further this time.

Best wishes to all from — IOLA

SAUSAGES, YEAST AND SOFT SOAP

Dear Social Corner Friends: Another pretty little calendar has arrived and I want to thank the Corner member for it. I enjoy all the letters about the long ago. My mother used to make candles and made our own sausage. She would scrape the casings and then when meat was all seasoned she would stuff them and when the right length twist them. When all the links were done they were hung over a pole in the attic, papers on floor to catch the drip.

My grandmother lived next house to us. I've seen her make yeast cakes also soft soap. She used a barrel when washing and a pounder to get out the dust. We do not come up to our mothers and grandmothers when it comes to labor.

L. T. H.: What you wrote about wasting money for flowers is just my mind. I never spent money for flowers only for the living. I do not approve of it.

Crimson Rambler: Glad to see a letter on Corner page from you. I wrote to you the latter part of February. Have never received any answer.

Jennie: You started something when you wrote of the trundle bed. They were comfortable and I would sleep in one now if I had the chance.

Capricorn: Enjoyed your letter very much. It was all so true.

M. Deville: Am not sure of your address. You go around some and never returned my call when you was with your daughter in this city. Hope to meet you sometime.

Loadie Pal: I was glad to meet you at our last meeting.

My sympathy to all in sickness or trouble.

JOAN

MENDING LEAKY CANS

Dear Social Corner Friends: I certainly enjoyed reading so many nice letters. Roberta and I have met wise recently. Even if my ride is not a long one it gives us time to have a nice little chat. Primrose was on the bus too the other day.

Bug: Has your Christmas cactus blossomed? Mine has over 50 blossoms and it is just beautiful.

Last spring I bought two garbage cans and they both leaked right in the seam, so I had some white enamel paint and I filled the seam on the outside of the can with it and we used them to carry water to the garden last summer. This winter we have kept water in them for our hens. They have never leaked since. I have used white enamel paint for my mop pail. It filled the little holes that come in the bottom of it; my pail has lasted twice as long as it would otherwise.

I want to wish you all a happy New Year if it isn't to late, and to thank those that sent me Christmas cards.

ROSALIND.

FINDS CORNER PAGE MUCH READ

Dear Editor and Social Corner Members: I read on the Social Corner page around Christmas time where Places had sent in verses to the song, If I Was Young As I Used To Be. This is an old song I sang many times when I was a younger man, 18 years old. I made it a point to take this along with a group of songs I sang at the Willimantic Social Corner dinner of Club No. 1, January 8th, in Chamber of Commerce hall. On inquiry I found that Places was not there this day but I sang this song and those who heard it seemed to enjoy it.

Pardon the lateness of the day, when the spirit of Christmas is about on the wane for this season; yet I would like to tell the Corner members how very much I enjoyed trimming up our home. Besides electric lights in the windows on the east and south sides, 14 in number, which invited many compliments from passers-by, the interior in our living room was perhaps a little more attractive. These decorations comprised a small decorated Christmas tree on a table which also was lighted and over the mantle between the two large windows was a string of colored lights encircling a picture of the Christ Child, while below the mantle was a picture of a beautiful woman clinging to a cross, with tall red candles in brass holders on either side. The whole made a very pretty effect. Wife and I received about 50 Christmas cards from loving relatives and friends and likewise sent out equally as many.

American Girl: I read in the Social Corner news recently where you were to take part in a play to be held in Mechanics hall in Westerly, Tuesday, Jan. 21st. Lowthorpe and I looked forward to coming down to this Social Corner gathering; but on arising we saw we were confronted with a snow storm, which was a disappointment to us. Lothorpe and I enjoyed our last visit in Mechanics hall with Social Corner Club No. 6 and look forard to the time when we can come again.

I was pleased when I read the last Saturday Corner page to see such a good report from the members. This must have been very pleasing to the editor of the Social Corner page as well as to the large mebership. A good many tell me they read this page and our membership is surely growing.

I have attended Social Corner picnics for a number of years before I joined and have never missed one of Aunty No. 1's picnics, fully ten years. Lowthorpe and I consider Aunty No. 1 a dear friend.

Greetings from MEADOW LARK

NEW YEAR WISHES

Dear Editor and Social Corner Sisters: I want to thank the Corner sister that sent me the pretty calendar. I have not been able to attend the meetings for quite a while, but hope to soon. I wish the Editor and Social Corner sisters a very happy and prosperous New Year. My sympathy goes out to those who are in trouble and hope the sick will soon be well.

EARLY BLUE BELLE

TAKES NAME OF ANOTHER

Social Corner Editor: I would like to become a member of the Social Corner and for my pen name use Holly.

(Both the names you favored belong to present members. Please select another and it will be added to the Corner list. S. C. EDITOR.)

MY MOTHER'S PRAYER

Dear Editor and Corner Members: I am sending in the song entitled My Mother's Prayer. Don't know as it's what one of the sisters asked for, but as you are speaking of trundle beds thought it would fit in just now.

I found it in one of mother's old hymn books, Gospel Hymns No. 5.

Arrival of 5,000 Japanese in Brazil to cultivate rice brought a postal problem, as the colony is to be established ninety-nine miles up the Acara river from Belem, Para. It was decided to establish service once a month.

WELL, BROWN EYES—WHAT SAY TO A NICE DRIVE OUT INTO THE COUNTRY? THEN A BITE AND A DANCE AT SOME INN?

IT'S PROBABLY AN OLD STORY BUT I'M POSITIVELY WILD ABOUT YOU—YOU'RE THE SUNLIGHT IN MY LIFE—YOUR VOICE IS LIKE MUSIC FROM HEAVEN TO ME—MY HEART IS STARVING FOR YOUR LOVE—
LISTEN, SWEETHEART—I'VE GOT TO HAVE YOU! WE'RE RIGHT NEAR THE STATE LINE—IT'S THE STATE OF HAPPINESS—LET'S RUN OVER—I'LL FIND A PREACHER AND WE'LL BE MARRIED!
ETTA likes PARKS there's no doubt of that—and it would be just one of her crazy capers to dash off and get married—or will her woman's intuition—save her?

MONDI NOMANDIN STRENGTHENS SENIORS FOR TOUGH GAME TONIGHT

Tonight's Probable Lineups

Norwich	Middletown
Brown, lf	Wilcox, lf
Normandin, rf	Johnson, rf
Harris, c	Gustafson, c
Eccleston, lg	Pianeta, lg
Pingree, rg	Hanson, rg

When Norwich Y five meets Middletown Y tonight at the local Y court first place in the state league standing will be at stake. Both teams will go into the fray with one lost apiece, Norwich having lost to Bridgeport, with a weaker team on the floor than they will present tonight, while Middletown was beaten by Greenwich. Norwich defeated Greenwich earlier in the season but records will not decide tonight's encounter.

Howard Demarest, Y. Seniors Coach

Three Visiting Scoring Aces

With Wilcox, Johnson and Gustafson in the visitors' lineup, Norwich basketball fans will see three exceptionally fast men in action, especially Wilcox who at present is leading in individual points scored in state league competition.

Coach Demarest of the local squad has had his men working out every night this week and reports them all in tip-top shape. Mondi Normandin will be back in a forward berth and will team up with Brown. Harris will be in his regular position at center, with Eccleston and Pingree taking care of the back court. For reserve he will have Ray Yerrington, Lynch and Leffingwell, forwards; Ludow at center, and Barber and Grebe, guards. Coach Demarest claims the above outfit to be the best basketball team to ever represent Norwich and his claim is more than justified, according to the current season's record.

Norwich Girls To Play

The other attraction for the evening will be the game between the Norwich girls and Bacon academy girls.

Mrs. Streeter, girls' physical director has had the girls practicing weekly for the past two months and has rounded out a team that will give any girls' team in the state plenty of competition. She will not announce her lineup until game time.

Middletown Sending Many

As these two attractions are sure to draw a capacity house, Manager Leffingwell has had installed extra bleachers and promises accommodations for all the fans. The management of the Middletown team reports that there will be a great turnout from that city to cheer their heroes to a possible victory.

Randy Whaples, popular Central Board man, will officiate in both games, the girls' game starting at 8 p. m. while the biggest attraction of the season commences at 9 p. m.

BROUILLARD AND REID TO MEET IN DANIELSON FEATURE

(Special to The Bulletin)

DANIELSON, Jan. 24—Danielson fans who have been going hither and yon for more than a year to satisfy their craving for sitting in on a card of boxing bouts will have the pleasure on Friday evening of next week, Jan. 31, of seeing a good show right here at home. Louis Peloquin has arranged it, and has given assurance that the boys that are to meet each other in the different bouts have been carefully matched, and particularly selected because they get right in there and go at the business: no dilly-dallying around, but action and plenty of it.

There are to be five bouts, with Dynamite Lou Brouillard of Danielson and Iron Man Reid of Syracuse in the feature bout, an eight-round event at 148 pounds.

Other events on the card provide for the meeting of Al Koziol of Norwich and Leo Ledoux of Worcester to go eight rounds in the semi-final at 138 pounds. This decision will be the rubber one between these two boys, each winning a decision over the other in previous bouts.

Rene Peloquin, a Danielson boy who displays plenty of action in the ring, is to meet Bud Dempsey of Woonsocket at 123 pounds in a match scheduled to go six rounds, and how!

Joseph Preston of Worcester and Patsy Ferra of Norwich will try each other out for four rounds in the 160 pound class. The other bout will be between Al Rodman of New York and Honey Boy Gauvin of Norwich. They are to be in at 120 pounds.

SHAMROCKS GIVE FIRE LADDIES BUSY EVENING

(Special to The Bulletin)

COLCHESTER, Jan. 24—The Colchester Shamrocks basketball team defeated the recently organized Colchester Fire Co. team in a fast and well-played game in New Park hall Thursday evening by a score of 43-17. The Firemen made a good showing in the first half but in the latter half the superior training of the Shamrocks aided them in gaining a decisive lead over the Fire Co. outfit. Fedus and Welch starred for the Shamrocks with 16 and 12 points, respectively, while Gregory and Conrad were the best for the opposition with six and four points, respectively.

Manager Brown of the Fire Co. team is of the opinion that his men made a good showing in view of the short while they have been in training. A few more evenings' practice will put them in fine form to meet any team in this part of the state.

Manager Joseph Ezekiel Falk of the Shamrocks is negotiating for a game to be played here with the Endees of Middletown.

END OF GRAND CIRCUIT SEEN BY SOME HORSEMEN

CLEVELAND, Ohio, Jan. 24—(AP)—A. O. Pennock, general manager of the North Randall horse racing plant here, tossed a bombshell into the Grand Circuit harness loop today with the issuance of an ultimatum that unless Randall is granted the meeting dates it desires, it will withdraw from the big line.

Pennock admitted tonight that he had written E. Roland Harriman, New York city, president of the Grand Circuit, that unless reconsideration was given North Randall on the dates of June 30 and July 7 for big line racing, the Cleveland track would resign its membership.

Pennock asked for the dates of June 30 and July 7 at the recent meeting of the stewards of the Grand Circuit at Kalamazoo, Mich., but the request was granted only partly. Cleveland got June 30 and August 4 while Grand Rapids was awarded July 7. Yesterday Pennock said North Randall would run in opposition to the Grand Rapids meet.

Horsemen here tonight freely predicted that resignation of the North Randall track from the Grand Circuit would be the beginning of the end of the big line.

FIRST BOSTON INDOOR TRACK MEET HAS 462 ENTRANTS

BOSTON, Jan. 24—(AP)—Stanislaus Petkiewicz, of Poland, who gained an international track reputation by defeating Paavo Nurmi in Berlin, last year, will make his American track bow here tomorrow night against a fast field in the Leo Larrivee special two mile run, one of the feature events of the William C. Prout memorial games at the Boston Garden.

Dr. Paul Martin, of Switzerland, will be one of the starters in the Bishop Cheverus, 1,000 yard feature.

This meet, which will open the Boston indoor track season has attracted 462 individual entries, including many of America's outstanding performers. The program called for 21 events, including intercollegiate relay races and five New England A. A. A. U. championship tests.

In the mile relay events, Harvard will race Holy Cross, Boston college will oppose New Hampshire, Dartmouth will clash with the M. I. T. quartet, Fordham will run Boston university, and Bowdoin will clash with Tufts.

BOWSER, OF PITT, TO COACH BOWDOIN COLLEGE FOOTBALL

BRUNSWICK, Me., Jan. 24—(AP)—Charles W. Bowser, backfield coach at the University of Pittsburgh, today was named mentor of the Bowdoin football squad for the 1930-31 season.

Bowser succeeds Mal Morrell, director of athletics at the college who was deposed as football coach at the end of the 1929 season. Morrell will continue as athletic director till June 1931, when a three year contract expires.

Members of the football squad were notified of Bowser's selection by President Kenneth M. Sills this afternoon.

His contract is for one year and is on a full time basis.

MICKEY DORMAN RECEIVES CONCUSSION IN DETROIT

DETROIT, Jan. 24—(AP)—Mickey Dorman, Detroit lightweight boxer, was taken to a hospital tonight after he had been knocked out by Eddie Koppy, also of Detroit, in a preliminary bout at Olympia stadium. Efforts to revive Dorman at the stadium had failed.

Koppy and his manager, Charles Moore, were taken to police headquarters and detained. The referee, matchmaker and stadium physician also were taken to headquarters to make statements.

Dorman still was unconscious half an hour after being taken to the Providence hospital operating room. Physicians gave a preliminary diagnosis of "possible fracture of the skull."

The fighter was felled by a blow to the chin.

B. C. Trims Nine's Schedule

BOSTON, Jan. 24—(AP)—The Boston college baseball schedule of 20 games, the shortest one in many years, was announced today by Manager Francis Carolin. The Eagles will make their usual southern trip, playing games with the Quantico marines, William and Mary, Catholic university, Georgetown and Villanova.

And all is well at Fancy Corner.

The Fighting Beauregards have once again upheld the honor of the corner, not that it was in any danger of disgrace but they've just added a bit of prestige to it.

And Minnew (Shires) Beauregard is the hero today. In Frankie Lafleur's where the momentous questions of the day are discussed Minnew occupies the seat of honor.

Those who scoffed when Minnew made his boast that he could beat Mush Moriarty in a four round bout are now singing his praises. Sneers of derision have changed to cheers of admiration. Such is the fickle public.

It is Minnew's turn now and he is making the most of it. For two weeks or more he suffered in silence while his companions of the corner poked depreciatory jibes at him. And now Minnew is doing a little jibing himself.

Those who said he would be a flop are silent. Minnew has shown them that a Beauregard always makes good his boasts. He has shown them that it was no idle boast. His is the victory, richly deserved.

But folks you should have seen that battle. It was a wow. Here was Minnew Beauregard, a man of 31 years, fighting for the honor of his name, against a lad many years his junior, and the great part is he won.

And how he won is a tale in itself and needs the pen of a better writer than I to tell it. But, folks, don't think for a minute that Minnew was the only one in that boxing two-some. Mush Moriarty was there, as game a kid as one would ever want to see.

Those two boys gave the fans a whole lot for their money and those who weren't satisfied may leave the room. And now Mush Moriarty comes out with a challenge to his recent conqueror for a six round bout.

And may the bout go on. It will be worth going miles to see.

MRS. JONES BEATS MRS. LAKE IN WOMEN'S GOLF FINALS

EDGEWATER, Miss., Jan. 24—(AP)—Mrs. Melvin Jones, Chicago's veteran of the links, today shot 32 holes of sub-par golf to win the Pan-American women's amateur championship from Mrs. Marion Turpe Lake, New Orleans, tournament medalist and title defender, 6 and 4.

Mrs. Lake, who broke the Edgewater Gulf hotel course record with her medal score of 77 in the qualifying round and won her way to the finals by smothering her opponents, could not overcome the long, low driving and remarkable putting that gave Mrs. Jones an early lead.

WOMAN GUIDES SLED-DOGS TO NEW COURSE RECORD

POLAND SPRINGS, Me., Jan. 24—(AP)—A clear-eyed matron, Mrs. E. P. Ricker, Jr., of Poland Spring, mushed her seven Siberian sled dogs over 25 miles of trail today to set a new course record in the first leg of the Poland Spring dog derby.

The lone woman entry, Mrs. Ricker, covered the course in two hours, one minute and 40 seconds elapsed time. Leonhard Seppala, who set the record in winning the 1927 derby, finished second, in 2:2:16, just 36 seconds slower than Mrs. Ricker. He also cut his 1927 running time.

Mrs. Ricker clipped five minutes and 31 seconds from the record.

YERRINGTON FURTHER BOLSTERS Y QUINTET

Ray Yerrington, captain of the first Academy basketball team, in 1927, has joined the squad of the Y Seniors of the state Y league for the remainder of the season. The Seniors, who play their biggest game of the year this evening against Middletown Y at the local gym, now have practically all the basketball talent in this section, including Mondi Normandin, Aubrey Brown, Les Pingree, Enos Eccleston, Tommy Lynch, Frank Barber, Capt. Roland Harris, Howard Ludlow and Manager Leffingwell, one of the strongest quintets the city has had in years.

STAFFORD HOCKEY TEAM OPENS SEASON THIS AFTERNOON

(Special to The Bulletin)

STAFFORD SPRINGS, Jan. 24.—The Stafford Hockey club will play its opening game of the season at Warren pond rink Saturday afternoon when it will meet the strong "Greyhound" Hockey club of West Warren, Mass. The Stafford lineup will be as follows: D. Green, E. Green, Argenta, Dolson, Valentine, Lynch; spares, Bencit, Clark, Pallapek, Woods, Adams and Calchera.

PHI DELTA NUS MEET BACON ACADEMY QUINTET TONIGHT

The Phi Delta Nu team of the United Congregational church, member of the local Church league and composed of either present Academy students or recent graduates, will meet Bacon Academy basketball team at Colchester this evening. The Phi Deltas have three decisions over high schools in this section so far this season, having beaten the Robert E. Fitch school of Groton twice and Lyman high of Lebanon once.

EIGHTEEN HURLERS ON RED SOX SQUAD; BUT FEW ROOKIES

BOSTON, Jan. 24—(AP)—A scarcity of recruit players was the feature of the official roster of the Boston Red Sox announced today by President Bob Quinn, among the 32 players listed for the southern training camp at Pensacola, Fla., next month, but eight were newcomers.

Although the club is short on recruits, it is long on pitchers and Manager Heinie Wagner will inspect the offerings of 18 hurlers before selecting his 1930 staff.

Carnera to Fight in Chicago

CHICAGO, Jan. 24—(AP)—Primo Carnera, huge Italian heavyweight has been matched for a 10-rounder with Elzear Rioux, Canadian heavyweight champion at Chicago stadium January 31. Carnera will leave New York for Chicago tomorrow.

BEAUREGARD BROTHERS WIN FEATURE BOUTS AT SHYMA CLUB BOXING SHOW

The Fighting Beauregards, Al and Minnew, came into their own last night at the Shyma club show when they both won their bouts in decisive fashion. Al beat a clever boy in Frankie Minerva of Brooklyn in the ten-round main go, while Minnew gave Mush Moriarty of Norwich a terrific pasting in a four-round special attraction. Minnew stole the show from his more noted brother and his bout was the outstanding feature of what was an excellent card.

Lou (Dynamite) Brouillard of Danielson had a tough time in getting the decision over Arthur Lee, colored battler of Bridgeport, in the eight-round semi-final.

Freddie Neal of Worcester had a slight edge on Young Lavigne of the Sub Base in a six-round preliminary. Ero Peterson of Worcester won a clean-cut decision over Benny Novak in a slow six-round bout which opened the show.

Minnew Beauregard, the Hero

Minnew (Shires) Beauregard made good his boast last night that he could beat Mush Moriarty of Norwich in a real fight. Minnew proved himself to be a fighter beyond all shadow of a doubt. The Taftville lad was in perfect physical condition and what he lacked in ring strategy he amply made up in his determination to win. Minnew worked for 12 minutes at top speed and at the end of those 12 minutes Mush Moriarty was a thoroughly beaten boy. In the first round for about a minute Minnew fought with caution but a clip on the chin made him forget all the science he had absorbed in boxing with his younger brother.

With both hands whirling like a wind-mill, Minnew tore into Mush and kept tearing in. The best the Norwich boy could do was a countering left jab which served only to make the Taftville fighter more aggressive. In the third round, Minnew had Mush on the verge of a knockout but the gameness of Moriarty carried him through the round. The house was in an uproar during the entire bout, which proved the feature of the show. Minnew made good and the Fancy Corner boys are proud of him.

Al Beauregard Beats Better Man

Al Beauregard, the midget slugger of the Fighting Beauregards, last night beat a better man than himself. That is, he beat a boy who was wise in the ways of the ring and one of the cleverest boxers that Beauregard has ever fought. It was the Beauregard spirit of keeping everlastingly at it that gained him the decision. Minerva had a left hand that worked with the rapidity of a serpent's tongue but there was apparently little sting to it and although he landed frequently to Beauregard's head and face it did not seem to bother Beauregard to any great extent. As a boxer Minerva was in a much higher class than Beauregard, but Beauregard simply pummeled his way to the verdict. Minerva showed flashes of aggressiveness but seemed content for the greater part of the time to coast along and fight a defensive fight. Minerva took plenty of body punishment but kept his jaw covered and out of the way from Beauregard's haymakers.

Brouillard Whips Tough Boy

Lou (Dynamite) Brouillard of Danielson failed to live up to his sobriquet of Dynamite, in his bout with Arthur Lee, of Bridgeport, and although he won the decision he did not look so hot. Lee was a boxer with a world of ring knowledge and a defense that Brouillard could not penetrate to do any damage. Lee was on the defensive the greater part of the fight but he shook Brouillard at frequent intervals and in one round Brouillard dropped to his knees complaining of a foul but the referee gave him a minute rest and ordered him to continue. Brouillard's aggressiveness and his continual punching carried him through to the verdict.

Peterson Takes Verdict

Neal Takes Close Decision

Freddie Neal of Worcester took a hairline decision over Young Lavigne of the Sub Base in the second six rounder. The bout was close with Neal hitting the cleaner punches.

The card as a whole was exceptionally good and the promoters are to be congratulated. A last minute substitution was made in the main go when it was found that San Sanchez had gone back to Mexico and did not show up. However, Minerva proved a better boy and gave the fans plenty for their money. The promoters regret that they had to make the last minute substitution, through no fault of their own.

CARNERA, THE MIGHTY, HAMMERS DOWN PETERSON IN THE VERY FIRST ROUND

NEW YORK, Jan. 24—(AP)—In the midst of tremendous excitement generated by 18,000 howling fanatics, Primo Carnera, the man monument from Italy, scored his first knockout in America tonight, blasting one Big Boy Peterson from the picture in something less than half a round.

After appropriate unveiling ceremonies, the 269 pound ambling Alp turned the party into a Roman holiday, smiting Peterson to the floor three times for assorted counts before finishing him in one minute and ten seconds of what was to have been a ten round joust. With remarkable speed and the knowledge of what to do with it, Carnera dropped the startled westerner for tolls of 3, 8, and 4, before applying the right hand quietus.

Peterson stands six feet four himself and weighs 209 pounds but as far as effectiveness was concerned he might just as well have tangled with a fast freight, his attack consisted of two waves with the left hand that neither brushed nor came close enough to Carnera's head, looming 6 feet, 6 inches above the deck, to be called direct hits. For the rest of the brief exhibition, Peterson, from his expression, apparently very much startled at what was going on, was either rising, falling, or resting on the canvas.

Add Warren, young heavyweight from Chapel Hill, N. C., handed Ora Buck Weaver, husky importation from Medicine Lodge, Kansas, a thorough beating tonight in the first ten round bout on the card. Warren weighed 184 1-2 pounds, Weaver 200 1-2. There were no knockdowns.

Dick Gibbons, young heavyweight from St. Paul, scaling 201 1-2 pounds, knocked out K. O. Bill Duggan, a 193 pounder from Adamsville, Ga., in the final round of a six-round preliminary. They were strong, rough but clumsy youngsters and exhausted when Duggan went down for the first and last time under a right hand belt to the chin.

Larry Johnson, crack Negro light heavyweight from Chicago and a demon puncher with his right hand, scored a sensational seven round knockout over Freddy Lenhart, rugged battler from Spokane, Washington, after knocking the westerner down five times. Right hand punches floored Lenhart for counts of eight, seven and eight in the fifth round and eight and ten in the seventh. The final round lasted 2:05. Johnson weighed 177, Lenhart 177 1-2.

50 horsepower six-cylinder engine

Not until you drive the new Chevrolet Six can you appreciate what a wonderful improvement has been made in its famous six-cylinder valve-in-head engine. With its capacity increased to 50 horsepower, it has great reserve energy for sweeping up the steepest hills—for swift acceleration—and for sustained high speeds. Its power flows evenly and smoothly. And it is extremely flexible in traffic. In fact—it does everything you could possibly want a motor to do. Yet it is remarkably economical in its use of gasoline and oil. Come in today for a demonstration.

C. F. C. FIVE HAS BEEN DISBANDED

About five years ago this winter a small group of local youths got together and, being sick and tired of playing pick-up basketball, decided to form a team for better or worse. These boys, members of a club at the Central Baptist church known as the Central Fellowship Council, rightfully enough took the first letters of their organization and Norwich became familiar with the C. F. A. basketball team.

The first year was not such a big one for the boys and neither was the second but after that they started to do things and go places so that they became in time, to be known as one of the best amateur outfits. Many are the battles and rugged ones that have been fought out by this team with the Plainfield Buddies and Hartford Central Baptists, their most ardent rivals and many are the thrills they gave to their loyal following.

But, alas and alack, 1930 is another season and with it has come the breaking up of this little group. The C. F. C. is no more and the original five, Floyd Lambert and "Zeke" Leffingwell, forwards, Floyd Neil, center and Aubrey Brown and Howard Ludlow, guards and the coach Emery Davis, Y boys director, no more plans nightly what they are going to do to make it hot for the opposition. Of these five three are now playing with the Y Seniors, Brown, Leffingwell and Ludlow, the second named being manager of the crack local five.

MALONEY KAYOES EMANUAL IN SECOND

BOSTON, Jan. 24—(AP)—Jimmy Maloney, Boston heavyweight scored a two round knockout over Armand Emanuel, of Los Angeles, here tonight in the Boston Garden's feature contest. The Boston battler dropped his opponent with a left hook to the body. Emanuel's seconds claimed he was fouled but Referee Jack Sheehan counted him out without hesitation. Maloney, who had 15 pounds on his opponent, paid but little attention to Emanuel's light blows and appeared bent on ending the affair long before the ten round limit.

The many friends of Andrew Pryzekop of Fifth street will be pleased to learn that he is resting as comfortably as can be expected at the W. W. Backus hospital where he is a patient, after meeting with a painful accident while at his work as a carpenter. He was working at his brother's house at Prospect park and slipped on the ice. A chisel that was in the back-pocket of his overalls went into his back about eight inches. His farm is located on the Preston City road. At the carbarn at six o'clock, the mercury was down to four degrees below zero. There was a heavy white frost that covered the trees and shrubs, making a very pretty sight as the sun came up.

TOLD LEGION DISTRICT MEETING OF WORK OF U. S. VETERANS BUREAU

Major T. J. Bannigan of Hartford, regional manager of the United States Veterans' bureau, Dr. Stephen Maher, regional medical director, and T. H. Daly, chief of adjudication, were the speakers here Friday night at Elks' hall before an open meeting of the fifth district, American Legion, giving a very clear description of the work of the Veterans' bureau.

There was an attendance of about 80 when Joseph Bellefleur, district commander, called the meeting to order and introduced Major Bannigan.

Major Bannigan entered upon an instructive description of the work of the bureau and declared that changes are to be expected in the line of more beneficial legislation through the next congress. Showing how large the work is he stated that the bureau for this region has had 7,991 claims filed, has 3,608 active claims under which compensation is drawn, has seven cases in government hospitals, 340 other hospital cases, 362 minor wards and 340 incompetent wards.

He mentioned the million dollar hospital that is to be built at Newington, with 250 bed capacity, and stated that there had been $1,336,180 made in loans on the so-called bonus since 1927.

He urged that American Legion men urge their "buddies" not to pass up the government insurance, but to get their war-risk insurance re-instated if it had been allowed to lapse.

Dr. Maher described the medical side of the bureau work, mentioning the matter of hospitalization, emergency service through designated medical examiners, and the condition under which medical service is rendered to the soldier through the veterans' bureau.

He was followed by Mr. Daly, who spoke particularly along the line of verification of claims, pointing out the necessity for filling out answers to all the questions on the claim blanks, especially those relating to previous medical treatment and pre-war occupation. He said that the burden of proof was upon the applicant, but that the veterans' bureau really acted as attorney for the applicant in doing everything it could to make his claim as strong as possible, and it welcomed all the co-operation it could get on the part of the claimant.

He said it was expected that congress would liberalize the law so that many veterans whose claims have been disallowed heretofore will have their claims allowed.

The speakers answered a number of questions from the audience at the conclusion of their talks.

It is also noted in the complaint that the Vitos are the owners of large tracts of land with buildings thereon, located at Lord's Point in the town of Stonington, and that in order to defraud Leo of the judgement they transferred to Edward Vito this property on Dec. 17, 1929. The plaintiff is also seeking to have the court declare this transfer null and void.

WRECKAGE OF THE EIELSON AIRPLANE HAS BEEN FOUND; NO TRACE OF THE FLIERS

Plane Was Discovered on An Island Near the Coast of Siberia, 90 Miles Southeast of North Cape—Wreckage Indicates That the Fliers Had Been Killed Instantly—Bodies Probably Buried in the Snow—Plane Had Fallen From High Altitude—Parts Strewn Over a Wide Area—Discovery Was Made By Pilots Crosson and Gillam.

SEATTLE, Wash., Jan. 26—(AP)—A radio message to the Seattle Times from the ice-bound steamer Nanuk said the airplane flown by Carl Ben Eielson has been found 90 miles east of North Cape. The plane was badly wrecked, but no trace of Eielson or his mechanic, Earl Borland, was found.

The message added that it was feared the bodies of the two fliers would be found buried in the deep drifts of snow which all but covered the plane.

The wreckage was discovered yesterday by Pilots Joe Crosson and Harold Gillam while making an exploratory flight fromthair base at the Nanuk. The plane's cabin was split wide open, the motor torn from the fuselage and wreckage strewn over a wide area.

Provisions in the plane were untouched. The door of the cabin was jammed and a slab of bacon fell out when Crosson and Gillam explored the wreck. The two fliers said they would take off again as soon as possible carrying men with them to aid in clearing away the snow in search of the bodies of the two missing aviators

The scene of the wreck is near the region where native reindeer herders reported they heard a plane circling on Nov. 9, the day Eielson disappeared on a flight from Teller, Alaska, to the Nanuk at North Cape.

Crosson and Gillam said they were convinced Eielson and Borland were instantly killed. The motor of the plane had been flung 100 feet from the cabin, an indication of the violence of the impact when the plane hit the earth. The right wing also was demolished and the tail broken off.

Crosson said he did not think Eielson was attempting to land at the time of the crash. He said the wreckage was about ten miles inland on what he believed was a small island in a lagoon. He had flown over the region before in his search for the missing men, but had been unable to see the wreckage because of low visibility. The two pilots had taken off about 9:30 a. m. yesterday on their flight and had flown about an hour and a half when they found the wreckage.

While attempting to fly to the ice-bound fur trader Nanuk at North Cape, Siberia, to take off members of the crew and furs, Carl Ben Eielson and Earl Borland disappeared November 9. Frank Dorbrant, flying another plane on the same mission returned to Teller, Alaska, when visibility was too poor to reach the ship. Both planes previously had made one trip and six members of the crew and about 1,500 pounds of furs had been transported to the Alaskan shore.

It was nine days before Dorbrandt was able to get into the air and poor visibility then kept him from reaching the Nanuk.

Bad weather and a minor accident combined to make an immediate search for the airmen impossible and no great effort was expended as it was believed they had landed in some sheltered place to await good flying weather.

Several more attempts to reach the Nanuk by air were unsuccessful because of fogs encountered by Dorbrandt over Bering straight before he was joined by Joe Crosson and Harold Gillam at Teller to aid in the search.

SOVIET AVIATOR STARTS FLIGHT TURNED WRECKAGE

KRASNOYARSK, Siberia, Jan. 26.—(AP)—Soviet aviator, Ivan Chukhnovsky, after many previous unsuccessful attempts today started on his long flight to Cape North where the wreckage o the airplane of Carl Ben Eielson and Earl Borland was found yesterday.

He was accompanied by three assistants and the correspondent of a Moscow newspaper. Because of the weight of his passengers and the lack of snow on the flying field the aviator was forced to unload some of his cargo of food supplies and extra fuel.

OFFER TO RESCUE CHICAGO FROM IMPOVERISHMENT

CHICAGO, Jan. 26—(AP)—A $20,000,000 rescue offer dangled before the eyes of Chicago's impoverished governments today but there was no assurance they would grab it.

It was not that the money would not be welcome. Even to a community $290,000,000 in debt, as Chicago is reported to be, $20,500,000 is a considerable sum. It would at least pay off some of the back salaries and keep up necessary expenses for a while.

But the conditions that came with the offer by the citizens' relief committee were that the officials must agree to a rigid economy program and that this must be under he supervision of he citizens' committee. The money is to be raised through the sale of tax anticipation warrants to heavy tax payers.

Aderman Oscar F. Neson, administration leader in the city council, declared the "elected public officia: should not submi" to the dictates of outsiders in the conduct of governmental business."

Although not adverse to accepting help from the citizens' committee, Nelson said the committee's deciding how the money should be spent would "weaken, if not destroy, the confidence of the people in their elected officials."

"PRACTICAL JOKE" THAT TURNED INTO TRAGEDY

ATLANTA, Ga., Jan. 26—(AP)—Police sought in vain today for some explanation of the alleged blackmail telephone calls to he wife of Otis C. Waler, which were made the basis last night of an attempted "practical joke" that turned into tragedy with the death of a girl and the probably fatal shooting of her man companion.

Confronted at his apartment door by a woman and man who commanded him to "Stick 'Em Up; We've Got You," Waller believed the blackmailers had come to carry out threats against his wife, and opened fire. When the smoke cleared he found a couple whom he knew as "William Warren" and his wife, "Cora Belle," lying in the hallway, the girl dead and the man wounded. The couple rented an apartment from Waller.

DECISION CALLED FOR BY DICTATOR OF SPAIN

MADRID, Jan. 26—(AP)—General Primo de Rivera today issued an official note calling upon the heads of the army, navy and civil guards to decide whether he should remain dictator of Spain.

In his manifesto, the dictator said his power had been derived from the military, and the military leaders alone had the authority to unseat him. He asked the captains-general and other high leaders either to meet in Madrid to consider his regime and decide whether he deserved continued confidence, or to write him their opinions, offering to resign "within five minutes" should the chiefs recommend such a course.

FLEEING GUARDSMAN KILLED BY A SERGEANT

DETROIT, Jan. 26—(AP)—The killing last night of a young national Guardsman as he was fleeing from a sergeant who had gone to his home to arrest him promises to result in an intensive investigation by state authorities.

From Governor Fred A. Green down officials of the state military were unanimous in expressing a desire for getting at all the facts in the case.

Ajutant General John . Bersey declared that, on the basis of first reports, the killing was unwarranted.

Major Frank Rine, commander of the battalion of the 125th infantry, to which the victim, Stanley Prusinowski, belonged, would make no official statement other than to say that the slayer, Sergeant Joseph Poggione, 28, apparently had conformed to regulations by firing a warning shot before he directed a bullet at the fleeing youth.

Members of Prusinowski's family said he was 16 years old, but Major Rine pointed out thta he must have represented his age as 18 or more in order to enlist in the national guard, which he joined last August.

RADIO OPERATOR IN TOUCH WITH BYRD EXPEDITION

LONG BEACH, Calif., Jan. 26—(AP)—Don Wallace, amateur operator of radio station W6AM here, said he was in touch with the Pyrd expedition near the south pole between 1 and 2 o'clock this morning and that the expedition is showing no concern over the possibility of being ice bound through the winter.

Informed by Wallace of newspaper reports that there was some alarm felt for the expedition in the United States and that other nations had been asked to aid in reaching the group near the south pole the operator answered:

"Much ado about nothing. We expect to be out of cold storage soon. Evidently there is more worrying in the U. S. than here at the pole. We are taking all precautions. It is true we are not alarmed."

SENATE NEARING END OF TARIFF REVISION

WASHINGTON, Jan. 26—(AP)—After four and a half months of adding and subtracting—in consideration of the house tariff bill, senate leaders are beginning to see the end of the revision process in their chamber.

That does not mean that a measure backed by a majority of both houses will be ready for deposit on the white house doorstep in the next week or ten days, but when the senate does pass the bill a great sigh of relief will go up from the weary legislators, and the tariff bill of 1930 will be well on the road to completion.

The usual conference with the house to adjust differences between the bills passed by both houses must yet be held, and that itself is expected by party chieftains to take at least a month or more.

Baker was recognized in Malden last night by Sergeant John T. Murphy. After warning Murphy and another officer, that he would shoot, police said, Baker opened fire and then ran away. A companion, George A. Leet, 19, who is also under indictment for the Fendell slaying, was captured as he attempted to escape with Baker.

Communists Wave Red Flag In Bombay

Attempted to Pull Down [illegible]pendence Flag at [illegible]dence Day Meeting

BOMBAY, India, [illegible]—(AP)—Three hundred commu[illegible] mill workers rushed the platform [illegible] Chowpathy eSa Face today while a monster crowd was holding an Independence day meeting, pulled down the independence flags and sought to hoist the red flag in its place.

A disorderly scene followed, communists denounced Mahatma Ghandi for his "lukewarm congressional program." Eventually the communists were ejected. A number of women seated around the platform, among them the wife of Jawaharlal Nehru, president of the nationalist congress, were rescued from their precarious position by adherents of their faction.

This clash was the only serious one reported up to late tonight. British officials had awaited the Independence day celebration with some trepidation and police everywhere had been greatly reinforced as a preventive of trouble.

Huge processions were held here and in New Delhi, Calcutta, Lahore and Ahmadabad but the police had a comparatively easy task in confining the demonstrations to raising the national flag and shouts of "Down with the Union Jack."

Today was celebrated in various parts of India as "Independence day," in accordance with the decision of the All-India congress at Lahore last Christmas.

A great meeting at the Bombay headquarters of the congressional commmittee opened the Independence day program by hoisting the national flag amid cries of "Long live the revolution," "up with the national flag," and "down with the Union Jack." Speakers urged the crowd to carry on an unceasing but non-violent campaign to free the country from foreign domination and make their independence a reality.

One of those arrested was Elbert Totherow, an organizer for the National Textile Workers' union, which has operated in this section in opposition to the United Textile Workers of America, a branch of the American Federation of Labor. The others arrested gave their name, as Clarence Smith and Joseph Carr, both of Charlotte.

Mrs. Kerse was in a serious condition tonight, hospital physicians said, with a portion of a bulet in her brain.

Heath told police he shot the nurse when she knocked him down. The police theory was that Heath was delirious and tried to get up and that the nurse's efforts to quiet him were annoying, and prompted him to shoot her.

The patient died while police were still investigating the case.

Wind Of Hurricane Force Hits Portugal

Houses in Lisbon Unroofed—20 Fishboats Have Been Missing Several Days.

LISBON, Portugal, Jan. 26—(AP)—Portugal was swept today by a storm which tied up traffic in the Tagus river, caused considerable damage in Lisbon, and intensified the anguish felt by relatives of the personnel on a fleet of twenty fishboats missing several days.

All small vessels in the Tagus found refuge in docks, but ocean liners were unable to berth on account of the storm. With the help of tugboats the liner Lima, stranded in mid-stream, landed her passengers, all from Madeira, and the Azores and Canary Islands.

In Lisbon the wind rose to hurricane force, unroofing houses and crippling street traffic. A driving rain which had fallen 48 hours without interruption flooded basements in the lower part of the city. Ferryboat service between Lisbon and the opposite bank of the Tagus was suspended. Several boats broke from their moorings and went adrift on the river.

Huge flakes of snow fell in Braganca, Portugal's orange belt, where since yesterday the temperature has been around zero. The northern provinces were swept by blizzards and violent wind storms. At Espozende a tornado wrecked a stone bridge Several hundred cattle were drowned, and the countrysie was devastate.

One fishing vessel reached land at dawn today after battling for a day and a night with mountainous waves. Hundreds gathered at the pier to welcome the mariners with tears of joy. Distraught wives and mothers kept vigil all night on the cold shore searching the horizon for other missing fish boats which carried members of their families. They still retained hope that the rest of the fleet might be safe.

CAPTAIN AND THREE SEAMEN LOST LIVES

DIGBY, N. S., Jan. 26.—(AP)— The sea took four lives and tossed two coastal steamers upon the rocks of Digby Neck, last night in a storm which swept this section. Captain Sinclair Baker was dashed to death as he attemited to make land with a life line from one of the stricken vessels. The other three were washed overboard.

Captain Baker, who was the skipper of the Ruby L., gave his life in an attempt to save his crew and the sailors aboard the Hankinson by jumping into the raging sea with a life line and trying to swim to safety. He was crushed on the rocks by the same mountainous waves which swept Captain Powell of the Hankinson and the two seamen from the decks of their steamer.

The survivors climbed high on the masts of the Ruby L., and clung to the rigging as waves swept over them, and the steamers, both wooden, started to break up.

LALONE AND MOULTHROPE DECLINE TO DISCUSS JACKSONVILLE SLAYING

JACKSONVILLE, Fla., Jan. 26—(AP)—Two tight-lipped convicts from Connecticut slept in the county jail here tonight after a day of questioning in which they refused to discuss the slaying of a Jacksonville detective, with whose murder they are charged.

The two, Roland Lalone and Watson Moulthrope, were returned here early today from Pensacola where they were captured after a state-wide search.

The two, according to the police sat in silence, while another companion from Connecticut, told of the events on the night that Detective Willie Smith was killed and Detective Willie Jones was seriously wounded.

The third convict was Leo Landry who became separated from the two others after the shooting and was captured here by two citizens two days later. In the presence of Lalone and Moulthrope Landry told his version of the shooting, declaring Moulthrope fired the shot which killed Smith and Lalone wounded Jones. His confession in which he denied he had fired a single time, was taken by a court stenographer, but was not signed.

"That's his story," was the only comment Moulthrope and Lalone would make after Landry had finished his statement. Their refusal to talk surprised officers because County Detective Fred King said Moulthrope had made a confession to him in the county jail at Pensacola and that both had talked freely in the northwest Florida city.

Immediately upon their arrival here, however, Lalone announced: "We will tell you in detail every movement we made from the time we escaped from Connecticut until 10 o'clock on the morning of the shooting in Jacksonville. But anything we tell you that happened after that you can put it down as a lie."

Smith and Jones were shot when they sought to question the trio while they were riding in an automobile bearing a Massachusetts license.

The two convicts were bound hand and foot when they left Pensacola yesterday and placed in a compartment of a Pullman car. Four local officers and two from Connecticut guarded the pair.

They were questioned at length Saturday night and admitted they had robbed a garage at St. Augustine after Lalone struck the proprietor over the head with a pistol. They rifled the cash register of $30 they said.

They also confessed on the train to robbing several homes in Jacksonville. Moulthrope told Detective King in Pensacola, the official said that after the shooting here on January 17, they traveled through several towns in Georgia and Alabama before reaching Pensacola.

At Cairo, Ga., they spent the night in the city jail after asking police for a place to sleep.

HOUSE WETS TO PRESS LAW ENFORCEMENT COMMISSION

Some Are Determined to Seek a Showdown From the Commission on 2.75 Beer—Representative Dyer Contends That if the Commission Thinks That Modification of the Prohibition Law Will Help Law Enforcement It Should So Report—Other Prohibition Problems Are Confronting President Hoover and the Treasury Chiefs.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 26—(AP)—The wet and dry controversy on Capitol hill again is pointing toward President Hoover and his law enforcement commission on proposals for 2.75 beer.

Representative Dyer, republican, Missouri, author of a 2.75 per cent beverage measure, called yesterday on Mr. Hoover to discuss this proposa. and announced today he would invite members of the law enforcement commission before the house judiciary committee to express themselves on the modification issue.

The Missourian is ranking republican on the judiciary committee and therefore in a position to speak with some authority. He expressed confidence that the committee would take up his bill sometime this week. He was confident members of the commission would accept an invitation to appear before the committee. He was certain he would ask them, if they did, their views on 2.75 beer.

Mr. Hoover and the treasury chiefs also face another prohibition showdown this week in filling the office of comptroller of customs for the port of New York. Over the protest of the Anti-Saloon league, the two senators from New Jersey, both republicans, have recommended the reappointment of Colonel Arthur F. Foran.

The Anti-Saloon league charges Foran with lax prohibition enforcement. Foran has replied with a complaint that the opposition to him is "political and religious." He is a Catholic. The New Jersey senators have demanded a report from the prohibition service of a mysterious raid on Foran's country residence last week.

Meanwhile, the dry-dominated house and senate will go ahead this week with the legislation urged by the president and the law enforcement commission for strengthening the dry laws.

The house expenditures committee will hear Attorney General Mitchell tomorrow on the bill of Chairman Williamson for transfer of the prohibition enforcement service from the treasury to the justice department. This is one of the bills urged by the administration.

House wets have made futile attempts during hearings on this bill to draw administration leaders into discussion of the merit sot the dry law. An attempt to have Mrs. Mabel Walker Willebrandt former assistant attorney general in charge of prohibition cases, called for examination also has been frustrated. Mrs. Willebrandt has declined the invitation.

Senate judiciary sub-committees considering the dry law legislation also expect to get into action this week, but the big prohibition show in the senate must await final disposition of the long pending tariff.

Representative Dyer called on the president to have him urge the law enforcement commission to study his proposal for 2.75 beer. He had nothing to say about his interview with Mr. Hoover but said he was determined to get some expression from the commission.

"The commission has recommended legislation to congress to help law enforcement," said the Missourian, "If the commission thinks that modification of the prohibition law will help enforcement it ought to report it."

The house judiciary committee several years ago held hearings on the Dyer proposal but it never took any action on the measure. Nor is it likely that any action will be taken at this session, although Mr. Dyer is certain the committee at least will consider his bill.

CASHIER TOOK $5,800 CASH AND PRETENDED HOLD-UP

NEW YORK, Jan. 26—(AP)—A cashier in a department store who reported last night that he had been robbed of $5800 of the store's cash by a lone hold-up man, today confessed, police said, that he had taken the money himself.

Through long hours of questioning he stuck to his story. He even went to police headquarters this morning and pointed out two photographs as those of men resembling the hold-up men. Both men were found to be in prison.

Finally, police said, he confessed that he made three trips out of the store during the day, each time handing over part of the stolen money to an alleged accomplice, Andrew Leone, 31. Police searched Leone's house and found $4,366. They arrested him. The rest of the money was not found.

Mr. Gillette was born in the Buckley Hill section of Colchester, July 11, 1849, the son of Selden and Josephine Gillette. His grandparents were among the early settlers of the town. Mr. Gillette attended Colchester public schools and Bacon Academy. A few years after completing his education he went into the retail grain business in Gerryville, Conn., and later in Meriden. In 1877, he returned to Colchester with his bride, Jennie E. Babcock and devoted his time to agriculture at the old Gillette homestead on Buckley hill. He was one of the board of directors of Colchester Creamery Co., and it was he who generously gave the site on which the creamery building was erected. He was a charter member of Colchester grange No. 78, P. of H. and was an unusually active and devoted member of the Congregational church. For a number of years he was a member of the town board of assesors. In 1923, Mr. Gillette sold the homestead and with his wife moved into the village.

In March next, Mr. and Mrs. Gillette would have been married fifty-three years.

His many friends here and in surrounding towns respected him for his generous, honest business dealing, his optimistic views of life and his cheery, cordial manner. Up to a few months ago, he took great pleasure in a daily stroll to the business section. Besides his wife, he is survived by a daughter, Mrs. Madeline G. Martin of Hartford and a grandson, Gillette K. Martin, a student at Phillips-Exeter Academy, Exeter, N. H.

TOLD WORCESTER LIONS OF FIND IN A BIG ICE CAKE

A cake of ice that came all the way from New Hampshire in a freight car with brother cakes to a local ice dealer was 24 inches thick, clear as a lake, you could shave in it. The iceman, Jake DeBerry saw something that looked like a gold watch chain in the middle of the cake. Out came the pick and Jake started to work on the mystery. Picking away like a woodpecker at a school house door the happy iceman was near his find at last he came to it, after working on the New Hampshire ice for 52 minutes. He found it was a solid gold watch chain, the letters were H. D. P. on the charm of the end of a log also the date, 1885, making it 45 years old. By the looks, some old woodchopper was cutting ice when work got slack and lost his chain that he must have carried for many years. It was worth a good price of change for it was in good shape for its long ride, about 980 miles. Jake DeBerry was all smiles over the gold chain and showed it to every one he met on his route and told the story of the huge piece of frozen water that came a long way to this village and believed me, with that chain across my vest, and all dressed up, bound to Taftville, to see his sweetheart and tell her that a cake of New Hampshire ice had brought him luck. It was bright gold, hand-made, each link and some day will be worth money.

The gang at the gas station was kidding him over it and said "Well, Jake, did you find a Ford car in that cake of ice? or a horse and wagon?" William Franklin, dry as a herring in a meat market, said "You might find Capt. Kidd's tea-kettle of gold if you look in another cake of that ice!" This pulled a good laugh with the gang. But Jake was happy after all, if they did kid him. DeBerry was asked would he tell all about the cake of ice with chain in it for the Lions' club in Worcester, Mass. The trip was made by auto. It was a snowy evening and all the Lion members with their tall hats came to hear the young fellow talk. "This is my first time to speak before a crowd and it makes my legs shake like a jazz dancer; but, as I came a long way and was asked by the president of the Lions, I am here! It was in the village of Noank and my job is that of an iceman—to make people happy and help keep the chicken cold for Sunday dinner. Not long ago a carload of ice came in rail after a trip of 980 miles. Cakes thick as a 10x10 timber. I saw something shining; so after getting the pick, I cut and swore almost an hour and found it was a gold watch chain 45 years old, real gold, not from the 25-cent store! I will let all of the 125 members here see this wonderful hand-made chain."

One old member who could tell the value of gold, rubbed off his glasses, looked at it for ten minutes and said he never saw anything like it in his life. Taking out a roll of bills large as a watermelon, he said "I will give you $250 for that chain!" The iceman scratched his head (with about nine hairs on top) and said "Well, old-timer, I will sell it to you. It sure will do you more good than me." That old man was more pleased with that gold watch chain than with a new Ford auto. The crowd cheered happy-go-lucky DeBerry till he told another ice story.

"When I was in Chicago, about 20 years ago selling ice, I looked in one cake of ice and saw a triple-potato, large as a musk melon that had grown in the ice cake. I got out the pick and worked about 45 minutes, before reaching the monster potato. I weighed it on the scales that George Washington weighed his riding boots on, never told a lie and the three-in-one potato weighed three pounds—enough for a Terrance avenue beef stew. Then I put the queer potato on exhibition. It drew a large crowd to see it at the fair grounds. I gave it to an old farmer who could chew more tobacco than the great Art Shires on the baseball diamond. Farmer Eddie Nightgale kept it a long while to show it to his brother farmers around there, then told the story. The week before I came to the clam and fish town, he still had the freak potato. Well, gents, I have taken up a lot of your time, telling about what you can see grow in a cake of 24-inch ice and I hope you all enjoyed the talk. So I will sign off"

The crowd gave him a cheer that shook the hands on the city clock. A Massachusetts lunch was passed around the crowd with sponge cake and coffee that touched the spot. The floor was soon ready for an old-timers' dance. Six old-time fiddlers around the age of 81 kept the comers swinging and many lost their third wind and how the old fiddlers could play! In one evening they wore out many lovers! At a late hour Iceman DeBerry was ready to set sail for the fishing village, after a real evening of fun among the members of the Lions' club.

National Survey on Aluminum And House-to-House Canvassing

A large advertising agency in the middle west recently made an independent survey on aluminum sales, including those made by retail stores and house-to-house canvassers.

It was brought out in the survey that aluminum cooking utensils have by far the greatest public demand of all cooking ware—about 95% of the families interviewed use aluminum and only 5% do not.

The variation in thickness or weight of aluminum is one of the vexing problems with relation to prices. The thickness varies from 8 gauge (very heavy) to 26 gauge (very light)—but about 16 is considered standard. "Cut price" specials are usually on the thin aluminum, which does not always give satisfaction and does not last as long

It distinctly states in the survey that the canvasser secures MORE PER POUND than most retail stores charge—so that, on the average, the housewife is more likely to pay the canvasser a higher price than she could get the same article or of equal merit at a retail store.

And usually the canvasser comes from out of town—here today and gone tomorrow—not paying any taxes or license fee if he can escape it.

The labor cost on the heavy weight aluminum is ony one per cent more—so that the THIN ware, on a percentage basis, COSTS MORE to produce and makes it the MOST EXPENSIVE product when sold to the consumer on the basis of weight value.

Here in the Reid & Hughes store we carry THREE grades of aluminum—heavy, medium and light. Thus the customer has three choices and the added advantage of RELIABILITY, because we stand ready at any time to make an exchange or cash refund if goods are not satisfactory.

CRAP GAME, HOME BREW, THEFT BRING POLICE TO MOOSUP

(Special to The Bulletin)

DANIELSON, Jan. 26—A big money crap game, the seizure of some Canadian ale and home brew, and a robbery of All Hallows' church at Moosup put that community in the limelight Saturday night and kept several of the state officers stationed at the Danielson barracks down in that territory not only last night, but also today, getting the tangled ends of some phases of the affairs unsnarled and checking up on one angle or another of the untoward occurrences.

Adolph Lantagne, who has a pool room on Railroad street in Moosup, was placed under arrest after state officers checking up on his place had seized two sacks containing 62 bottles of Canadian ale from a car, said to belong to Lantagne, and which was parked outside of his place. Two cases of alleged home brew also were seized there. In addition to Lantagne the officers conducting the raid arrested Roy Hebert, George Parenteau and Abelard Parenteau, all of the town of Plainfield, all found in the Lantagne place, on charges of being intoxicated, and they were brought to Danielson. Lantagne was released under bonds of $300, and will make an appearance in the Plainfield town court to answer to alleged violations of the liquor laws.

Meanwhile, it appears, a big time crap game, for a small town, was in progress at an obscure place of business in Moosup, and three Providence men were among the players. As the game progressed some mention was made of the use of loaded dice, and almost immediately a general grabbing for the money in the pot started. That action started a near riot and when matters subsided a bit one of the Providence players was around yelping that someone had snatched $200 from his hand. He didn't get it back, so complained to the police, and with one of his companions was promptly arrested for gambling, a charge he already had admitted.

The crowd engaged in that game scattered promptly after the height of the trouble, and State Officers Elton Nolan and John Murphy were in Moosup this afternoon seeking to fix the identity of the players, that they might be placed under arrest.

The robbery at All Hallows' church had to do with filching such small sums of money as may have been in the poor boxes or votary stands. Sergeant G. L. Gardner of the Danielson barracks was checking on this matter this afternoon.

Joseph Rossie of Providence is the man who claims that $200 was snatched from his hand when the row started in the crap game. He and one of his companions, John Picello of Cranston, were arrested and released under bonds to appear when their case comes up in the Plainfield town court.

Investigation of the robbery at All Hallow's church at Moosup appears to establish that the loss there will probably not amount to more than $5 which was taken from poor boxes.

OBITUARY

Dr. Everett A. Bates

Friends here were informed Saturday morning of the sudden death at Springfield Friday night of Dr. Everett A. Bates, one of the most prominent physicians in western Massachusetts and who spent his boyhood days in Danielson. He was 69 years of age. Dr. Bates, who had been extremely busy with his practice and regarded as having overtaxed his strength, died at his home after having been busy with patients throughout the day.

Dr. Bates was the son of Mr. and Mrs. Loren Bates of Danielson, and he lived while here as a boy and youth at the Bates home, now known as the Kingsbury place, on Cottage street, across the way from the Methodist parsonage.

His early studies were made here. He later attended Williston academy at Easthampton and then entered Yale university. Following his graduation from Yale he entered the medical school of Harvard university, and there earned his degree of Doctor of Medicine. He has practiced during all of his professional career in Springfield and attained pre-eminence in his profession. Dr. Bates is survived by his wife, three daughters, Ruth, Elizabeth and Louise, the two former married, the latter at home, and by two sisters, Mrs. Earl C. Hopkins of Worcester, and Mrs. Donald Campbell of Chicago.

FUNERALS

Riley B. Witter

This afternoon at the home in Brooklyn, funeral services for Riley B. Witter, one of the oldest and best known citizens of that town were held at his home with a large number in attendance from Brooklyn and other communities and including attendance from Brooklyn and Killingly granges and Quinebaug Pomona grange. Burial was in the South cemetery at Brooklyn. The bearers were Judge Oscar F. Atwood, Marshall J. Frin, S. Irving Frink and Fred Miller. A. F. Wood was in charge of the arrangements.

Joseph Trahan

Saturday morning the funeral of Joseph Trahan was held from the home with services at St. James' church at 9 o'clock. Rev. Anthelme Mollard, M. S., was celebrant of the solemn high mass of requiem with Rev. Philip L. Massicot, pastor of All Hallows' parish at Moosup, as deacon, and Rev. J. A. Demers, M. S., as sub-deacon. Burial was in Holy Cross cemetery, Rev. Fr. Demers conducting the committal service. The bearers were Paul Dubuc, Alpherie Dubuc, Ernest Muiel, Daniel Kale, Morris Kelley and Omer Desautel. L. E. Kennedy was in charge of the arrangements.

Richard Infant

Saturday afternoon at 2 o'clock there was a service at St. James' church, Rev. J. A. Demers, M. S. officiating, for the infant daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Docithe Richard of Front street, the West Side. The child died Friday night. The body was entombed at Holy Cross cemetery. L. E. Kennedy was in charge of the funeral arrangements.

Secretary Clifford H. Starkweather of the Danielson Building and Loan association estimated Saturday that nearly 600 shares of the new series for Danielson's home-building campaign have been subscribed. This is highly encouraging in view of the fact that the real activity to make the campaign a success did not get underway until Friday. It will continue through the remainder of the month, and it is hoped to place 5,000 shares, which during the life of the issue, would produce $1,000,000 for the building of homes here.

A sidelight on the promise of much building activity in Danielson this year is the manner in which representatives of various construction concerns have flocked in here, hoping to share in one way or another in the benefits of the money to be expended. As to this, it may be said there is going to be no cleanup opportunities. The entire building program is on a strictly business basis and so will remain.

Danielson relatives were at Brooklyn this afternoon to attend the funeral services for Riley B. Witter.

Mrs. Ella Mills, of the West Side, left at the week end to spend several weeks visiting with Mr. and Mrs. George Foote at Southbridge.

Miss Mary Smith, for years a teacher in Danielson's schools, has gone to Maine to remain for a time.

The zero weather, cutting wind and general frigidity of today rated it about the coldest day of the season, not forgetting the last Saturday of November.

A queer little "blizzard" set in here early Saturday evening and there was a blinding swirl of snow for a few minutes. Apparently it heralded the coming of the cold wave, gripping this part of eastern Connecticut today.

Applications for renewal of operators' licenses are now going forward from Danielson to Hartford, the current ones expiring Feb. 28. In cases where renewals are asked for, the new applications need not be sworn to this year.

A breakdown in the heating plant at St. Alban's church this morning necessitated holding service in the Parish house, at the rear of the church.

You can invest your savings in many things, but a particularly attractive opportunity now presents itself. Buy shares of the Danielson Building and Loan association, bearing interest at the rate of 5 per cent per annum, and otherwise favor yourself by assisting in Danielson's home-building campaign.—adv.

Miss Priscilla Gingras, of Reynolds street, is to leave this week for New York for a visit.

General satisfaction was expressed here over the week end at the capture in Florida of Roland Lalone, bandit killer of State Officer Irving H. Nelson of the Danielson barracks, in Pomfret, nearly two years ago.

A marriage here Saturday by Judge W. Fenner Woodward, acting as a justice of the peace, was that of Elizabeth Cecilia Hammerton and Norman V. Ilg, both of Providence.

Rev. A. E. Gallup, of the Nazarene church, addressed a meeting of men at the Methodist Episcopal church this afternoon. The Laymen's league quartet sang.

Considering the extremely cold weather of today, there is seasonal interest here in the fact that next Sunday, Feb. 2, is "ground-hog" day, and as to whether the little animal will see his shadow if he emerges from snug winter quarters, the shadow forecasting that the backbone of winter is broken; or if it be cloudy, that there is much more cold weather ahead.

Charles Downs, of Goodyear, will be chairman of the committee of arrangements at the next meeting of Killingly grange, Feb. 3, this being designated as Older Men's night.

Herman M. Coulter, of New Bedford, formerly assistant treasurer at the Goodyear mills of this town, now with the corporation in a similar capacity in the Massachusetts city, and Mrs. Coulter were visitors over the week end with F. E. Bitgood.

A few more days of cold weather will assure Danielson of a bountiful ice crop for the remainder of the year, and dealers have been a bit worried about getting a crop for some time past.

PUTNAM

BANK COLLECTS $8000 ON SUPERIOR COURT JUDGMENT

(Special to The Bulletin.)

PUTNAM, Jan. 26—The addition of a sum of $8000, obtained on the strength of a superior court judgment awarded George M. Coffin, receiver of the defunct First National bank of this city against a Windham county contractor of wide repute, has been made to the sums of the receiver's trust now being gathered to give the creditors of the institution a closing dividend. Mr. Coffin today disclosed that the amount had been collected shortly after Judge Edward M. Yeomans of the superior court had given the bank a certificate of judgment. Several weeks ago Receiver Coffin made known the fact that one more dividend will be paid the creditors of the bank which failed on August 11, 1924. The amount of the dividend and the date upon which payment will begin are two factors which are being carefully guarded by the treasury department officials. To date, dividends amounting to 80 per cent, have been paid.

County Y. M. C. A. officials announced Saturday that arrangements are now being made for the annual state "Y" athletic events which will be held in February and March at various cities in the state. Indoor athletics will be held February 8, at Meriden. The state swimming meet will be held at Hartford on March 1, and the state basketball junior and senior tournaments will take place during a two day conference to be held at Storrs college, Storrs, Conn., on March 21-22.

The board of governors of the Putnam Country club at the annual meeting held last week, reported the serious consideration being given to the enlarging and improving of the clubhouse and on Saturday a beautiful architect's drawing was exhibited in one of the Main street show windows of the Bugbee corporation store. The drawing attracted much interest. Provisions in the plans have been made for the raising of the roof, adding sleeping quarters on the second floor and other rooms. On the lower floor new shower baths for men and women will be had, together with a new and larger living room and dance floor. This space could also be improvised as a dining room. No definite action, other than the drawing of the plans has been taken.

The maximum of Sunday's temperature was 22 degrees, which was even lower than the cold snap of Saturday. Notwithstanding the fact that the coldness of the day caused hundreds to refrain from their regular Sunday forms of outdoor diversion, winter sports in the city got away to a flying start this afternoon after a long spell of adverse weather conditions. Skating seemed to be the principal form of outdoor enjoyment in which hundreds participated during the day. With ice solid to a depth of 12 inches in many places, local hockey followers journeyed to Rose Ann rink on Killingly avenue, this afternoon to witness the weekly tilt between the north end aggregation known as the "Les Canadiens" and the east side Shippee hill sextet. "Dead Man's" which is nothing more than a steep hill on South Main street, in the rear of the Bugbee estate provided thrills galore for a large number of ski fans who watched the activities of the local ski artists as they glided (some gracefully) over the snow encrusted incline to a rather nerve tingling jump to the bottom. Coasting, too, is a popular form of sport which had a large calling today. From indications the day of the bobsled is not yet passed for scores of youngsters delighted in the long rides through the city's snow covered streets where automobile traffic was small.

Miss Emma Hall of Farrows street has returned to her home in this city after a recent trip to Detroit, Mich.

Miss Helen Maher of Hartford, a member of the nursing staff of St. Francis' hospital there, spent the week end at her home in Pomfret.

"The Fountain of Youth" was the title of a cantata presented by the girls of Woodstock academy, Friday evening. The presentation was given in the academy hall before a large audience. The young ladies were assisted by Miss Mae Taylor, nationally known soprano soloist. Entire supervision of the cantata was under Miss Louise Pike of East Woodstock.

According to word received here this week, Luke White, son of Mr. and Mrs. Michael L. White of Eden street, has the title role in a three act comedy by George M. Cohan, "A Prince There Was," to be presented in Auburn, N. Y., three nights starting Monday, Jan. 27. Mr. White was a midshipman at the United States military academy at Annapolis.

Ralph Gahan of Rye, N. Y., is spending a few days the guest of his mother, Mrs. John Gahan of Main street.

Miss Bernice Ciechowski of Rockville has returned to her home there after a visit with friends in this city last week.

Reports have it that visits to chicken farms in this section by thieves have been frequent, the matter claiming the attention of the state police of Danielson barracks.

Receipt of orders by northern Windham county woolen mills during the past week for large supplies of finished cloth will result in a boom period shortly for textile concerns which have felt the effects of the business depression of the past month, it was said today.

JEWETT CITY

BARN ON DOUGLASS PLACE IS BURNED TO THE GROUND

(Special to The Bulletin.)

JEWETT CITY, Jan. 26—Fire Sunday afternoon destroyed a barn and its contents owned by Alvin Douglass, on premises occupied by Newton Maynard, on the Stone Hill road, opposite the branch road, leading to the one-time mill village of Hopeville. Mr. Maynard was away when his wife looking out toward the barn discovered smoke and soon a burst of flame, coming through the roof. After running out to shout for help, to the nearest neighbor, some distance away, she asked by telephone for aid from the Jewett City fire company. Chief Field responded with the chemical equipment, realizing that no water would be available for the big engine. After a three-mile run, the firemen arrived to find the structure burned flat. The wind, blowing strong from the northwest saved the house. Besides the building, the only loss was a quantity of hay. A small boy of the family crying as if his heart would break, told the firemen that his pretty Christmas cart was "all burned up."

Sunday morning local thermometer readings were as low as 6 above. All day, the quick failed to get out of the upper 'teens, with the result that progress in winter weather had the boards.

SNOW ON THE ICE POND A HANDICAP IN HARVESTING

Seen Sunday evening, M. E. Shea of the firm of Shea Bros. said that this (Monday) morning, there would be seven-inch ice on the Dorrville pond. Four inches of snow on top, is proving a handicap in the freezing of the big fields, slowing down this process, it is claimed, close to an inch in 24 hours. Men were working all day Sunday rigging and getting ready for operation this (Monday) morning, a scraping device with a 30-foot boom, which is to be operated by means of a gasoline saw-mill engine. Cutting will begin at 9 inches. The packers in the big houses, as the 200-pound cakes come racing down the inclines, find their work of storing made doubly laborious, because of snow on top, which prevents the pike-men from sliding the heavy squares along the layer below.

E. Chenette, who cuts in the Hawkins' cove, reported 7 1-2 inches at sundown Sunday, where he had a gang of scrapers at work all day.

The six big houses are all empty, more ice being sold in Jewett City during the hot summer of 1928, than ever before. One more day of weather like Sunday, when the mercury didn't get above 20 at any time, and 1500 tons will be harvested in record time. In 1929 the houses were filled during the last week in January, after three separate promises had been ruined by warm rain and temperature above 32.

The waste-basket gets unsigned letters that are sent to the writers of this column. The one received Saturday could not have been used, had it been signed.

Mr. and Mrs. Perle Morgan of Hartford were visitors Sunday at W. R. Palmer's in Hopeville. Mrs. Morgan is Mr. Palmer's sister.

HUMORS OF LYCEUM DEBATE ON MOONLIGHT NIGHT IN 70's

Along in the late 70's, when the Jewett City lyceum was in flower, each week, momentous questions were discussed and settled. Some of the old-timers were recalling Sunday, that excitement ran high on one mid-winter night, when a long array of the leading debaters of Griswold met to decide the all-important questions:

Resolved, that earth's satellite known as the moon is made of green cheese.

The affirmative side was captained by the late Edwin Bennett, while the negative side was strongly fortified in its leader, Hezekiah L. Reade. Men are alive today who were present at this memorable debate. Mr. Bennett, though not a man of education, was a person of well remembered genius, sagacity and brilliant wit. H. L. Reade's well known oratorical ability, was backed by a store of general knowledge, that was hardly to be surpassed. It is said, that a crowded gallery heard the argument wax warm. Mr. Bennett presented a line of logic that was not to be gainsaid, while Mr. Reade was entirely at a loss to set forth any sort of substantiation or plausable statistics, which his opponent failed to overcome. The moon that night shone at its full, and at one stage of the debate, Mr. Bennett had the one hundred or more present, adjourn to a nearby field where the very moon herself seemed to substantiate his argument, even to the irregular moldy spots, like well seasoned Roquefort. When the debate was over and the meeting brought to a close, the judges unanimously declared, that with indisputable evidence Mr. Bennett had clearly and beyond the question of doubt, proven that the moon is, and always was made of green cheese. Therefore the question was decided unanimously for the affirmative.

WESTMINISTER

VOLUNTEER FIRE FIGHTERS SAVE GEO. BARSTOW HOUSE

Monday evening about 8:30 with the mercury hovering around the zero mark, a group of men made a stubborn fight and saved the house of George Barstow, at the foot of Westminister Hill from destruction by fire. The fire was discovered by two local game wardens, Charles Colburn and Mr. Daniels, who aroused the family. Flames and smoke were belching from the chimney in the main part of the large house. Telephone calls brought plenty of help in a few minutes. A portion of the roof was chopped away to gain access to the burning timbers. Shortly after the chimney fell with a crash narrowly missing a member of the fire fighters. The fire was brought under control shortly after the chimney fell. The damage has not been estimated. A full set of farm buildings including a large barn, poultry house, granery and tool house, only a few feet from the house must have been burned had the fire gotten beyond control.

COASTING IN PUTNAM

Called upon to put into effect the order of the mayor of Putnam that there must be no sliding in the streets, the policeman served the necessary notice and accompanied it with the statement that he hated to since "I was a kid once, myself."

There will be a full appreciation for the policeman's sentiments. They jibe with those of most other people. Probably the mayor feels the same way, but in ordering street sliding stopped he was actuated by the desire to prevent accidents, possibly fatalities.

Conditions today are not what they were before the day of automobiles. The highways are dangerous under any condition, but they are especially hazardous to the coasters when hills are used by motorists and coasters, or when coasting places intersect other streets. No one likes to interfere with a wholesome pleasure for children but it is preferable that such a thing should be done than to invite the killing of maiming of youngsters before preventive measures are applied.

Other cities have been confronted with the same problem that exists in Putnam. If it has been impossible to find safe coasting places in the highways, the practice has been forbidden in the interest of child safety. If hills can be restricted as safe sliding places by turning traffic in another direction, that expedient is adopted. If the coasting situation can be met by closing streets to vehicular traffic for limited periods in favor of the coasters, it proves rather satisfactory.

The aim in all instances is not to deprive children of pleasure such as their parents knew and enjoyed, real, exhilarating fun in the open air, but to protect them against what has come to be recognized as a real danger. The desire in Putnam is to forestall what has been happening in many other places, to lock the barn door before the horse is stolen and to profit by the experiences of others. It is better to stand in the way of a bit of fun than to leave the way open to a number of needless child funerals. And yet, the action taken may simply be the first step toward the provision of a coasting place for the children off the highways, or during restricted hours on certain suitable but reserved streets of the city. Putnam must recognize that the safety of its children is getting first consideration.

PORT AND BORDER COURTESIES

Because courtesy of the port has been extended to members of congress, high officials and others, when returning from other countries, there has existed what many were inclined to regard an unwarranted discrimination. This courtesy has permitted these favored ones to leave the vessels without delays, to go through customs without a stop and to bring into the country what would not be tolerated in the case of others. The situation has existed for a long time, even while others, the aged, the sick, the feeble, those in a hurry to catch trains or keep appointments, have been subjected to all kinds of bothersome delays.

Thus when the senate acts in favor of the plan to curb that courtesy at the port so that it will apply only to those in the diplomatic service it represents sentiment which has been freely expressed. Whether the house will support the matter is a question.

In this connection, there was also brought to attention a situation which exists in regard to the amount of goods that can be brought in free for personal use from other countries. At the present time the amount is $100. It seems not unreasonable and yet few probably understand the situation along the borders where those crossing the line frequently are able to bring in a substantial amount of goods without duty. A person making one or two trips abroad a year, or one or two visits to Canada or Mexico would not deprive the government of much revenue in case he brought in his limit of $100 worth of purchases each time, but the fellow who lives where he can cross the border every week, or oftener, can get large benefits from that law. With many along the borders doing this the country suffers.

In retaining the amount at $100 the senate probably acted wisely, but with the additional light being thrown upon the practice by border residents it seems not improbable that closer attention will be given to this matter which, if it cannot be stopped in any other manner, may have to be further regulated by stipulating the number of visits a person may make abroad and be entitled to bring dutiable merchandise home with him.

POLITICAL EXTRAVAGANCE

One has reason to wonder what the people of Chicago would do if there were an election scheduled there this week.

Chicago stands at the present time in an unenviable position. It has piled up a huge debt and it has indulged in such unwarranted expenditures that it has exceeded its borrowing capacity and today it hasn't the funds to pay its army of employes. It has been bending every effort to get more money in anticipation of taxes, but it encounters all kinds of difficulties. Chicago's credit has been shattered and the financial situation is steadily getting worse and in spite of it all the mayor is reported as being unwilling to agree to a policy of economy.

Extravagances have prevailed in the Windy city for some time. Politics of a nature peculiar to the big city has had its influence, and yet, now that the city has been put into a bad financial hole, there is no disposition on the part of those who must be held responsible for it to correct the situation. They are for going ahead in the same old channel although they appear to be on the rocks.

Getting right down to bedrock the people of that city are responsible for the city government and those administering it. Thus it is only natural to wonder what they would do in the event of an election at this time. Would they indicate by their votes that they were thoroughly disgusted with the manner in which the affairs of the city have been conducted, or would they take the view that everything is fine and insist upon its continuance?

Chicago would seem to be headed for a change if there are enough voters in the big city who place good and sound government above political extravagance. Not many cities would tolerate the financial situation which has been disclosed in Chicago. Not many administrations would operate along such lines and expect to be continued. With the present government in that city making the sorry showing that it has, the duty of the voters is clearly set forth just as soon as they get a chance. What they do will depend upon how ready they are to forget.

BUS DRIVER'S RESPONSIBILITY

It couldn't be expected that the killing of 17 persons in school busses at two crossings in Ohio would be regarded as an every-day occurrence. Those tragedies were not the first of their kind but they must have stirred the people of that state in a manner that will result in a higher degree of protection in the future.

Just what it will be or how it will be obtained is not disclosed at this time, but it cannot be overlooked that the drivers of school busses must be made to understand their responsibility and if they cannot measure up to it someone else should get the job.

School busses should be driven with full regard for those being transported. That means that there should be careful driving at all times, whether on a level highway or at a railroad crossing. They should be driven in such a manner that safety will result and not as if they were involved in a race or trying to establish a new record. If there is a railroad crossing on the route, give it due respect. That should be demanded in the contract with the driver. There is no need for taking chances. There is need for delivering the pupils at their destination without injury.

No harm will be done if a bus has to wait at a crossing to be sure no train is approaching. It is one of the requirements of a bus driver to keep out of danger and away from accidents, and if Ohio puts an iron-clad insistence upon such a demand henceforth it will be no more than ought to be expected.

But it is not solely Ohio that has reason for seeking intelligent, alert and careful bus drivers. It should be a requirement wherever arrangements have to be made for that form of transportation. The need for it has been fully established.

POLICY OF OBSTRUCTION

As chairman of the foreign relations committee, Senator Borah has lost no opportunities to handicap the administration. He is doing the same with the present administration in regard to Haiti that he did to the previous one relative to Nicaragua, although in the latter instance he was later obliged to climb down off his high horse and recognize that the opposition he created should not be maintained.

When President Hoover called for a commission to make a thorough inquiry into the conditions in Haiti, trouble was prevalent in Haiti. That has been quieted and now, long after the president asked for the commission and funds, the senate committee of which Senator Borah is chairman has approved the authorization of $50,000, but not the naming of a commission. This differs from the action long since taken by the house, and, inasmuch as authority to name a commission may not be necessary, the president may proceed as soon as the funds are available.

The purpose of Senator Borah and his followers is apparently to hide behind the tree so that he can throw stones at any inquiry that is made, an inquiry which he hasn't sanctioned. He hasn't advanced any better way of meeting the situation in Haiti, a situation which was created by neither this nor the previous administration, but he takes the characteristic attitude of decrying everything that doesn't bear his personal stamp of creation. For a man who was expected to be a big aid to the administration through his support he has come just as far from it as the senator who has been motivated from the first by a policy of obstruction.

EDITORIAL NOTES

Bolivia and Paraguay seem to be digging up that battleax which Peru and Chile buried.

Is there any wonder that Speaker Longworth objects to the senate being called the upper house?

The advocacy that the senate be made subordinate to the house shows how popular the deliberative body has made itself.

The man on the corner says: Those who had no paper profits to lose in the last market slump are hesitating to admit it.

That crash between a train and a bus near Cleveland, causing nine deaths, cannot be attributed to a falsifying crossing signal because there was no signal, but what is being done to prevent it at Eighth street?

PROPERLY DETAINED

If hunting a text book on Shakespeare's sonnets in Prof. Whiffle's library was to be done, it would be done without ceremony. Especially since there were tennis doubles awaiting down on the river campus courts. That's why Kasha Whiffle burst into her father's den with such ambition that afternoon that she completely overlooked the presence of a person in tweeds sitting in a far corner. The text book was for the professor, and his punctiliousness meant that Kasha must not tarry. Her idea of not tarrying was concentrated speed. So she started.

Of course, the person in tweeds was intent upon "The Rise and Fall of the Roman Empire," as well as the fact that the young woman who had just taken the room by storm was a very charming picture in green sports costume. But he soon lost interest in his book to watch the strange ransacking of the library, for Kasha was indeed oblivious to everything except the book after which she was scrambling, and her plunder left in its trail the outcome of a young earthquake.

"Dear heaven!" she muttered half aloud, vexed with her own dull stupidity. She had dropped two dictionaries and was about to lose the third, when she saw the tweeds coming toward her. From her perch on the moving ladder, Kasha looked down. A student in her father's den, and she hadn't seen him!

"May I receive as you discard?" he asked in quizzical frankness. Kasha caught his humor. Was he laughing at her?

"If you're a good catch," she replied. She would, at this very moment, like very much to drop this mountainous volume on his impertinent head. But, of course, she didn't.

Kasha liked his odd smile, sort of one-sided and not at all in tune with his serious eyes. Probably a principal from some midwestern town, on campus for the summer classes, doing advanced study in elements of physiological psychology or other weighty subjects.

"You're looking for a playwright, aren't you?" he questioned again seeing that she favored that part of the book section. "All the world's a stage," he quoted cheerfully. "Hum, I like Shakespeare myself!" Kasha stiffened.

"Well, I don't. And I'm looking for a blue leather edition of the sonnets for Prof. Whiffle, and if you see it among these comedies and tragedies you're a wonder." An impatience on her manner caused the young man to frown.

"You're in an awful hurry," he commented, still scanning the red and blue bindings.

"Y-es, I am," Kasha answered "I promised Ted and Janet to meet them for tennis and then father met me instead. He always thinks of important little errands just when I have an appointment."

"Appointment waylays tennis player," recited flatly. "Oh, then girls do attempt to keep them?" he challenged. Irony in his remark? Who was he, anyhow, and why need he bother her at this time? She would really much rather search for the book alone.

"Why, of course," she answered. "I believe I'm punctual ordinarily, except when I'm detained. She laughed, a gay, foolish wisp of a laugh because she was thinking what a queer situation it was: Kasha Whiffle, agitated and in a terrific hurry, talking to a strange student in her father's library, with Ted and Janet waiting outside for the doubles. A strange student indeed, who perhaps never realized he was being more of a bother than a help.

And then the book was found. Kasha, relieved and anxious to be gone, thanked the man in tweeds and turned to go.

"Wait a moment!" Kasha wheeled about in the doorway.

"What?" she asked surprised by his outburst. Was she to be further detained by his persistence?

"Aren't you Kasha Whiffle?" Kasha nodded.

"Well, I'm Terry Brooks." The significance of the name dawned slowly in a deep flush on her face.

"The new athletic coach for next fall?" She'd heard so much about him.

"And I've come to take you down to the courts. Ted Timbers told me he had the best tennis player on the campus saved for me this afternoon." So that was why Ted and Janet were so secretive. Vixens!

"And, of course," he grinned, "in praising your game he also mentioned that you had the reputation of being the most punctual student on the campus!" Terry Brooks was certainly enjoying this. Kasha's face burned, but her heart was light.

"So you sought me out?" How clear it was now what an impudent welcome she'd given him and how well he carried out the little comedy!

"Well, Mr Brooks, I may keep appointments and play good tennis, but I can do neither," she laughed. "If I'm properly detained."

"Thanks to Will Shakespeare," Terry reminded her.—Exchange.

A Washington Bystander

By KIRKE L. SIMPSON
Associated Press Staff Writer

WASHINGTON, Jan. 26—It took four four full pages to the Congressional Record to carry the supplemental report of the presidential law enforcement commission.

While merely an addition to a previous preliminary report and touching only one general phase of the questions involved, the document proved to be a weighty one, prepared with great care.

Its suggestions for legislation required the attention of six separate committees of the house in view of house unwillingness to create a joint congressional committee to handle the matter.

The supplemental report bears, of course, the signature of the chairman of the commission, George W. Wickersham.

It is well understood in Washington, however, that it was actually drafted to a very large extent by Roscoe Pound, dean of Harvard law school and a member of the commission.

That Mr. Pound was aided by Judge William S. Kenyon of Iowa, also a commission member, is to be surmised, although Judge Kenyon's chief interest seemed to be a desire to see that Mr. Pound got credit for his work. The judge made no secret of his notion that the report was a masterly job.

For Open Hearings

Incidentally, Judge Kenyon appears to have been a leader from the start of that wing of the commission desiring open hearings.

As a senator, he had a strong leaning toward wide open proceedings and was a frequent assailant of executive session habits of the senate.

Talking with friends after the commission report finally came out, the Iowan made it clear that he was going to keep up his campaign within the commission to open the doors on its doings.

Whether he has confidence that he ultimately will triumph in that regard, the Bystander does not know.

Dean Pound must have sacrificed a lot of his Christmas holidays to the drafting of the supplemental report. Most other members of the commission hustled home, but he stuck it out sternly to get the matter in shape for early presentation to congress by President Hoover.

His Old Views

Going back to the dean's public utterances and writings of the last year, you find that the questions with which his draft report dealt were the same that have been interesting him for a long time. Writing in a Boston newspaper, he said:

"The whole subject (of law enforcement) needs to be studied scientifically so as to give us some reliable data as to what laws are effective and what enforcing agencies achieve their purpose, and why."

Clearly, Dean Pound will make an interesting witness if he appears before congressional committees to back up recommendations in the commission's report for a wholesale readjustment of enforcement procedure and machinery.

YOUR HEALTH

Rational Treatment Of Fat

By Solomon Strouse, M. D., Chicago
(From Gorgas Memorial Institute)

In the treatment of obesity only a few essential fundamental facts are necessary. The first is that overweight represents the surplus of energy taken into the body as food over the amount spent by the body in its daily living. Every machine must use up a given amount of energy to do a given job and this energy must be supplied from the outside. The human body acts as an engine and must receive fuel to burn up in its work. But in one important respect the human body differs from an ordinary engine; if fuel is lacking from the outside the body makes up this deficiency by burning up itself; but if there is extra fuel that is not burnt up it is laid down as fat.

It follows then quite naturally that the question of reduction of body weight in fat people resolves itself into changing the balance between intake and expense of energy. This can be done in one of three ways: (a) reducing the intake, (b) increasing the expense, or (c) both. As a matter of fact all sane methods of reduction are based on this principle. The simplest method of reducing intake is to cut down on total consumption of calories. Anyone can be given a food list showing caloric values and can reduce his own intake.

There is no need for any faddist procedures. There is not a single one that has a specific virtue beyond the fact that it is based on a low total caloric intake. Many of them are not without considerable danger; some are so low in calories as to mean virtual starvation, and certainly not all persons can stand starvation. Some are "unbalanced" in their proportions of food stuffs, and such diets may cause trouble to the kidneys or other vital organs. Many persons should have reduction diets adjusted to their particular needs and not infrequently they encounter serious difficulty if they use "mass" diet, such as the so-called eighteen day diet, or nothing but a single article of food. These diets may be perfectly harmless to ninety-five per cent of individuals, but you may be among the unfortunate five.

Don't take up a suggested reducing diet because it is easier to do that than to think for yourself. Reduce intake to match energy expended; increase activity to use up what you eat; or see a doctor.

CHILD TRAINING

The Liar

Russell M. Coryell

When I was a little boy, my family considered me an awful liar, and my three older brothers stated the fact both frequently and warmly to me and to others in my presence. But you know, I think they misjudged me. I wasn't an awful liar. I was an exceptionally good one. And why wouldn't I be with three older brothers to learn the technique from? I also learned some of the more subtle forms of deception from my mother and father and their grown up friends.

For example, I remember one day when I had "swiped" a cake of sweet chocolate and shared it with my brothers. Mother inquired about it casually—oh, very casually, if you know what I mean—so that I knew at once that I had been discovered. The inquiry was made in some such roundabout way as this: "Boys, I had a cake of sweet chocolate, which I think I put on the upper shelf of the pantry, but now it isn't there. I wonder if any of you have seen it."

We had not only seen it, we had eaten it, and mother knew that, and we knew that she knew it. If she really hadn't known, her manner would have been quite different. We could read her as readily as a book. Most children can read their parents. What she wanted was to give us a chance to "come out courageously and tell the truth." She didn't want to accuse us for fear of frightening us into a lie, and she didn't want to ask a direct question that could be answered by "yes" or "no" because "no", being the shorter word, was likely to be chosen in preference to "yes." So she employed a perfectly transparent ruse, and a ruse to the keen, elemental mind of a child is just the same as a lie.

And what did my older brothers do in this crisis? They didn't try to lie out of it. Oh, no! They knew it wouldn't do any good. So they looked first naively surprised and then indignantly accusing at me. "Why, mother," said they, "we ate it. Russell brought it out to us and said you had given it to him."

The worst of it was, I had said just that. I had said it but they hadn't believed it and I knew they hadn't believed it and they knew that I knew it. In fact the whole proceeding had been fabricated in duplicity. It was a system we had worked before and went like this: My oldest brother would lead us all to some distance from the scene and would then say to me, "Russ, there's a cake of sweet chocolate on the top shelf of the pantry. Go ask mother if we can have it." They knew perfectly well, by experience, that I should take it without asking, thus insuring myself and them against the possibility of refusal, while they were provided with a perfect alibi. And as for me, I knew mother and father didn't believe in whipping. The worst that would happen would be that they would talk to me sorrowfully about the pain it gave them to have a son who would lie to them. I knew I was expected to cry after a while and then it would be all over.

There were other times when mother would pretend to believe me. She would say with great candor and sincerity: "If you say it is true, Russell dear, I know it must be. Remember that I trust you absolutely." But of course I knew she didn't believe me and didn't trust me but was just trying to make me confess by shaming me. It struck me as an agreeable though rather silly method and I swore with equal candor and sincerity that I was telling the absolute truth.

On the hole I think I deceived my parents more successfully than they deceived me, and my advice to parents is: Don't lie to your children any more than is absolutely necessary, because you can't deceive them anyway and there is always the chance that if you are truthful with them they may be truthful with you. It isn't likely that they will, but they may. Children will do almost anything to imitate their parents.

As for the way I treat my own son: Well, I try to be honest. It is very difficult I admit, but I'm always upheld by the thought that if I try to lie to him he'll surely see through it—and then where has my prestige gone to?

BURGESS BEDTIME STORY

Chatterer Gets His Corn

A grateful heart will find a way
For every favor to repay.
—Timmy the Flying Squirrel.

Chatterer the Red Squirrel was very much upset. His cousin, Timmy the Flying Squirrel, had disappeared in Farmer Brown's corncrib at break of day, and though Chatterer had waited and waited Timmy had not reappeared. Chatterer didn't know just what to think. It was, of course, possible that Timmy had slipped out without being seen by Chatterer.

"What are you scolding about, you red rascal?" he cried

However, Chatterer couldn't quite believe this. What he did fear as that Timmy had been caught in a trap.

Chatterer's thoughts were really selfish, however. What really worried him most was the fact that he had got no corn. He had counted on Timmy to bring out some corn for him. As long as Timmy did not come out of course, there was no corn. Chatterer hung around Farmer Brown's dooryard all day. Yes, sir, he did so. He hung around where he could keep watch, and he was in a very bad temper all day. When things don't go just right for Chatterer he is very likely to be in a bad temper. He spent a great deal of his time scolding. He scolded Black Pussy when she appeared. He scolded Bowser the Hound and Flip the Terrier. He scolded Farmer Brown's Boy.

Farmer Brown's Boy looked up at him and laughed. "What are you scolding about, you red rascal?" he cried. "I suspect you are scolding because you can't get into that corncrib. I guess you have had your share of corn already. I don't think any one can get into that crib now. I'm going to be very much surprised if I find that any more corn has been taken."

Meanwhile Timmy the Flying Squirrel was curled up inside the corncrib and sleeping soundly. You know, daytime is sleeptime for Timmy. He isn't wide awake until the time when his cousins are going to bed. So it was that at just the time that Chatterer, still cross and disappointed, curled up in his own bed over in the Green Forest, Timmy awoke and for a moment or two wondered where he was. Then he remembered and promptly began to stuff himself with corn. You see, after sleeping all day he was hungry. When he had eaten all he wanted he peeped out. The Black Shadows had crept out from the Purple Hills. There was still a little light, but only a little. It was what you and I call dusk.

Timmy slipped out and climbed to the roof of the corncrib. From there he jumped over to the foot of the nearest tree—the tree from which he had early that morning sailed down onto the roof of the corncrib. It was the very tree in which he had left Chatterer the Red Squirrel. Timmy scampered up the tree. At first he looked for Chatterer. Then he remembered that Chatterer would not be out so late. Timmy sat down in a crotch of the tree to think things over.

"My, but that was good corn!" said he to himself. "I shall come over here every night. I am glad Cousin Chatterer told me about it. It is too bad he cannot jump and glide the way I can. If he could we would have a great time in here with that corn. It is too bad that Cousin Chatterer cannot get any. Yes, sir, it is too bad."

Timmy sat thinking this over when suddenly there came an idea into his head. Those great soft eyes of his began to sparkle. He ran a little higher up the tree and he sailed down and landed with a soft thud on the roof of the corncrib. A minute later he was inside. An hour later he was at home in the Green Forest. When daylight came Chatterer was back at the corncrib, to see if there were any signs of Timmy. There were. On the ground were scattered many grains of yellow corn. Timmy had left them there. So it was that Chatterer got his corn.

THE ETERNAL SON OF GOD RECEIVED IN COMMUNION

Having read the gospel for the third Sunday after Epiphany, which narrates the healing of the servant of the centurion at Capharnaum, Rev. Myles P. Galvin preached at the 8 o'clock mass in St. Patrick's church Sunday to a congregation filling auditory and galleries on the proper preparation for receiving holy communion. There should be double preparation for this—of the body and of the soul.

As to the bodily preparation for the reception of communion, naturally, there should be Christian modesty, physical cleanliness, decent and cleanly clothing and good behaviour in approaching the altar. On the point of Christian modesty, the preacher referred in particular to this requirement as affecting the young women of the church, in an age when flagrant immodesty has become such as to call forth words of censure and of warning from Pope Pius XI, who has instructed all priests to refuse to administer holy communion to young women who go to the altar immodestly clad.

He enjoined his hearers to keep ever in mind the reverence and gratitude due for the great gift of Our Divine Lord in the blessed sacrament, given as food for their souls and to become more and more worthy of the reception of the supreme gift, the body of Christ, who is the eternal Son of God.

Rev. Father Galvin assisted Rev. John J. Reilly in administering communion to a great number of penitents. Earlier in the day, at the 7.30 mass, the rector, Rt. Rev. Msgr. M. H. May and his assistants had given the sacrament to many scores, who were led to the altar by the men of the Holy Name society, Patrick M. Coleman, president.

Because of the severity of the weather the regular afternoon vespers at 3.30 was omitted and instead, there was benediction of the blessed sacrament following the high mass at 10.30.

Announcement was made of the regulations for Candlemas day, which will be Sunday next.

Stoeckel. Although no definite decision has yet been made, Commissioner Stoeckel said that a new type of plate upon which the figures and letters are of chrome nickel had been shown to him, and experiments will be conducted at Cheshire, and possibly later by Yale university, to determine the practicability of such plates.

The proposed plate is similar to those already in use but with the important difference that the figures and letters thereon are of highly polished chrome nickel, and reflect light which falls upon the surface.

It was admitted that the proposed plates would be more expensive to manufacture, but Commissioner Stoeckel said that the additional expense would be justified if the plates live up to the claims made for them and that the saving through prevention of accidents would be many times the additional cost of the plates in a single year. It was pointed out that the new plates might also supplant all other types of reflectors.

It will be some time before a decision is made, Commissioner Stoeckel pointed out, but according to the present indications the plate should prove practical.

GREEK CHURCH IN ITS IMPROVED BUILDING

Extensive repairs which have been made at the Greek Orthodox church on Boswell avenue at a cost of about $15,000, have now been finished and the congregation is enjoying the use of its improved property.

In response to an appeal to the Norwich public, irrespective of church affiliation, contributions of $500 were made in large and small sums, which earned the gratitude of the campaign committee of the church towards those who thus showed their liberality.

The campaign committee had Peter Sellas as chairman, George Coulopoulos as president, and Ulysses Sakelaredis as treasurer. Other members on the committee were Rev. Sevastiadis, L. H. Crandall, P. Alexander, P. F. Swarney, Charles Geanacopoulos, Charles Gregory, George Bekmis, James Jacy.

NORWICH AUTOMOBILE ACCIDENTS IN 1929 WERE LESS THAN IN YEAR BEFORE

While the total of fatalities because of motor vehicle accidents in Connecticut was the same in 1929 as in the previous year, 466, there was an increase of three in the number of towns free of deaths from this cause, a review of reports to the state motor vehicle department shows. Sixty-seven towns were without fatal automobile accidents in 1929, as compared with 64 in 1928. Two towns, Warren and Weston, were free of reportable motor vehicle accidents of any kind. The previous year only one town, Hartland, was able to report that there were no accidents within its borders.

In Norwich there were 456 accidents reported in 1928, 292 reported in 1929, of which 17 were fatal accidents in 1928 and 6 were fatal in 1929.

Density of traffic and population governed the grouping of accidents in apparently the same proportions last year as in 1928. Some large cities and a few towns with much-traveled highways were able to report decreases in both accidents and fatalities, but about as many others reported increases. Decreases in death because of accidents were reported from Hartford, Bridgeport, Waterbury, New Britain, New London, Greenwich, while there were increases for New Haven, Stamford, Meriden, West Haven, West Hartford and others of the larger towns.

Hartford had 2,868 accidents in 1929, with 21 fatal; Bridgeport 2,506 in 1929 with 11 fatal; New Haven 2,737 in 1929 with 34 fatal.

The total of accidents for 1929 was 25,177. This is 126 below the number reported in 1928, and represents the first annual decrease since records of accidents have been compiled by the department. Reports from towns in many cases indicated a considerable decrease in accidents during the last half of 1929. This was mainly because of a change in the law, which became effective July 1, 1929, eliminating the necessity for reporting accidents which caused damage of less than $25. The accident figures for 1929 in nearly all towns were affected by this law.

A table showing the number of accidents and the number of victims of fatal accidents in each town in eastern Connecticut during 1928 and 1929 follows:

BOY SCOUT COUNCIL WILL HOLD ANNUAL MEETING

This (Monday) evening at 7:30 the annual meeting of local Boy Scout council will be held in the chamber of commerce conference rooms. A large attendance is expected. District Committeemen from Putnam, Danielson, Willimantic, and Stafford Springs are expected to attend the meeting together with many scoutmasters and chairmen of committees from the territory. All council members including all members of standing committees, merit badge counselors, and scoutmasters of Norwich are expected to be well represented at the meeting.

A quick summary of the year's work will be presented in the reports, officers will be elected and objectives set for the coming year, one of which it is believed will be a goal of 1,000 Scouts by Feb. 1, 1931. The dozen council committees will cover only the high spots for the year and it is the expectation that the meeting will be over by 9 o'clock.

Final arrangements will be announced for the next court of honor, which will be on Wednesday, Feb. 5, and will probably be an international Jamboree Court of Honor.

RESERVED DECISION IN GROTON DIVORCE SUIT

Judge C. L. Avery reserved decision in the superior court here last week after hearing the evidence in the contested Groton divorce suit of Viola Edgcomb Chapman against Elias N. Chapman.

Cruelty was alleged and one of the conditions Mrs. Chapman complained of was residence in a building over a garage where there was a combination of garage and stable odors. Witnesses for her were Emily A. Small, Mildred A. Deering and Alma Lewis Nickey.

Mr. Chapman opposed the divorce, saying he still loved his wife and wanted her back, but he mentioned his objection to her friendliness for a man named Smith who showed his sympathy for Mrs. Chapman at the time of her father's death by kissing her, and who was a regular Saturday caller at the Chapman house and stayed through much of the day, according to Mr. Chapman. Thomas O'Callahan gave testimony for Mr. Chapman.

Attorney C. Hadlai Hull was reelected president of New London council, Boy Scouts of America for the fourth consecutive year and Scout Executive F. E. Burdick was reappointed for his 12th consecutive year at the annual meeting.

JOINT INSTALLATION FOR B'NAI B'RITH LODGES

Rose of New England lodge, No. 232, I. O. B. B., and its auxiliary, No. 40, held a joint installation of officers in the lodge rooms on Shetucket street Sunday evening. The installing officer was the past district president, Nathan E. Goldstein of Springfield, Mass. of district No. 1, who was assisted by the past district president, Henry Lasker, also of that city, and by Nestor Dreyfus, member of the executive committee of district No. 1.

Henry Lasker, as the speaker of the evening, made a very interesting and impressive talk, touching upon matters of vital importance to the life of the B'nai B'rith order.

Nathan E. Goldstein in a very inspiring manner spoke of the honorable position occupied by the B'nai B'rith lodge in every community, and told of the excellent achievements since its inception, some of them being the creation of the Anti-Defamation committee, the founding of the Hillel Foundations in the universities of the country and the resultant excellent effects upon the young Jewish students in making of them good Jews and better American citizens. He also mentioned various other activities participated in to create a finer impression of what the B'nai B'rith represented to Jew and Gentile.

The retiring president, Oscar Silverman, was presented a handsome Menorah as a token of appreciation by the members for the excellent manner in which he had conducted himself during his term of office, and for the fine accomplishments of the lodge due to his earnest and untiring efforts.

Sister President-elect Betty Pasnik of the auxiliary, re-elected for the eighth consecutive term, gave a very fine expression of appreciation of her re-election and promised to perform her duties once more as the head of the auxiliary for the coming year.

A note of sadness prevailed due to the absence of Brother Max Hanover, who has done so much for the good of the lodge and auxiliary. Brother Hanover is at present confined to his home in New York recuperating and convalescing.

The lodge rooms were most beautifully decorated for the occasion and preceding the installation exercises an appetizing dinner was served.

TELEPHONE CO. PLANS BIG IMPROVEMENTS HERE

A considerable addition to the telephone company switchboard in this city, costing about $40,000 and other improvements that will represent a total expenditure of $120,000 are in the plans for this year, according to Exchange Manager Henry S. Lyon.

Another large item on the list of planned expenditures locally is represented by the cost of subscribers station equipment, that is telephones to be placed in the homes, offices and other business places of patrons of the company. This equipment will cost about $35,000. There will be some addition to the outside plant of the company including the placing of underground and aerial cable to cost about $10,000. About 17,000 feet of cable will be placed here, this to contain 9,600,000 feet or 1,800 miles of copper wire. Poles, wire and miscellaneous work will total about $45,000 in cost.

Manager Lyon said that a net increase of 500 telephones is expected in this exchange during the current year and that the planned improvements here will be started and carried through well in advance of subscribers' requirements for additional facilities.

MIDDLETOWN Y PROVES TOO STRONG FOR LOCAL QUINTET IN STATE LEAGUE GAME

The Y Seniors' special test has come and gone and today finds the local basketball team removed from a triple tie for first place to a position where the odds are against them for winning the state Y league title. Saturday night at the Y gym before a packed gallery of over 300—the largest crowd the Seniors ever appeared before—a fast passing, sharp-shooting Middletown Y five took advantage of many Norwich errors to win a drab contest, 43 to 33.

Before the game the local boys were deadlocked with Middletown and Greenwich for first place in the state league, each having lost but once. Now the Demarest-men are in third place, Middletown first and Greenwich, which did not play Saturday, in second.

It was the deadly basket-tossing of Wilcox, the Middletown left forward and captain, that spelled doom for the Seniors, in particular, but in general, it was their own inability to sink easy chances and sloppy work at times in the passing end of the game. Wilcox scored 26 of his team's points on 12 field baskets and two fouls and also played a pretty floor game. Mondi Normandin, who played his first game with the Y in nearly two months, together with Capt. Roland Harris were the best players for the Norwich cause.

The Seniors scored first after slightly more than a minute of scrimmaging when Brown took a pass from Normandin but Wilcox started his work for the visitors soon after with a toss from the corner and then added another soon after. Brown tied it up with one from off to the side but Middletown forged ahead again and held a lead of 11 to 5 at the quarter. This first quarter was the only one productive of good basketball on both sides during the whole game.

The Seniors tied it up early in the next period on a field goal by Normandin and Brown's foul shot but Wilcox made it 13-11, Amenta 15-11 and Hanson 17-11 in succession and Middletown held this sort of a margin to the half, when the score was 31 to 21.

Coach Demarest of the Seniors shifted his lineup in desperation in the second half, even using four men at different times to trail Wilcox, Eccleston, Barber, Eccleston again, Pingree and lastly Normandin for the closing moments of the fray. However, Middletown still was able to protect its lead and even add a few points of margin to it. As the third quarter ended the visitors were in the van by 40 to 27 and then coasted through the last period, although Wilcox and Dunn were put out on personals in this session. Harris and Eccleston were also put out on fouls in this period.

Y Girls Play Nice Game

In the preliminary that drew just as much attention from the fans as the main game, the Norwich Girls, opening their home season, defeated the Bacon Academy Girls, 34 to 18 to keep their slate clean. Miss O'Hart and Miss Ksiazek were stellar performers for the locals, especially the former, who scored 20 points and whose brilliant work drew down the house many times.

This team shows great promise and looks able to give Norwich able representation in state circles. An interesting schedule is being planned for the team and they will undoubtedly play most of the preliminaries for the Seniors from now until the end of the season.

Saturday's game was fairly close for the first half, which ended with Norwich ahead, 14 to 10, but in the last two periods the local lassies ran wild with Miss O'Hart leading the attack. In the last period Colchester picked up a few points but did not get close enough to become dangerous.

SHYMAS TO PLAY RADIO FIVE TUESDAY

Owing to a misunderstanding in their schedule the Submarine Base were obliged to cancel their game with the Shyma basketball team for Tuesday night at Taftville, but the manager of the local five has secured the fast Radio Five of Danielson to substitute for the New London sailors.

The Danielson boys are coming down strong and feel sure that they will take the Shymas over. With the rivalry, which has always accompanied a Danielson-Taftville series, the first game should be a hummer. In the preliminary, the Shyma Jrs., will meet the Battery B. of Norwich.

BACON ACADEMY WINS FROM PHI DELTA NU

Saturday night at Colchester, the Bacon Academy won from the Phi Delta Nu of the United Congregational church of this city by a score of 27-14. The Baconians took advantage of the Deltas' inability to find the basket in the first half, and led by D. Howitz, took their opponents by storm, the score at the half being 23-4. In the second half the Deltas stopped Colchester's main scoring threat, and proceeded to score 6 points. The last quarter both teams battled on even terms, the scoring being held at 4 all. D. Howitz was easily the star of the game with 14 points in the first half, while Holden with 10 points for the Deltas played a good game.

TWO FAST GAMES IN CHURCH LEAGUE TONIGHT

At 8:15 tonight the Gamma club, present Church league leaders, will try to hold their lead, as a loss will either send them into second place or put them within a half a game of it. Their opponent will be the Phi Delta Nu, who, although with not a very impressive record, manage to make the going rough for their opponents, and with the memories of two close losses last year, intend to defeat the Gammas.

In the second game of the evening the Trinity Methodist quintet faces a good chance to lift themselves into first place, at the expense of the Brothers of Joseph. From a place within a half a game of the league leaders the Brothers have suddenly taken a slump and therefore are favored to lose to the Methodists, sole conquerors of the leaders. The two games tonight with the two games next Monday complete the first round of the Church league schedule, and will do a lot toward the final standing of the league. The present standing is as follows:

Gammas	4	1	.800

Brothers	3	2	.600

SPECIAL EVENTS AT N. F. A. TRACK MEET SATURDAY

The Academy's second indoor track meet, which will be held Saturday night at the state armory with Stonington high and a strong supporting cast of special events, which will bring college and amateur stars here, is attracting much attention and already prospects are for a large crowd.

In the first meet held a week ago Saturday, in which the Wildcats lost to Suffield prep, the crowd totaled about 500, a very good figure for a starter, but now that the sport has broken the ice, the attendance this week should far surpass that of the first try. Coach Murphy of the Red and White is busy lining up leading performers from all over New England, including several Holy Cross and Conn. Aggie stars.

SENIOR LEADER CORPS TO MEET IN HARTFORD

The members of the Norwich Y. M. C. A. Senior Leader Corps will go to Hartford tomorrow night and be the guest of the Y. M. C. A. there. There will be four Y. M. C. A.'s and three Turner Corps, gathered together for a demonstration of gymnastics, and a social time after.

Norwich will be represented by nine leaders, and accompanied by J. H. Demarest the physical director. All leaders are asked to call the Y. M. C. A. before seven o'clock tonight.

PLAINFIELD PROS TO PLAY BOSTON WHIRLWINDS WED.

The third and deciding game of the series between the Plainfield Pros and the Boston Whirlwinds is slated for the Plainfield Community house on Wednesday evening. The Whirlwinds have taken one game from the Pros while the Pros in their turn have trimmed the Whirlwinds in one encounter. Both games have been close and thrilling and it is expected that Wednesday night's fray will be the best of the three games. Local fans can always bank on a close and hard game when these clubs meet on the basketball floor.

We've seen less teamwork on basketball squads but we can't remember when or where.

What do I mean by that? Well, I'm referring to the Y. M. C. A. Senior team that went down to defeat Saturday night at the local Y. M. C. A. before the Middletown club.

Whether it was stage fright or what, it was a sorry exhibition that the locals put on and unless they snap out of it they'll find themselves at the bottom of the state league before the season's over.

Some of the mistakes, and there were plenty of them, were ridiculous. Imagine a player mistaking an opponent for one of his own men and passing directly to him. Those are unforgiveable errors.

Shooting for baskets from midfloor or better never won any games and the chances are a 100 to 1 of scoring from that distance. It was simply the lack of teamwork that dropped the locals from first to third place.

A team without teamwork is like an automobile without wheels; it don't get any place. The Y team is capable of better basketball without a doubt but Saturday night they were at their worst.

They tell me that they have played as good if not better basketball than the Middletown team and, in fact, beat a team that trimmed Middletown. But something was decidedly wrong in Saturday's game.

Some of the local players seemed to have no pep or fight in them, they were slow on their feet and were left flat-footed by their opponents.

One heartless fan remarked that one of the Y players should be taken out and Miss O'Hart star of the girls team put in his place. And there were plenty that agreed with him.

And speaking of Miss O'Hart it can be said that she is one of the best girl basketball players that it has been our pleasure to see. This young woman handles a basketball with all the ease and finesse of a seasoned man player.

She has an uncanny eye for the basket and is wise in the ways of basketball. She is elusive and cleverly evades her opposition and is seldom cornered. It was a pleasure to watch her play.

Her teammate Miss Ksiazek worked well with her in the forward zone and made a sweet pair of girl basketball players, a pair that will give most any team plenty to think about.

With the girls performing as a preliminary crowds at the Y should be large for the remainder of the season.

JOE CANTILLON DYING AS RESULT OF SHOCK

HICKMAN, Ky., Jan. 26.—(AP)—Joe Cantillon, grand old man of baseball and one of the best loved figures in the sport world, tonight lies dying at his home here.

"Pongo Joe," as he has been known for many years from coast to coast, suffered a stroke a few days ago but, because it was believed he would recover rapidly as he did nearly three years ago when his first stroke forced him to give up managership of the Little Rock club in the Southern association, his condition was kept from even his best friends and associates. A turn for the worse took place today and Rev. Fr. Gettlefinger, pastor of the Sacred Heart Catholic church here, was called in to administer the last rites of the church.

Cantillon has been active in baseball for 48 years, and last year was supervisor of umpires for the American association. He is 64 years old.

Joe discovered and developed some great baseball players, including Amos Rusie and Rube Waddell. He has been actively in the game as player, umpire, manager, owner, secretary, scout, since 1884.

PLAINFIELD HIGH CLASHES WITH WOODSTOCK TONIGHT

At the Plainfield Community house this evening the Plainfield high school team clashes with the Woodstock Academy team in what is expected to be a fast game. The Plainfield team, which is built around the diminutive interscholastic forward, Tommy Lang, has struck its stride after a slow start early in the season. Lang's supporting cast includes Shippee, Burby, and Leach who are playing a brilliant game. The Plainfield girls team will clash with the Woodstock girls team in the preliminary game. The Woodstock girls are reputed to be the fastest girls team in the state and have been going along at a fast clip.

MIKKELSON WINS AMATEUR SKI JUMPING TITLE

SALISBURY, Jan. 26.—(AP)—Strand Mikkelson, of Greenfield, Mass., Outing club, won first place in the United States Amateur Ski association jump here today. The jump was 148 feet, four short of last year's record.

Anson Lekina, Chris Horealar and B. Torreson, all of the Norway Ski club, of New York city, were the other class A winners in that order. In the class B, Otto Satre, of the Salisbury club, won with a jump of 128 feet. Otto Janson, of Salisbury; O. Ejarson, of Norway club; Johan Satre, Salisbury, finished in that order. Chris Jansen, champion, gave an exhibition jump of 159 feet.

CONN. BOXING IN PAST SIX MONTHS SHOWS SPORT TO BE AT ITS BES

That boxing in Connecticut is on the crest of the wave of prosperity was indicated by State Athletic Commissioner Thomas E. Donohue of New London in a ringside conversation last Friday night. In discussing boxing in Connecticut Commissioner Donohue said that never in the history of the state had there been so much interest in the sport as right at the present time. And as far as he could see there was no indication of its becoming any less.

For the first half of the fiscal year, Commissioner Donohue said, there had been more interest in boxing than ever before and that the revenue for the period between July 1st and January 1st was larger than for any entire year before. The state up to January 1st had realized approximately $21,000 from boxing and wrestling, which now includes both the professional and amateur branches of the sport.

At the present time there has been issued from the office of the state athletic commissioner 918 boxing licenses, more than three times as many licenses as ever issued in a year previous. The largest number of licenses issued in the state in any one year was 300. The increase in the number of licensed boxers is due in some extent to the amateurs, the supervision of which was taken over by the state last July.

Boxing clubs have been springing up in all parts of the state so that on Jan. 21st there were 22 licensed clubs in the state, more than ever before and nearly all running shows on an average of one every two weeks. Speaking of the boxing game in general, Commissioner Donohue said that he believed that all the clubs were getting by financially although none were getting rich at the game. Shows in Bridgeport, New Haven and Hartford are drawing well while the clubs in the small cities do their share of the business.

SHEA WINS EASTERN SPEED SKATING TITLE

ALBANY, N. Y., Jan. 26.—(AP)—Jack Shea, Lake Placid Athletic club veteran of the ice, established himself king of the speed skaters of the eastern United States here today. He showed his heels to the pack in every event of the men's eastern United States speed skating championships, winning the 220, the 440 and the 880-yard finals.

Stars like Irving Jaffee, of New York, Valentine Bialis, of Lake Placid, and Bunny Sheffield, of Lake Placid, could not even catch him.

Only in a two-mile special race did he taste defeat, Jaffee placing first and Bialis second ahead of him.

Two New York city twins, Lillian and Ruth Corke, of the Majestic A. C., nosed out Frances Karwowski, of Watervliet, N. Y., in the 220-yard dash for girls. Lillian Corke was first, Ruth second and Miss Karwowski third.

HORWITZ LEADS COLLEGE BASKETBALL SCORERS

NEW YORK, Jan. 26.—(AP)—Ed Horowitz, Yale forward, maintained his lead in the individual scoring race of the Eastern Collegiate Basketball league when he scored six points in his team's losing game with Princeton on Wednesday night.

Figures compiled by the Associated Press show Horowitz leading the scoring parade with 23 points. Second place is held by Goodpasture, Princeton forward, with 22 points, Nanry of Yale follows with 21 points and Lord, Princeton center, holds fourth place with 19 points. The strangle hold Princeton and Yale players have on the leading position is explained by the fact that each has played four games more than any other team in the league.

Horowitz leads in field goals with ten and Bowen of Princeton in fouls with eight. Horowitz has committed the most personal fouls, nine.

The leaders follow:

REDS HOLD TOP PLACE IN C-A HOCKEY LOOP

BOSTON, Jan. 26.—(AP)—The Philadelphia Arrows staged a spurt last week and climbed into second place in the Canadian-American Hockey league standing. The Providence Reds finished another week in the top place and Sprague Cleghorn's puck chasers continued three full games in front.

New Haven dropped back into third place during the week as a result of the game with Springfield that was declared no-contest by the league officials. Boston, last year's champions, remained in fourth place and the Springfield club continued at the bottom of the league list, but only a half game behind the Tigers.

Providence	23	14	7	2	30	74	52

COUGARS HUMBLE THE SECOND-PLACE RANGERS

DETROIT, Jan. 26.—(AP)—The Detroit Cougars, up-and-down team of the National Hockey league, went on a scoring splurge in the first period of their game with the second-place New York Rangers tonight, winning 7 to 3. The Cougars scored five times in the first period, once in the second and once in the third, while the Rangers got all their goals in the final period.

The Ranger defense apparently was taken by surprise at the start of the game, and failed to hold the Cougars for the entire first period, but the major credit went to Bill Beveridge, Cougar goalie, who had one of the best nights of his National league career.

AMERICANS AND PIRATES BATTLE TO 1 TO 1 SCORE

NEW YORK, Jan. 26.—(AP)—With nothing at stake except the honor of winning, the New York Americans and Pittsburgh Pirates, holders of cellar position in their respective divisions of the National Hockey league, battled to a one to one tie in Madison Square Garden tonight.

The Americans scored first in the second period, when Massecar swung around the Pirates' goal with the puck and beat Goalie Miller in 7:03. With the one-point lead the Coacher sextette fell back on its defense but the Pirates knotted the count in the third session. Briden, a spare wingman, scored the goal in 6:11 after slipping through the Americans' front line and dodging Burch.

A dull first period was enlivened in its closing minutes, when Holmes, burly New York forward, and Smith, of Pittsburgh, engaged in a fist battle. Goalie Miller of the Pirates rushed to the aid of his team-mate but players of both teams soon separated the fighters. Holmes and Smith drew major penalties and when they sought to continue their argument in the penalty box were fined $25 each.

PENN LEADS IN QUEST FOR COLLEGE COURT HONORS

NEW YORK, Jan. 26.—(AP)—Play in the Eastern Intercollegiate basketball league so far has been a triumph for home court teams. Eight games have been played so far and in every instance the invaders have been turned back on the short end of the score.

Penn and Columbia, the leaders, have benefited most. Penn has won two games, both on its home floor, and lost none. Columbia beat Princeton at New York in its only start. Princeton's two victories have been recorded on the Tigers' own court and its two defeats away from home. Dartmouth, Cornell and Yale each have made one home stand and taken advantage of it while their sallies on foreign courts have proven disastrous.

During the past week only one league game was played, Princeton nosing out Yale in a close struggle at Princeton. The victory sent Princeton into a percentage tie with Dartmouth for third place in the standing while Yale dropped into the cellar with one victory in four starts.

No games will be played this week, the next league game being Columbia's tangle with Dartmouth at Hanover Feb. 5.

The standing, to date, follows:

Team	W	L	Pts For	Pts Agnst
Penn	2	0	59	47
Columbia	1	0	38	25
Princeton	2	2	99	105
Dartmouth	1	1	52	57
Cornell	1	2	51	80
Yale	1	3	98	83

AL KOZIOL HAS BUSY TWO WEEKS AHEAD OF HIM

Al Koziol, local lightweight slugger, has a very busy two weeks ahead of him. The local battler is signed for three fights within the next 11 days. Next Friday night Koziol meets Leo Ledoux of Worcester in the semi-final at the opening show of Joseph Peloquin's boxing club. This bout is the third meeting of these two boys, each having a decision over the other.

On February 2 Koziol fights a return engagement at Fall River with Bristol Brown who gained a close verdict over the local boy at Providence on Friday evening. In that bout Koziol after leading for four rounds took a stiff punch to the stomach that slowed him up and allowed Brown to take the fifth and sixth rounds by enough margin to win the decision.

On Feb. 7th Koziol is booked to fight for the Shyma boys at Taftville. His opponent for this bout has not been chosen but it goes without saying that it will be a boy with a reputation. Several opponents for Koziol are being considered, among them being Alex Tourain of New Haven.

POETRY

Life.

Life is too brief
 Between the budding and the falling leaf,
Between the seed time and the golden sheaf,
 For hate and spite.
We have no time for malice and for greed;
Therefore, with love make beautiful the deed;
 Fast speeds the night.

Life is too swift
Between the blossom and the white snow's drift,
Between the silence and the lark's uplift,
 For bitter words.
In kindness and in gentleness our speech
Must carry messages of hope, and reach
 The sweetest chords.

Life is too great
Between the infant's and the man's estate,
Between the clashing of earth's strife and fate,
 For petty things.
Lo! we shall yet who creep with cumbered feet
Walk glorious over heaven's golden street,
 Or soar on wings!

—W. M. Vories in Presbyterian Advance.

Home Economics

The Little Woman she said, said she:
"How much wealthier we would be
 If we'd kept track
 For a long time back
Of the money we've wasted, you and me."
And, she being fair, and I but human,
I said right back to the Little Woman:
 "Angel of light,
 You're perfectly right."

So we swore to scrutinize every cent
And budgetty, budgetty, off we went

The Little Woman, she took her pen
(For women budget better than men),
 She parceled my pay
 In a careful way,
With here a five percent, there's a ten,
And a sheet of figures she proudly waved,
Saying: "See here, darling, how much we've saved!
 Enough and to spare
 For some things I can wear.

"I must get to the shops before they close—"
And budgetty, budgetty, there she goes!

RAIDS AT JULIANO'S, HALPERN'S AND BRONSTEIN'S

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Jan. 26.—The police, under the guidance of Desk Sergeant William T. Babcock, conducted a series of raids Saturday night, visiting one liquor resort and two gambling resorts. The liquor room raided was that of Mrs. Gussie Juliano, 108 Golden street, wife of Frank Juliano. There, Capt. Charles A. Pinney, Detective Sergeant Nelson Smith, Desk Sergeant William Babcock, Automobile Patrol Officer Thomas Cavanaugh and Patrolman Harry Watterson found liquor on the table and the patrons admitted purchasing drinks of Mrs. Juliano for 25 cents a drink. The raiding officers made a partial raid of the rooms of the drinking resort and found evidence of the sale of liquor. James Craddock, John Corcoran and James Maloney were arrested, charged with frequenting and were released from custody upon furnishing a bond of $50 for their appearance in the police court tomorrow and after Mrs. Juliano had provided a bond of $1000 for her arraignment in court Monday. It is the first time that Mrs. Juliano has been arrested for violation of the liquor law.

Mary Garden likely will given her first performance in "Camille" in Paris next season.

UPTURN IN STEEL MILL OPERATIONS INDICATES A REVIVAL OF BUSINESS

NEW YORK, Jan. 26—(AP)—A further upturn in steel mill operations, bringing the general level for the industry to around 79 per cent of capacity, was the most notable business development reported last week. The increase, which was due largely to heavier railroad and automotive buying, nevertheless fell below the normal rate of gain for this period, and was accompanied by a further shading of prices which carried the composite pig iron price to the lowest level since October 1928 and the composite finished steel price to the lowest since December 1927.

Ford, General Motors and Chrysler, three of the largest motor manufacturers, reported a sharp increase in production schedules, and there were indications that some of the smaller producers, having recovered from the fear of poor first quarter business were falling in line.

Freight car loadings and bank clearings, two of the popular barometers of business, both showed declines from the corresponding period a year ago.

President Hoover reported in Washington Tuesday that for the first time since the stock market crash last fall the trend of employment had definitely changed "in the right direction."

Crude oil production showed a rather sharp decrease. At least one more copper mine was closed down during the week, but the domestic demand for the red metal was reported to have shown some improvement.

Retail trade received some stimulus from the usual January reduction sales, although severe low temperatures were regarded as a retarding influence, particularly in the middle west and the south.

NEW YORK, Jan. 26—(AP)—Municipal bond issues scheduled for award this week total $25,426,793. The largest is a city of St. Louis $9,000,000 public building and improvement loan.

A $10,000,000 issue of Central Gas & Electric company 5 1-2 per cent three year gold notes is to be offered tomorrow at 98.25. Other new offerings include $1,000,000 in first mortgage 5 1-2s of the Iowa Public Service company. The bonds are due in 1959 and will be priced at 98 1-2.

The Acme Wire company of New Haven, Conn., reports record net earnings of $446,118 for 1929, compared with $203,879 in the previous year.

The protective committee representing the interests of holders of city of Sanford, Fla., bonds due and in default has received for deposit obligations of more than $4,600,000 principal amount, or about two-thirds of the total outstanding in the public's hands.

The current issue of the Guaranty Survey, published by the Guaranty Trust, says that the revival in industrial activity in the last few weeks has been "at least as prompt and vigorous as was generally expected" and that although this recovery has been mainly seasonal, it has been "sufficiently marked to warrant a more optimistic attitude than was possible a month ago."

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Breed Theatre

Acclaimed one of the outstanding films of the year, "Jazz Heaven," Radio Pictures' all-talking, all-music offering opened yesterday to an enthusiastic audience at the Breed theatre.

"Jazz Heaven" proves to be more than just another good picture; it is a hit, and it's human, logical, tuneful and carries rib-tickling comedy from start to finish.

Around "Someone," written by Oscar Levant and Sidney Clare, most of the story of "Jazz Heaven" is woven. Brown is a song writer who is struggling for success. "Someone" is his pet brain child, although he isn't quite satisfied with the final measures of the chorus, and the last lines of the lyrics. His neighbors in the boarding house would be better satisfied if he abandoned the song-writing business because he keeps them awake nights with his continual quest of the last chord.

Then Sally O'Neil who lives in the next room and works in a music publishing house, offers her help. From then on it is a succession of near victories and heartaches until the boy wins the girl and success.

Palace Theatre

John Barrymore, the prince of the screen, has his greatest role in "General Crack," all talking romance of adventure which is now playing at the Palace theater, and which is one of the greatest pictures that this popular playhouse has ever presented to the public. Those who know and admire Barrymore's work can come and see a new hero. Previously they only watched his action, followed his gestures. But this is a talking picture, Barrymore's first, and it is possible not only to see his gallant acting, but to hear the rich dramatic voice that made him famous on the stage before he entered movieland to become the star of stars.

In the role of "General Crack," Barrymore gets a chance to portray a man of constantly dividing emotions, a man who drifted from one love to another and was as inconstant in love as he was fierce in battle. Son of a royal prince and a gypsy princess, his blood was a mad mixture of the wild and the aristocratic.

After a series of adventures in which he promises to aid Emperor Leopold of Austria in return for half the gold in the empire and for the hand of that ruler's sister, we find "General Crack" falling in love with and marrying the wild gipsy, Fidelia. She turns false and when he comes back from the wars, he discovers that she has been unfaithful to him. So he leaves her after sentencing her lover to be shot, he finds himself deeply smitten by the ravishing face and figure of Maria Louisa, the emperor's sister.

Civil strife, with the general always at the forefront and in the thick of the fighting, then follow, and gradually events work up to a startling and dramatic climax which finds the famous soldier making what must have seemed to him the sweetest "surrender" in his career. Altogether the story is as beautifully acted as it might be told, let us imagine, by some mad gipsy minstrel by the wayside. It has fire, and vigor and romance.

On Milk Situation

Dr. Clarence G. Thompson is to speak upon "The Milk Situation" before the Woman's City club Thursday afternoon at 4 o'clock at the club room at the Wauregan hotel, under the auspices of the civics department. All men and women interested are invited to hear Dr. Thompson.

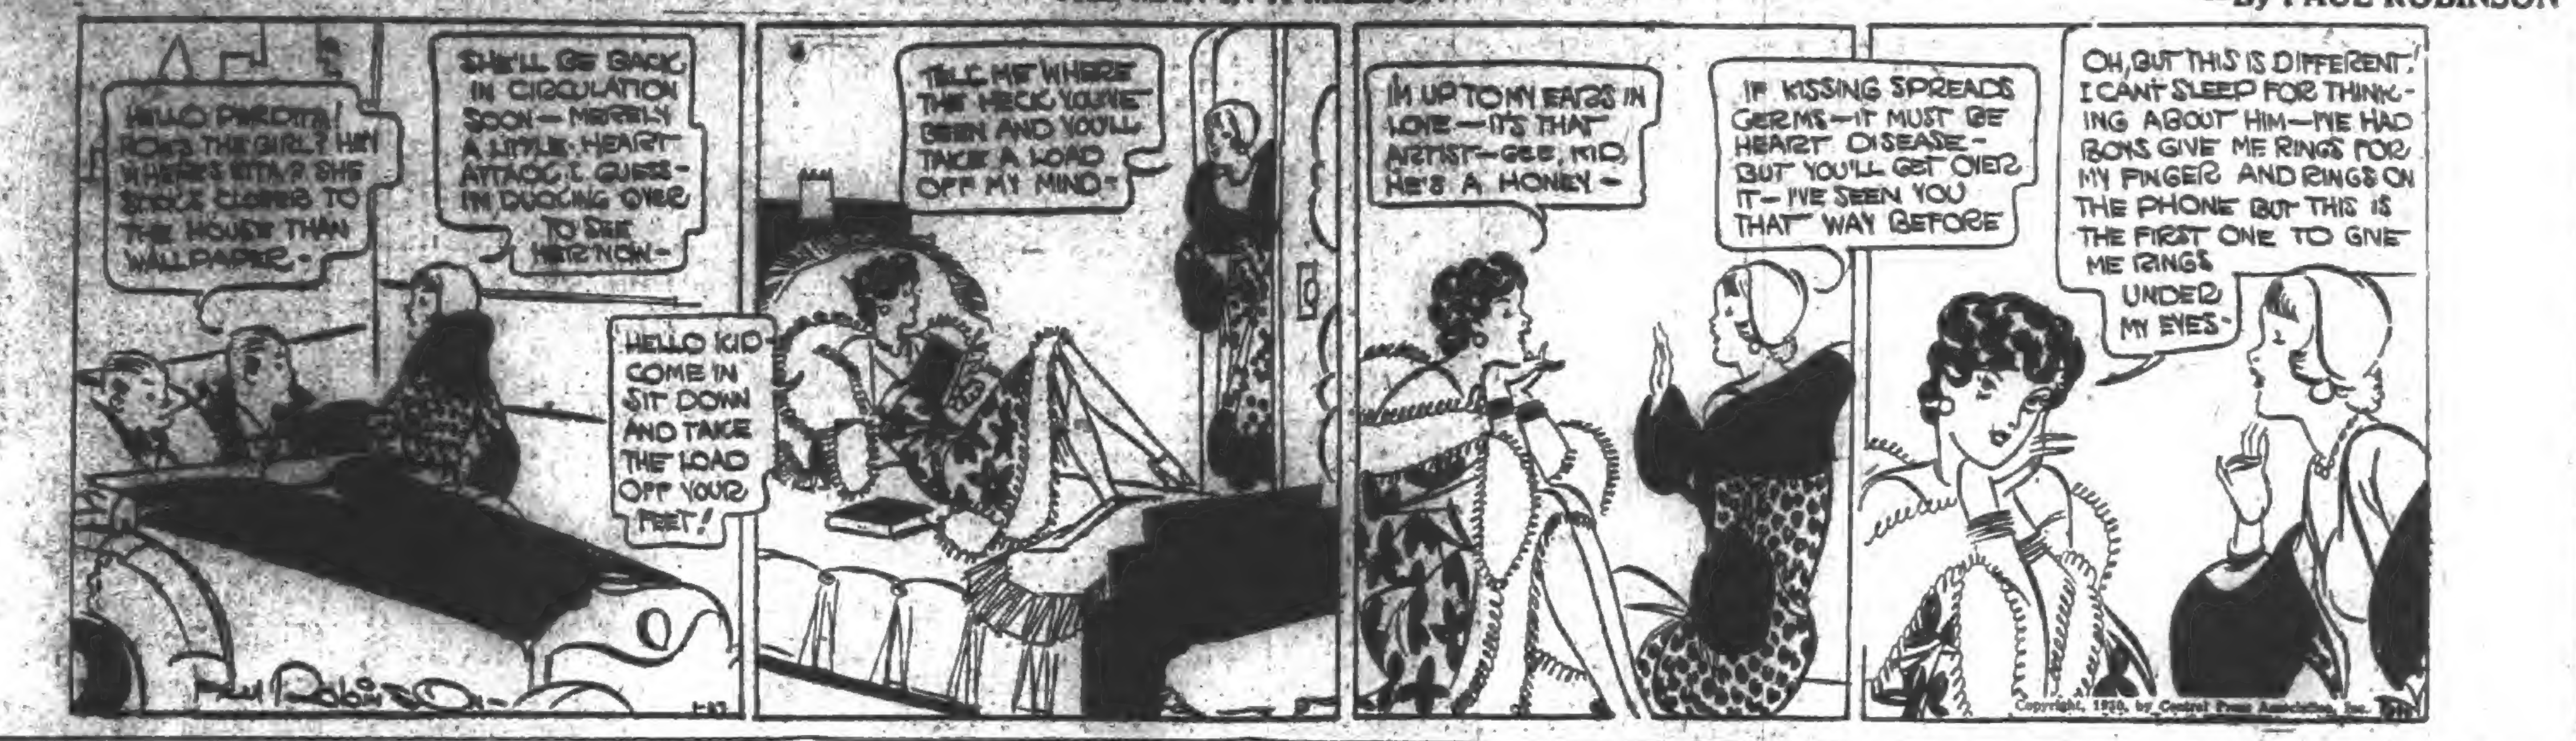
ETTA KETT THE MAN IN A MILLION —By PAUL ROBINSON



HELLO PERDITA! HOW'S THE GIRL? HEY WHERE'S ETTA? SHE STICKS CLOSER TO THE HOUSE THAN WALLPAPER-
SHE'LL BE BACK IN CIRCULATION SOON— MERELY A LITTLE HEART ATTACK I GUESS— I'M DUCKING OVER TO SEE HER NOW—
HELLO KID COME IN SIT DOWN AND TAKE THE LOAD OFF YOUR FEET!
TELL ME WHERE THE HECK YOU'VE BEEN AND YOU'LL TAKE A LOAD OFF MY MIND—
I'M UP TO MY EARS IN LOVE— IT'S THAT ARTIST— GEE, KID, HE'S A HONEY—
IF KISSING SPREADS GERMS— IT MUST BE HEART DISEASE— BUT YOU'LL GET OVER IT— I'VE SEEN YOU THAT WAY BEFORE
OH, BUT THIS IS DIFFERENT! I CAN'T SLEEP FOR THINKING ABOUT HIM— I'VE HAD BOYS GIVE ME RINGS FOR MY FINGER AND RINGS ON THE PHONE BUT THIS IS THE FIRST ONE TO GIVE ME RINGS UNDER MY EYES—

SWELL MUSICIANS' CLUB, NEW LONDON, PROVES MOIST OASIS IN DRY SAHARA

(Special to The Bulletin.)

NEW LONDON, Jan. 26.—The most elaborate drinking club in New London, the Musicians' club, occupying handsomely appointed rooms in the Garde building, 325 State street, where pre-prohibition drinks, including cocktails, highballs, gin rickeys, gin phizzes, et. al., and even champagne could be secured to appease the thirst or desire of the patrons for strong drink, was raided Saturday afternoon. Charles Danz, 20 School street, employed at the club room, was arrested charged with violation of the liquor law. He was released upon furnishing a surety on his bond of $1000 for his appearance in the police court Monday. A large and varied assortment of liquors was seized, including 13 quarts of whiskey, eight pints of whiskey, three sample bottles whiskey, eight quarts gin, gallon jug gin, quart vermouth, quart champagne, quart rum, six bottles of beer, together with two gambling machines of the 25 cent type.

The Musicians' club has been in existence about two years and had a large patronage, most of those who visited the rooms being business men and even professional men. The police had long sought to obtain evidence against the club and Saturday succeeded. Judge Daniel M. Cronin issued a search warrant ordering the raiding of the series of rooms. Desk Sergeant William Babcock, who is at the head of all raids, together with Sergeant John Courtney and Patrolmen Frank Philopena and Arthur Feeley, went to the club rooms where they were readily admitted by Danz, who was in charge. The search was then made for wet goods, plenty being found.

BROADHEAD LEAVES WIFE BUT CLEAVES TO HIRED CAR

(Special to The Bulletin.)

NEW LONDON, Jan. 26.—Edward Broadhead, until recently a member of the U. S. Coast Guard and residing on West street, was arrested by the Hartford police Saturday afternoon at the request of the New London police on charges of non-support and conversion. He was brought back to New London Saturday night and will be in the police court Monday. Broadhead earlier in the week deserted his wife, hired a Buick automobile of the Hire & Drive It Co., and disappeared. When arrested in Hartford Saturday, Broadhead was in possession of the automobile.

FISHING SLOOP MINNIE L. SEIZED BUT PROVES DRY

(Special to The Bulletin.)

NEW LONDON, Jan. 26.—Fishing sloop, Minnie V., a 35-footer and hailing from New Bedford, Mass., was seized as a suspected rum-runner in Long Island sound early Saturday morning. The boat was brought into port and is now tied up at the state pier, where the master is charged technically with violation of the navigation laws. The boat was passing through the sound when the U. S. Coast Guard patrol boat 239 sighted her. After a short chase the fisherman was overhauled, but when the crew boarded the sloop and instituted a search, liquor was not found. When captured the sloop was running without proper lights or with proper equipment. The sloop was brought into port where she was moored at the old Central Vermont railroad wharf and afterwards taken to the state pier.

MICHAEL JOY LEFT ABOUT $10,000 IN SAVINGS BANK

Michael Joy, a former inmate at Hillside home and who died at Lawrence-Memorial hospital Thursday night from a fractured skull, which injury he sustained by falling on slippery steps at the home a week ago, had bank savings of $10,000, it has been revealed. Mr. Joy was for many years employed by the F. H. & A. H. Chappell Coal company and was prudent and economical, saving all that he could from his earnings.

FOUR BOYS ARE FOUND TO HAVE STOLEN $1,200 WORTH

The police, Saturday afternoon rounded up a gang of youths charged with breaking and entering and theft. They were in possession of loot of the estimated value of $1200. The youths arrested are Cornelius McCarthy, 15, of 89 Howard street; Edward Klimberg, 17, of 53 Shaw street; Stephen Delaporte, 19, of 9 Archer Court; Joseph Mugovero, 17, of 23 Belden street and Rosario Rinardo, 36 Grand street. They will be in the police court Monday. Practically all the boys, especially Rinardo, have police court records. The youths broke into the storage house of the estate of J. E. Fitzgerald, corner of Belden court and Belden street recently and stole electric light fixtures and numerous other articles of brass and copper composition. Saturday afternoon Patrolman John Sullivan observed McCarthy on Bank street carrying a weighty bag. He was accompanied by Klimberg. The officer stopped the youths and when the nature of the contents of the bag was revealed, the officer notified the defective bureau and Sergeants John Cavanaugh and Nelson Smith, with Officer Sullivan conducted an investigation, which resulted in the arrest of the youths and the recovery of most of the stolen property.

Coast Guard destroyer, Cummings and Mrs. Joseph Rheberg and infant son, Mystic, patients at Lawrence-Memorial hospital, were discharged Saturday.

MUSANTE TO BE TRIED IN WATERFORD TOWN COURT

Mario Musante, 226 Williams street and employed by the Robert Gair company, Montville, was arrested Saturday by State Police Officer John Smith charged with reckless driving and will be tried in the Waterford town court Monday. Musante was driving a Ford automobile from the Waffle house, Lyme, early last Sunday morning, being enroute to New London. In the auto with him were Miss Laura Berg, 29 Belden street; Gordon Mahan, 184 Broad street and Miss Bertha Burdick, Connecticut avenue. When the automobile was passing through Waterford, at a point opposite Jordan cemetery, Musante lost control of the steering wheel and the auto left the concrete highway, proceeding about 300 feet along the state highway fence, then jumping a brook where it came to a stop when it hit a telephone pole. Musante sustained a lacerated scalp and was discharged at Lawrence-Memorial hospital Friday. Miss Berg fractured two fingers of her left hand and sustained bruises. She was discharged at the hospital Saturday afternoon.

New York Car Abandoned

Mrs. Warren Hathaway, 5 Garfield avenue, informed the police Saturday that an automobile had apparently been abandoned in front of her residence. Patrolman Frank Philopena investigated and found that the car was driven to the Hathaway residence at 1 o'clock Saturday morning and when Mrs. Hathaway peered through a window she observed two or three young men alight and head towards Williams street. The car is believed to have been stolen and has been taken to a garage and put in storage to await a claimant. The car carries New York markers.

Wireless Operator Recovers

Louis Kleinklaus, Hoboken, N. J., a wireless operator on steamers of the Atlantic Coast Fisheries, was included among the patients discharged at Lawrence-Memorial hospital Saturday. Kleinklaus was stricken with acute appendicitis three weeks ago while his boat was 200 miles off this port. A wireless message to the U. S. Coast Guard here resulted in the operator being taken off the boat by the crew of the destroyer Monaghan and brought to port. Off the mouth of the harbor Kleinklaus was transferred to a coast guard patrol boat and taken to the state pier where an ambulance was awaiting to convey the stricken man to the hospital. Arriving at the hospital, Kleinklaus was operated upon immediately.

FINE OF $400 AND COSTS IMPOSED ON FRANCES FABBRI

(Special to The Bulletin.)

NEW LONDON, Jan. 26—Frances Fabbri, 19 Smith street, was in the police court Saturday charged with violation of the liquor law on two counts. She pleaded guilty to both charges and was fined $400 and costs. A raiding squad, Sergeant Samuel Hick, Automobile Patrol Officer Elwood Bailey and Patrolmen Dennis Murphy, Henry Hick and Harry Watterson obtained a search warrant from Judge Daniel M. Cronin Friday night and then raided the drinking rendezvous, where a large quantity of beer and liquor was seized. A half dozen young men found in the resort were arrested charged with frequenting. Although required to provide a surety on their respective bonds of $50, none of them were presented in court.

Bisconti Pays $400 Fine

Angelo Bisconti, 678 Bank street, was also charged with violation of the liquor law on two counts. He pleaded guilty and was fined $400 and costs. Bisconti's residence was raided by the same squad Friday afternoon and a quantity of beer and whiskey, wine and alcohol was seized. No frequenters were found in the resort.

Alexander Piascik, 79 Harrison street, employed by the Eastern Connecticut Power company, was discharged at Lawrence-Memorial hospital Saturday. Piascik sustained severe electrical burns while at his work several weeks ago.

WOMAN'S CAR THE CAUSE OF MAN LOSING A LEG

(Special to The Bulletin.)

NEW LONDON, Jan. 26.—An automobile pleasure car, driven by Miss Katherine Salter, 74 Williams street, in passing through Main street, Saturday night, skidded on the track of the Connecticut company, causing the automobile to climb the sidewalk and pin Edward Gilliam, 17 Hill street, against an iron fence. Gilliam sustained an injury to his left leg and of such a nature that it was necessary to amputate that member at Lawrence Memorial hospital. Miss Salter was driving her car on Main street and at the corner of Shapley street the car skidded. Before Miss Salter could bring the auto under control, Gilliam was struck, being pinned against the fence. He was bleeding from his wound and after emergency treatment had been administered to him, Gilliam was transferred to the hospital where the leg was amputated. His condition tonight was such that his recovery was anticipated. Witnesses of the accident, L. F. Branch, state pier, and John KyrakI, 72 Crystal avenue, informed the police that Miss Salter was traveling at a moderate rate of speed and the accident was unavoidable.

SWELL MUSICIANS' CLUB, NEW LONDON, PROVES MOIST OASIS IN DRY SAHARA

(Special to The Bulletin.)

NEW LONDON, Jan. 26.—The most elaborate drinking club in New London, the Musicians' club, occupying handsomely appointed rooms in the Garde building, 325 State street, where pre-prohibition drinks, including cocktails, highballs, gin rickeys, gin phizzes, et. al., and even champagne could be secured to appease the thirst or desire of the patrons for strong drink, was raided Saturday afternoon. Charles Danz, 20 School street, employed at the club room, was arrested charged with violation of the liquor law. He was released upon furnishing a surety on his bond of $1000 for his appearance in the police court Monday. A large and varied assortment of liquors was seized, including 13 quarts of whiskey, eight pints of whiskey, three sample bottles whiskey, eight quarts gin, gallon jug gin, quart vermouth, quart champagne, quart rum, six bottles of beer, together with two gambling machines of the 25 cent type.

The Musicians' club has been in existence about two years and had a large patronage, most of those who visited the rooms being business men and even professional men. The police had long sought to obtain evidence against the club and Saturday succeeded. Judge Daniel M. Cronin issued a search warrant ordering the raiding of the series of rooms. Desk Sergeant William Babcock, who is at the head of all raids, together with Sergeant John Courtney and Patrolmen Frank Philopena and Arthur Feeley, went to the club rooms where they were readily admitted by Danz, who was in charge. The search was then made for wet goods, plenty being found.

BROADHEAD LEAVES WIFE BUT CLEAVES TO HIRED CAR

(Special to The Bulletin.)

NEW LONDON, Jan. 26.—Edward Broadhead, until recently a member of the U. S. Coast Guard and residing on West street, was arrested by the Hartford police Saturday afternoon at the request of the New London police on charges of non-support and conversion. He was brought back to New London Saturday night and will be in the police court Monday. Broadhead earlier in the week deserted his wife, hired a Buick automobile of the Hire & Drive It Co., and disappeared. When arrested in Hartford Saturday, Broadhead was in possession of the automobile.

FISHING SLOOP MINNIE L. SEIZED BUT PROVES DRY

(Special to The Bulletin.)

NEW LONDON, Jan. 26.—Fishing sloop, Minnie V., a 35-footer and hailing from New Bedford, Mass., was seized as a suspected rum-runner in Long Island sound early Saturday morning. The boat was brought into port and is now tied up at the state pier, where the master is charged technically with violation of the navigation laws. The boat was passing through the sound when the U. S. Coast Guard patrol boat 239 sighted her. After a short chase the fisherman was overhauled, but when the crew boarded the sloop and instituted a search, liquor was not found. When captured the sloop was running without proper lights or with proper equipment. The sloop was brought into port where she was moored at the old Central Vermont railroad wharf and afterwards taken to the state pier.

MICHAEL JOY LEFT ABOUT $10,000 IN SAVINGS BANK

Michael Joy, a former inmate at Hillside home and who died at Lawrence-Memorial hospital Thursday night from a fractured skull, which injury he sustained by falling on slippery steps at the home a week ago, had bank savings of $10,000, it has been revealed. Mr. Joy was for many years employed by the F. H. & A. H. Chappell Coal company and was prudent and economical, saving all that he could from his earnings.

FOUR BOYS ARE FOUND TO HAVE STOLEN $1,200 WORTH

The police Saturday afternoon rounded up a gang of youths charged with breaking and entering and theft. They were in possession of loot of the estimated value of $1200. The youths arrested are Cornelius McCarthy, 18, of 89 Howard street; Edward Klimberg, 17, of 53 Shaw street; Stephen Delaporte, 19, of 9 Archer Court; Joseph Mugovero, 17, of 28 Belden street and Rosario Rinardo, 36 Grand street. They will be in the police court Monday. Practically all the boys, especially Rinardo, have police court records. The youths broke into the storage house of the estate of J. E. Fitzgerald, corner of Belden court and Belden street recently and stole electric light fixtures and numerous other articles of brass and copper composition. Saturday afternoon Patrolman John Sullivan observed McCarthy on Bank street carrying a weighty bag. He was accompanied by Klimberg. The officer stopped the youths and when the nature of the contents of the bag was revealed, the officer notified the detective bureau and Sergeants John Cavanaugh and Nelson Smith, with Officer Sullivan conducted an investigation, which resulted in the arrest of the youths and the recovery of most of the stolen property.

He is survived by his wife, three daughters, Mrs. Fred Sentell, Mrs. Joseph Sixe and Miss Rose Norton and by two sons, Dr. Frank J. Norton, Chicago and Charles Norton, New Haven. MUSANTE TO BE TRIED IN WATERFORD TOWN COURT

Mario Musante, 256 Williams street and employed by the Robert Gair company, Montville, was arrested Saturday by State Police Officer John Smith charged with reckless driving and will be tried in the Waterford town court Monday. Musante was driving a Ford automobile from the Waffle house, Lyme, early last Sunday morning, being enroute to New London. In the auto with him were Miss Laura Bern, 80 Belden street; Gordon Mahan, 156 Broad street and Miss Bertha Burdick, Connecticut avenue. When the automobile was passing through Waterford, at a point opposite Jordan cemetery, Musante lost control of the steering wheel and the auto left the concrete highway, proceeding about 200 feet along the state highway fence, then jumping a brook where it came to a stop when it hit a telephone pole. Musante sustained a lacerated scalp and was discharged at Lawrence-Memorial hospital Friday. Miss Bern fractured two fingers of her left hand and sustained bruises. She was discharged at the hospital Saturday afternoon.

New York Car Abandoned

Mrs. Warren Hathaway, 4 Garfield avenue, informed the police Saturday that an automobile had apparently been abandoned in front of her residence. Patrolman Frank Philopene investigated and found that the car was driven to the Hathaway residence at 1 o'clock Saturday morning and when Mrs. Hathaway peered through a window she observed two or three young men alight and head towards Williams street. The car is believed to have been stolen and has been taken to a garage and put in storage to await a claimant. The car carries New York markers.

Wireless Operator Recovers

Louis Kleinklaus, Hoboken, N. J., a wireless operator on steamers of the Atlantic Coast Fisheries, was included among the patients discharged at Lawrence-Memorial hospital Saturday. Kleinklaus was stricken with acute appendicitis three weeks ago while his boat was 200 miles off this port. A wireless message to the U. S. Coast Guard here resulted in the operator being taken off the boat by the crew of the destroyer Monaghan and brought to port. Off the mouth of the harbor Kleinklaus was transferred to a coast guard patrol boat and taken to the state pier where an ambulance was awaiting to convey the stricken man to the hospital. Arriving at the hospital, Kleinklaus was operated upon immediately.

FINE OF $400 AND COSTS IMPOSED ON FRANCES FABBRI

(Special to The Bulletin.)

NEW LONDON, Jan. 26.—Frances Fabbri, 19 Smith street, was in the police court Saturday charged with violation of the liquor law on two counts. She pleaded guilty to both charges and was fined $400 and costs. A raiding squad, Sergeant Samuel Hick, Automobile Patrol Officer Elwood Bailey and Patrolmen Dennis Murphy, Henry Hick and Harry Watterson obtained a search warrant from Judge Daniel M. Cronin Friday night and then raided the drinking rendezvous, where a large quantity of beer and liquor was seized. A half dozen young men found in the resort were arrested charged with frequenting. Although required to provide a surety on their respective bonds of $50, none of them were presented in court.

Bisconti Pays $400 Fine

Angelo Bisconti, 378 Bank street, was also charged with violation of the liquor law on two counts. He pleaded guilty and was fined $400 and costs. Bisconti's residence was raided by the same squad Friday afternoon and a quantity of beer and whiskey, wine and alcohol was seized. No frequenters were found in the resort.

Alexander Piascik, 73 Harrison street, employed by the Eastern Connecticut Power company, was discharged at Lawrence-Memorial hospital Saturday. Piascik sustained severe electrical burns while at his work several weeks ago.

WOMAN'S CAR THE CAUSE OF MAN LOSING A LEG

(Special to The Bulletin.)

NEW LONDON, Jan. 26.—An automobile pleasure car, driven by Miss Katherine Salter, 74 Williams street, in passing through Main street Saturday night skidded on the track of the Connecticut company, causing the automobile to climb the sidewalk and pin Edward Gilliam, 27 Hill street, against an iron fence. Gilliam sustained an injury to his left leg and of such a nature that it was necessary to amputate that member at Lawrence Memorial hospital. Miss Salter was driving her car on Main street and at the corner of Shapley street the car skidded. Before Miss Salter could bring the auto under control, Gilliam was struck, being pinned against the fence. He was bleeding from his wound and after emergency treatment had been administered to him, Gilliam was transferred to the hospital where the leg was amputated. His condition tonight was such that his recovery was anticipated. Witnesses of the accident, L. F. Branch, state pier, and John Kyrakl, 73 Crystal avenue, informed the police that Miss Salter was traveling at a moderate rate of speed and the accident was unavoidable.

Three Trips Over Globe And She's Only Seven, Too

Little Esther Bourne, 7, of Manila, is learning her geography [illegible]. She is on her third trip around the world.

MIAMI, Fla., Jan. 26—(AP) — The world is a big, flat geography book to little Miss Esther Bourne, who admits seven serious years.

Esther has been twice around the world and is half way around on her third globe-girdling trip— just when others of her age are learning that there's a lot of country beyond their own front yards.

She has visited tombs of the Pharaohs, followed the midnight sun to Oslo, seen Japan flowering with chrysanthemums, motored over the Holy Land, sojourned in Vienna and Budapest, watched sunshine gild the Himalayas.

She has traveled in 40 countries, by airplane, camel back, steamer, automobile and rickshaw.

Esther is the daughter of M. R. Bourne of Manila, P. I., vice president of the Manila Trading company. His business requires much travel and his family goes along.

Born in the Philippines, Esther was voyaging when she was 3 months old. She made her first world trip at 3 and again at 5.

Some Tasty Recipes

Orange Marmalade

9 oranges
6 lemons
2 quarts cold water
Sugar

Wash fruits. Cut into very thin slices and remove all seeds. Cut into strips, using scissors. Place fruit in a preserving kettle (enamel suggested) and add water. Cover with lid and let stand 36 hours. Boil very slowly for 1 1-2 hours. Measure and add equal amount of sugar. Cook slowly until marmalade becomes jelly-like. Pour into sterilized glasses and when cold cover with melted paraffin. Stir marmalade frequently with a wooden spoon. (Two quarts equal 8 cups).

Lima Beans and Tomatoes escalloped (Serving 4)

1 1-2 cups cooked lima beans
2 cups tomatoes
2 tablespoons chopped onions
1-2 teaspoon salt
1-4 teaspoon paprika
2-3 cup rolled cracker or bread crumbs
4 tablespoons butter, melted

Mix butter and crumbs and spread over other ingredients which have been placed in a buttered baking dish. Bake 20 minutes in a moderate oven. Serve in dish in which baked.

This is a good dish to serve on a cold or rainy day.

American Chop Suey (Serving 6)

1 pound lean pork (pork butt suggested)
4 tablespoons fat
3 tablespoons chopped onions
4 tablespoons chopped green peppers
1 1-2 cups diced celery
1 cup cooked rice
3 cups meat stock or water
1 teaspoon salt
1-4 teaspoon pepper
2 tablespoons chop suey sauce (this can be omitted)

Cut the pork in 1-inch pieces. Heat fat and add the pork and brown it well on all sides. Add the onions, green peppers and celery and brown well. Add other ingredients. Pour into a casserole. Cover tightly and bake 1 hour in a slow oven.

This can be served on rice if desired, although there is some rice in the food. If the pork has fat on it, cut it off and heat that for browning. No other fat will be needed in the chop suey. Lima or kidney beans can be used instead of the rice if desired.

ADVANCE IDEAS ABOUT THE SPRING STYLES

PARIS, Jan. 26—(AP)—Everybody is talking about capes for spring in style circles, and most resident stylists are cabling that information to their home offices in New York.

Jersey and tweed two-and three-piece suits with finger-tip length capes; dresses with elbow length detachable cape collars, and full length tweed coats with detachable capes are the things the professional prognosticators are expecting.

Evening ensembles also will have their capes, it is believed. They will be in materials to match dresses and be romantic as to type.

Afternoon dresses for advance spring wear, meant for Riviera residents, have a tendency to feature cape collars and jacket fronts with cape-backs.

STYLE SHOW PORTRAYS BUSTLES, HIGH COLLARS

WASHINGTON, Jan. 26—(AP)—Business women all over the country are ransacking attics for bustles, stiff collars and old hats.

They will portray the business woman of 30 years ago at a nation-wide style show March 10 to 16.

The show will be staged by the National Federation of Business and Professional Women in 1,100 cities and will show the clothes styles of business women from the time they first began punching time clocks and typewriters down to the present day.

Prizes To Mothers

ANGORA, Turkey, Jan. 26—(AP) — Following Mussolini's lead, Ghazi Mustapha Kemal, president of the Turkish republic, will begin this year to award prizes to mothers of six living children or more. The prizes will be money awards or medals bearing the ghazi's effigy. The mothers may take their choice.

SEACOST TOWN CLAIMS BERNHARDT BIRTHPLACE

LES PORTES, France, Jan. 26—(AP)—Folk hereabout believe that Sarah Bernhardt was a native daughter of this little town at the north end of the Island of Re, and was not born in Paris as she herself often said.

The tradition, as stated by the cure of the parish church, is that the blond Rosine Bernard, child of a local beauty and a handsome Polish officer in Napoleon's army, was one and the same with Rosine Bernhardt, known as Sarah Bernhardt to the world.

The Polish officer was a painter by avocation and among other pictures painted a Virgin, using his beautiful wife as model.

This picture, which he presented the parish church, according to the records, still hangs there. Many people profess to seeing a likeness between the features of the Virgin and those of the late Sarah Bernhardt, supposed daughter of the artist.

MEXICO CITY ORGANIZES GIRL POLICE SQUADRON

MEXICO CITY, Jan. 26 — (AP) — Thirty girls have been selected for the first squadron of "muchachas gendarmes" to be put into service late in January.

The members, all of uniform height, under 30 years old and of considerable comeliness, now are training in the Police Technical school.

Senorita Adela Siqueiros, movie and theatrical critic for several Mexico City magazines and newspapers 24 years old and of striking beauty, has been named commandante.

The squadron will be stationed in moving picture theatres, cabarets, railroad stations and playgrounds, and some of the principal hotels.

The girls will wear uniforms and carry pistols.

DESCENDANT OF LINCOLN PREFERS PLANE TO TEAS

WASHINGTON, Jan. 26—(AP)—Mary Lincoln Beckwith, great-great-granddaughter of Abraham Lincoln, has enrolled in a flying class here simply as "M. L. Beckwith."

She owns a three-seat sports plane and has a few hours flying credit attached to her name. A skilled sportswoman, Miss Beckwith has taken up flying with enthusiasm. Teas and receptions do not interest "Peggy," as she is known to her intimates.

She knows how to handle a yacht and goes in for all sorts of sports at the Lincoln country place at Manchester, Vt., and at the family's Virginia farm. When in Washington she lives in historic Georgetown with her mother, Mrs. Robert J. Randolph.

FOUR SISTERS IN IOWA WERE BORN ON FEB. 12

LUZERNE, Iowa, Jan. 26—(AP)—Four of seven children in the family of Mrs. Frank Dvorak, a widow, were born on Lincoln's birthday, February 12.

Three were born in Czecho-Slovakia before Mrs. Dvorak came to join her husband in the United States in 1913. Dvorak died a year ago.

The quartet claiming February 12 as their birthday are Mrs. Frances Prchal, 26; Mrs. Blanche Lagos, 20; Mary Dvorak, 18, and Lillian Dvorak, 9.

COUSIN OF FORMER KAISER ENJOYS CYCLING AT SIXTY

LONDON, Jan. 26—(AP)—Princess Frederic Leopold of Prussia, cousin of the former kaiser, is revisiting the scenes of her childhood in England at the age of 60 on a bicycle.

She is stopping at a small hotel in Twickenham and has hired a bicycle for her daily jaunts.

One ride which started at Twickenham led her to Hampton Court and ultimately to Windsor castle, no small achievement in these days of crowded roads.

Woman Heads Hospital

BERLIN, Jan. 26—(AP)—Frau Prof. Dr. Klothilde Gollwitzer-Meier has been appointed Germany's first hospital medical superintendent. She will occupy that position at the Hildegard hospital here.

In College At 14

NORMAN, Okla., Jan. 26.— (AP) — Isadore Mulmed, 14, is the youngest student in the University of Oklahoma.

WOMAN IN LIFE AND IN THE KITCHEN

SUGGESTIONS FOR THE HOUSEWIFE

Powdered borax sprinkled where cockroaches appear will exterminate them.

Soda and water are better refrigerator cleaners than soap and water.

Dust may be removed from wax flowers by dipping them in warm soapy water.

Old felt hats, cut in inch pieces, make excellent strips for doors and windows.

Rub Indian meal over a greasy sink and it will be much easier to clean it.

To garnish pork chops, use halves of apricots, filled alternately with a green cherry and a red one.

Be careful to "lightly stuff" a fowl. If the dressing is pushed into the cavity it will become heavy and soggy.

A large-sized dish-drainer makes an excellent receptacle in which to keep vegetables in the pantry.

When cutting cake or pie, you can do a neater job if you dip your knife into cold water before inserting each time. This prevents sticking.

Before papering whitewashed walls wash them thoroughly with strong vinegar and the paste will readily adhere to the surface.

An easy method of making bread crumbs is to put the dry bread in a deep bowl and crush it with a wooden vegetable masher.

To clean silver put a little peroxide on a flannel cloth, rub it on a cake of soap and apply to the silver. Then polish it with a soft cloth.

Salt sprinkled over a faded rug and then swept with a heavy broom will bring back a lot of the freshness to the carpet.

FINE CHINA

If the fear of breakage makes you hesitate to use your fine china and glassware try placing a folded Turkish towel at the bottom of the dishpan or the sink before washing them. Do not immerse them in hot water suddenly, as delicate glass and china cannot withstand abrupt changes in temperature. Don't put the pieces in the pan until you have poured in the water and dissolved the soap.

CLEAN TUB

If you use a cloth wrung out of water to which a little kerosene has been added, it will keep the bath tub shining.

ELECTRIC TEA-KETTLE

A new electric tea-kettle brings back the days when the old copper kettle used to sing cheerily on the kitchen stove. It is an excellent purchase for a tea addict.

QUICK BAKE

If you parboil potatoes before baking, it speeds the process considerably. Rub the skins with butter before putting in the oven and they are much softer and better to eat.

HEALTH AND BEAUTY

A good method for softening and whitening the face, neck, arms and hands is to mix a little raw cornmeal and sour milk, and apply.

Relief may be had, if the eyes run in windy weather, by bathing them in a solution of ten grains of boracic acid to one ounce of hot distilled water.

For a throbbing headache, drink the juice of half a lemon in fresh water. Follow with the other half in one-half hour and rub the sliced lemon over the brow and temples.

Liquid rouge is not recommended for persons with large pores, as it is liable to settle in the pores. Be sure to remove all make-up before going to be by applying cold cream and wiping off with a soft cloth.

HIDDEN POWER

A fragile and harmless looking chiffon handkerchief has, attached to the center, a small powder-puff for those who prefer loose powder instead of a compact.

INSIDE AND OUT

After washing our hands we find it necessary to touch a number of doubtfully clean objects between our homes and the places where we dine. Our best protection lies in wearing gloves that are clean inside as well as outside.

CARRY YOUR OWN BATHROOM KIT

In packing your bag for a week-end visit, don't forget to include the little bathroom luxuries you are accustomed to at home. Your hostess may make careful plans for your entertainment, but she cannot always anticipate your preferences in such matters as soap, tooth paste and bath salts.

Your favorite bath accessories will help to make you feel at home when you slip into a strange tub before going to bed at night. They can be packed into the pockets of one of the rubber-lined bags that are so convenient for carrying toilet articles.

GOLDFISH CARE

Goldfish should be fed greens, quite as much as birds. Any reputable store that carries fish food has a varied supply and a sprig or two can be purchased for next to nothing.

CAN'T BE LOST

A clever bottle-opener and cork-screw fastens to the wall and therefore is never misplaced. The affair is of nickel.

UNIQUE NAPKINS

Refreshment napkins, which are most unique are made of fine white linen, with cocks' heads embroidered in the corners in the finest of cross-stitching.

PIQUE SETS

White pique makes some of the smartest lingerie collar and cuff sets. Narrow strands of pique, hand-hemmed weave in and out to fashion a set that looks like basket weave fabric in a large mesh.

SILK SCARF

Some of the new sweaters for winter are dainty feminine blouses, really. One in brown, yellow and red design has a yellow scarf that fashions a collar and tie and the cuffs are turn-backs of silk.

DICTATES OF FASHION

There is a new color in simulated pearls called "Polly green."

Two evening gowns of printed cotton net were noted worn at Palm Beach recently.

Very new is the separate sports skirt of diagonal tweed that has a deep circular flounce for its fullness.

The tuck-in blouse is the favorite accompaniment of suits, either matching or contrasting with it in color.

French lingerie makers consider white the exclusive wear of brides. White lingerie, as a result, is expressly designed for marriage trousseaux.

The decorative old-fashioned idea of "false hems" is being revived. A brown satin gown has a 14-inch hem of crepe joined in scallops and ending in scallops.

The mellow note of satin in eggshell or delicate beige is possible to many dark hued dresses and suits that otherwise seem trying in the complexion.

If the new raised waistline is unbecoming don't try to wear it. Let your belt rest on the top of your hips. This is perfectly permissible, and beauty is always better style than unbecomingness.

ANIMAL HANDKERCHIEFS

Handkerchiefs for children are of white linen, with small animals in the corners outlined in colored embroidery.

TWEED TURBANS

The tweed turban has reached an ubiquitousness that ranks it above all other "Fords" this season. The newest ones are two or three colors.

MUFF PURSE

Muff purses are smaller as the season advances. Paris sends a muff with purse and an Ascot scarf made of black broadtail.

BROADED GILETS

Rich brocades make stunning little costume blouses and gilets, worn costume blouses and gilets, worn with black velvet skirts that dip and trail to beauty.

NEW ASCOT

The new Ascot tie for collegiates carries with it one's college or sorority colors and insignia. Berets repeat the colors but leave off the insignia.

TWO-PIECE FROCK STILL IN STYLE

Women who are devoted to the two-piece frock have wondered whether it will remain in the mode with the slinky one-piece frocks. It remains, but, oh, how changed! The belt (it must be belted) is placed at the higher waistline. There is often a short peplum. The cut is more or less intricate though the general effect is one of extreme simplicity. The skirt is longer and there is very little trimming.

LAUNDRY HINTS

Never starch linens that are to be stored, as they are liable to crack.

Almost any medicine stain may be removed from linen by soaking it in alcohol, rinsing with water and placing in the sunlight.

To clean soiled playing cards, dip a small sponge in spirits of camphor and rub lightly. This restores the newness.

A solution of boiling hot water and four ounces of pulverized alum to one pound of goods will set all colors in wash materials.

To make woolen blankets softer and hold their shape, hang them on a line dripping wet instead of wringing them. Whip lightly several times while drying and after thoroughtly dry with a wire carpet beater. They will be soft and light.

GLOVES

It is a good idea to put a very tiny pad of cotton wool in each finger tip. By this simple means the gloves will be saved from wearing through where the nails press against the leather.

Here is a novel way of cleaning brown kid gloves. Put the gloves on the hands, clean them thoroughly with petrol, rub with a clean cloth and leave to dry. When quite dry, take a little good furniture polish on a soft cloth and rub up the leather with it.

To clean white doeskin gloves, put them on the hands and rub some flour well into the fingers and any dirty marks. Shake well to remove the flour.

RAINY-DAY WEAR

Your rubbers, umbrella and rain coat should be wiped off, clean or washed off with cloth dripped in soapy water, before they are put away. This keeps them looking like new and makes them last longer.

CLEANING FURS

Fur collars and cuffs should be cleaned each week, in the following manner; sponge with gasoline or cleaning fluid, hang outdoors and brush them quite dry with a hat brush.

DOORS

Sometimes a room is so cut up with doors that you despair of decorating it to advantage. This is particularly true of a little hall, or one of the inner rooms of a city apartment. Have you ever thought of papering the center panel of the doors with the same paper that you have on the walls? This not only lends continuity to the walls, but if the proper wall-paper is used it makes the dark room lighter.

A LITTLE THING THAT COUNTS

Yes, it is exasperating to have the cooking utensils all blackened every time you use them. It will take only a minute to rub the bottoms of the pans with soap before putting them on the fire.

CONCERNING WOMEN

Women police are to be introduced into Turkey.

During the first day of her married life, a Korean bride must not speak—even to her husband.

Because they have been denied suffrage rights, women in Bermuda are to appeal to the British Privy Council.

Three hundred and eighty-two applications for patents were filed by women of Great Britain last year.

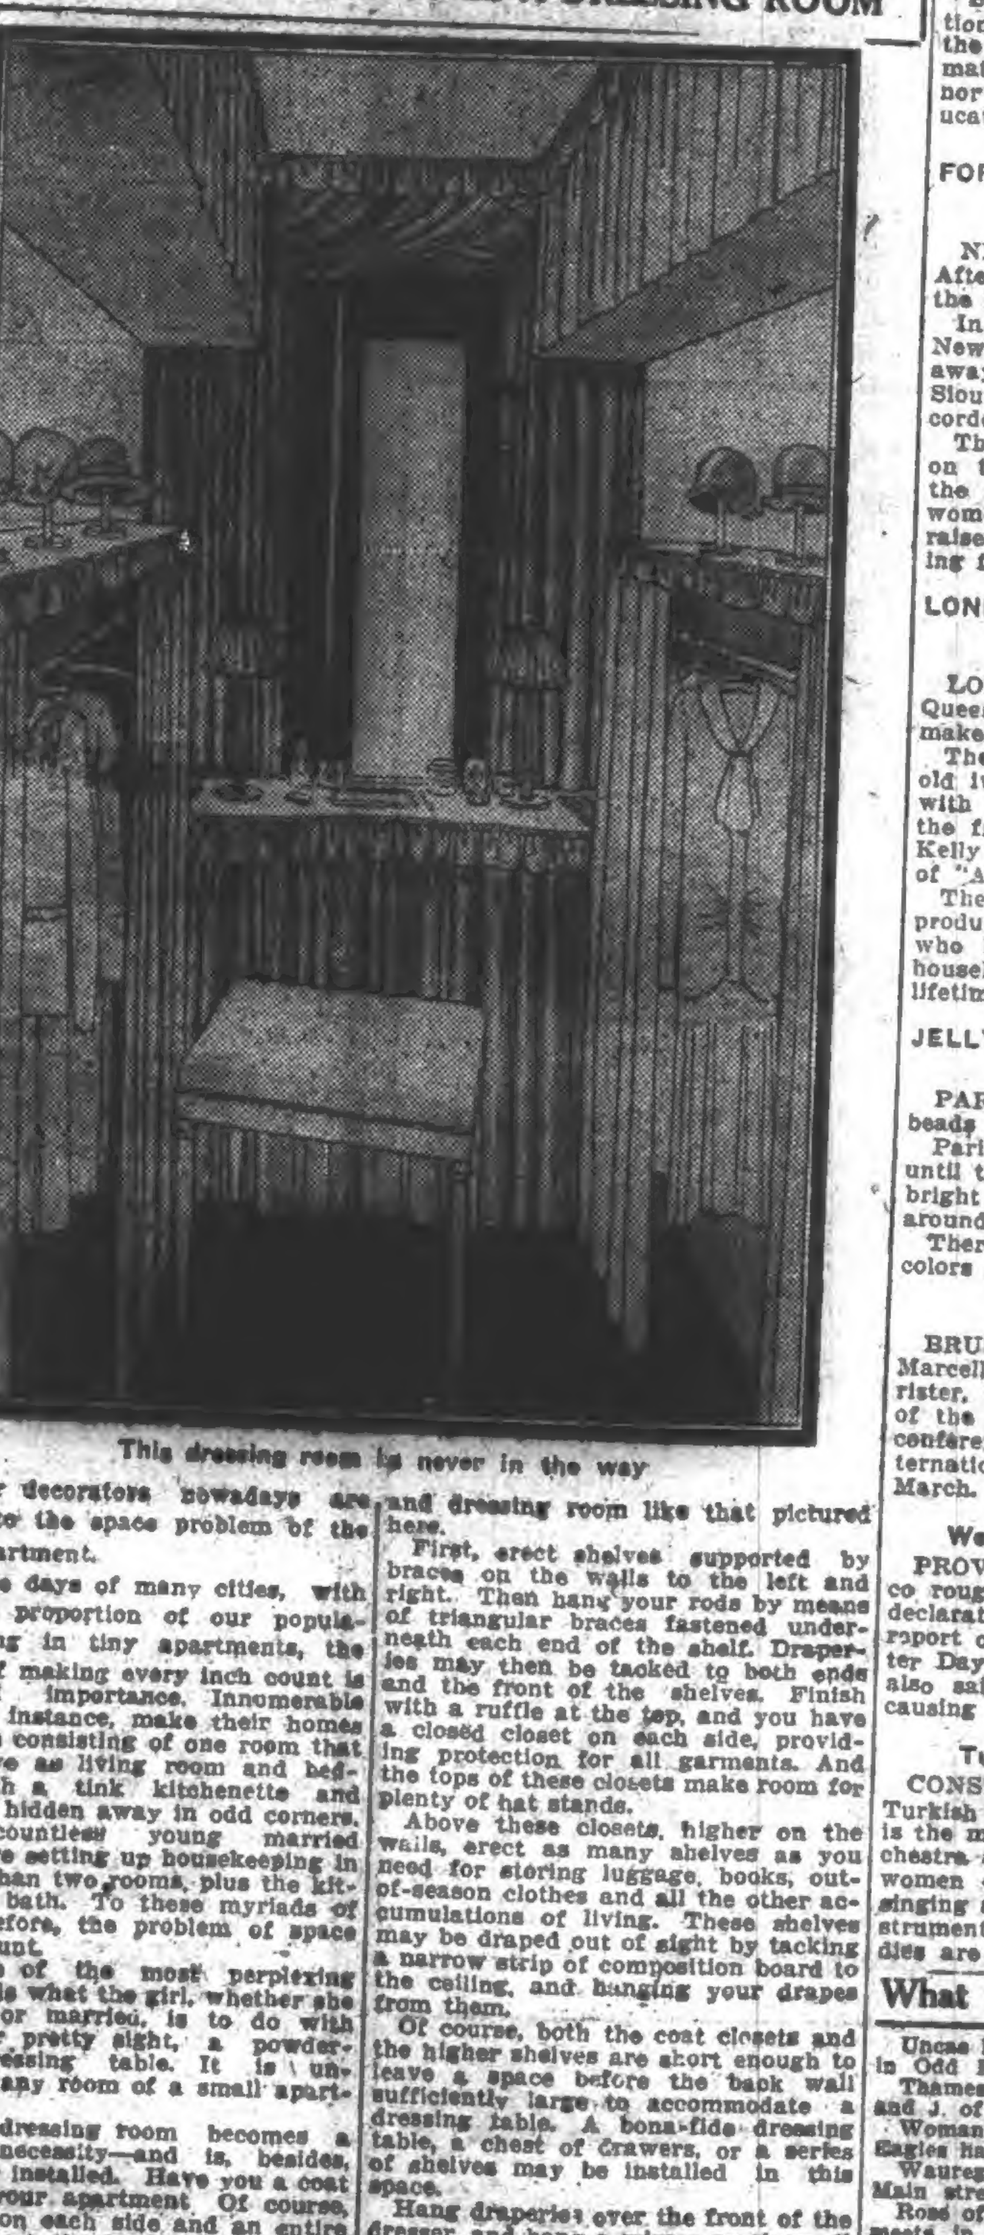
Lucy G. Shore of New York, an American business woman, has been appointed as a special trade adviser to Spain.

Women operate most of the pile drivers in Japan, coal the ships at Nagasaki, and load the heavy ore cars in the copper mines.

There are nine women, whose husbands fought under the American flag 114 years ago, still on the rolls of the Pension Bureau. They are drawing a total of $450 a month, or $50 each.

New York City now maintains the largest staff of policewomen in the United States. While the 125 women police officers in the bureau wear no uniforms, they display a shield, carry a gun, and have full power to make arrests.

THUS A CLOSET BECOMES A DRESSING ROOM



This dressing room is never in the way

In these days of many cities, with generous proportion of our population living in tiny apartments, the question of making every inch count is of vital importance. Innumerable girls, for instance, make their homes in quarters consisting of one room that must serve as living room and bedroom, with a tiny kitchenette and bathroom hidden away in odd corners.

And countless newly married couples are setting up housekeeping in no more than two rooms, plus the kitchen and bath. To these myriads of folk, therefore, the problem of space is paramount.

And one of the most perplexing dilemmas is what the girl, whether she is single or married, is to do with that never pretty sight, a powder-strewn dressing table. It is unsightly in any room of a small apartment.

Thus a dressing room becomes a practical necessity—and is, besides, very easily installed. Have you a coat closet in your apartment. Of course, with rods on each side and an entire wall space at the back end that is wholly wasted. But it need not be. The illustration shows why. And it is very simple and inexpensive to convert your closet into a combination closet and dressing room like that pictured here.

First, erect shelves supported by braces on the walls to the left and right. Then hang your rods by means of triangular braces fastened underneath each end of the shelf. Drape the front of the shelves. Finish with a ruffle at the top, and you have a closet on each side, providing for all garments. And the tops of these closets make room for plenty of hat stands.

Above these closets, higher on the walls, place as many shelves as you need for storing luggage, books, out-of-season clothes and all the other accumulations of living. These shelves may be draped out of sight by tacking a narrow strip of composition board to the ceiling, and hanging your drapes from them.

Of course, both the coat closets and the higher shelves are short enough to leave a space before the back wall sufficiently large to accommodate a dressing table. A bona-fide dressing table, a chest of drawers, or a series of shelves may be installed in this space.

Hang draperies over the front of the dresser, and hang a mirror on the wall above it. Draperies from a board on the ceiling make a graceful frame for the mirror. You see, it is all very easily and inexpensively done—and the result is both practical and charming.

Prince of Wales Learns of Buffalo Hunting From Pretty Cousin In Capetown

Lady May Cambridge (left) and her mother, Princess Alice (right), wife of the Earl of Athlone, are hosts to the Prince of Wales (center) at Capetown, South Africa.

CAPETOWN, S. Africa, Jan. 26.—(AP)—The Prince of Wales has opportunity to learn buffalo hunting from a pretty instructor.

While the prince is waiting here for word that all is ready for his big-game hunt in East Africa, Lady May Cambridge is able to give him pointers.

He is staying for a time here at government house as the guest of his uncle, the Earl of Athlone, governor general of South Africa. Lady May and her mother, Princess Alice, are the prince's official hostesses.

Both of them recently went on a big game hunt in Rhodesia and the Transvaal with Earl Athlone. All in family are excellent shots. Lord Athlone bagged three lions during the expedition while Lady May and Princess Alice each shot a buffalo.

The prince is enjoying a long overdue visit with the Cambridge family. He would have spent last Christmas with them if it had not been for the king's illness which recalled him to England.

Guiding Your Child

By Mrs. Agnes Lyne

The Perfect House

The mother of two fine children was showing me over her delightful new house on the beach.

She herself had planned and supervised the building of it and had herself chosen all its attractive furnishings.

Downstairs there were gracious living and dining rooms, a shower and dressing room for bathers as they came in from the surf, and a wide and friendly kitchen.

Upstairs there were her own and her husband's rooms, a guest room and baths.

"And where," I asked, "are the children's rooms?"

"Oh, they have quarters across the tennis court, over the garage. It's really so much better for them. Our late hours don't disturb them and their early ones don't bother us. Really, it's an ideal arrangement."

To me it seemed a little shocking. Granting that it may be extremely practical, it yet seemed a strange thing to plan a home which had actually no room for the children under its roof. Such a conception of "the perfect house" could only spring from an inner denial of the place of the children in the home.

Not one woman in a thousand would so openly express this attitude towards her children but there are many women, self absorbed, submerged in social obligations, who in effect accord their children no more than "quarters over the garage."

That children of such parents have an unusually hard time growing up is obvious.

Such lack of real maternal affection must warp the development of the child who is subjected to it, no matter how adequate his physical care nor how excellent his social and educational advantages.

FOREFATHERS MASSACRED, TOWN NOW AIDS INDIANS

NEW ULM, Minn., Jan. 26—(AP)—After 67 years, New Ulm has buried the hatchet with the Sioux Indians.

In 1862, while many of the men of New Ulm, then a pioneer town, were away fighting in the Civil war, the Sioux perpetrated what has been recorded as a massacre.

This winter the Sioux were in need, on their reservation near here, and the descendants of the men and women whose blood was shed in 1862 raised a store of cash, food and clothing for them.

LONDON ACTRESS TO WEAR QUEEN VICTORIA'S HOSE

LONDON, Jan. 26—(AP)—A pair of Queen Victoria's stockings are soon to make their London stage debut.

The hose, which are of a delicate old ivory shade and of very fine silk with an open-work lace design down the front, will be worn by Renee Kelly when she opens in the lead part of "Almost a Honeymoon."

They were given to Walter Ellis, producer of the play, by a relative who held a position in the royal household during Queen Victoria's lifetime.

MADAME TUSSAUD'S EARNS BIG PROFIT

LONDON Jan. 26—(AP)—No fund for the preservation of Madame Tussaud's as one of the historic landmarks of London will be needed yet awhile.

Directors of the waxworks institution visited by so many tourists have made public their annual report. It shows a net profit of nearly $305,000, on the basis of which the directors have recommended a dividend of 50 per cent on the deferred ordinary shares.

BOY SCOUTING! HOW IT HELPS THE BOY

But they don't need to be juvenile delinquents. Boys are not naturally inclined to be bad. But they are naturally inclined to be busy. That being busy may take the course of violating the traditions and conventions of their elders unless their elders see to it that the training is in the direction of right, true, manly ideals.

Most juvenile delinquency finds its roots in adult thoughtlessness. The boy wants to be busy, but the older people are too busy to help him.

The tension of the boy and the inattention of the man lead to mistakes on the part of both. The result is unpleasant to both. The public also suffers. The Boy Scout movement is the ounce of prevention that is worth more than the pound of cure.

It utilizes the things that boys want to do. It is built from the ground up on the constructive basis. Negatives are turned into positives. The boy is shown the "Why" of the things he does. Body and mind and soul are exercised in clean, straight living. The boy wants it. There are practically no deserters among boys who once join, if proper leadership is provided to keep them in the movement.

Scouting is based on the idea of education, which is pre-eminently an American ideal. It is scientific education, for it begins with what the boys know and goes from that to things they ought to know.

It does things that the schools can't do and that Sunday schools don't do. And yet the whole force of it is to increase the boy's interest in the things that the Sunday schools are doing.

Boys are "motor-minded." They want action. They don't want to just sit and listen. But they will listen intently if what they hear is related to what they are going to do a little later. That is where the scout teaching ties up with what the schools and Sunday schools want him to think about.

Norwich's Opportunity

There is a big local campagin soon to be launched in the Boy Scout movement. The worth of it has already been proven. That is attested by local results, and in another article we shall present testimony on this point from many others of different places.

Norwich has the opportunity in this campaign, to become a first class Boy Scout town. It will demand some local response and some work. But it can be done.

That would mean that Norwich is doing as much for her boys as any other city of its size. What do you think that would mean to the parents of live, husky boys who might be looking for a home in another city? We will tell more about this opportunity later.

Your Health And Brain

By Dr. Leland B. Alford

Nervous Balance.

By Dr. Leland B. Alford.

Nervous forces are literally balanced in their action.

For instance, every time a muscle contracts, another relaxes.

Probably every time nervous forces act in a certain direction other forces are acting in opposition. Perhaps we have a feeling that such a method is followed when we speak of a person as being "well balanced" or not well balanced.

The method is illustrated by the manner of regulation of the heart. Two sets of nerves extend from the nervous system to the heart. The action of one set is, as we would expect it to be, to increase the action of the heart. But the other set surprises us by showing that its effect is to interfere with the heart.

If an electric current is applied to one of the nerves the heart beats more slowly, in fact will almost stop beating, and the blood pressure falls.

The knowledge of this double flow of nervous energy enables us to understand many symptoms that occur in nervous disease.

After a stroke of apoplexy, for instance, the muscles of the paralyzed arm and leg become firm and tense. The limbs cannot be moved by effort of will, but they are not limp as we might expect. The explanation is that while the voluntary impulses are cut off by the stroke, so also are those which inhibit muscular action.

The tremor of shaking palsy and the twitching of chorea are symptoms supposed to be due to a cutting off by disease of the opposing or controlling forces.

The most interesting application of this principle of opposing forces is the very recent one to the effect that the convulsions of epilepsy and other disorders result from the weakening of controlling forces. The supposition is that due to disease or poisons control is interfered with, with the result that lower centers sometimes break loose, causing the spasm.

This theory is a noteworthy advance as it is the first one to give a rational explanation of a symptom that has always been most mysterious.

TAFTVILLE

Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Linderson and Miss Roberta Vergason, of North Third avenue with Wilfred Linderson of Bridgeport, were in North Stonington over the week end to attend the golden wedding anniversary of Mrs. Linderson's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Daniel S. Vergason, who entertained about 60 in observance of the occasion.

There was a very large attendance at the subscription dance given at the Community hall at the new school house in Newent Saturday evening, under the auspices of the Lisbon Community club. Local sportsmen who noted in The Bulletin's Danielson column that a rabbit fancier in that town had lost a number of valuable Belgian hares which escaped into the woods, expressed their opinion that the animals would not propogate in the wild state, because they are a domestic animal. A few years ago, the state of Pennsylvania spent a large sum to stock the forests of that state with Belgian hares, and protected the animals by law, but the experiment proved a failure. In cold weather, most domestic rabbits need some sort of bedding to protect them, and local rabbit fanciers pointed out that the most successful method of rearing them is to keep them from coming in contact with the earth at all. The best and largest rabbits produced in this country for meat purposes are raised in hutches with wooden floors. This is the method used by the large English breeders and recommended by the United States department of agriculture. The modern Belgian hare of the racy type developed by rabbit breeders in accordance with the standard set up of rabbit authorities, would hardly be able to exist on bark during the winter months as do the cottontails; and in the summer months, an abundance of green food invariably gives the young Belgians that peculiar disease known as the "slobbers," an ailment from which the cottontails do not appear to suffer in any serious fashion. Some years ago some local men had a plan of stocking the island in the Shetucket river with Belgian hares, but after conferring with experts, came to the conclusion that they could not be reared successfully when left to their own resources. Besides, the Belgian hare is not a hare at all, but a rabbit. Hares are born with eyes open and full coats; rabbits are naked and blind during their first few days in the nest.

JUDGMENT FOR $428.50 FOR NEW LONDON WOMAN

Florence Dow of New London is given judgment for $428.50 against the Billette-Vibber Co. of that city by Judge Charles B. Waller of the court of common pleas, in a decision handed down Saturday.

The plaintiff sued for $2,000 damages for personal injuries and damages to her car as the result of a collision Dec. 18, 1928, in Garfield avenue, in New London, between her car and a machine owned by the defendant company and operated by Charles Haupt of Groton.

It was charged that he threw a stone through the window of the store run by William McGuinness.

TURNER-STANTON CORDAGE MILL BADLY DAMAGED BY MIDNIGHT FIRE

The Turner and Stanton company cordage mill, No. 251 Broad street, was extensively damaged by fire, of mysterious origin, discovered at midnight Saturday. Sergeant John T. Casey of the local police department sent in the bell alarm from box 21, corner Broad street and Boswell avenue at 11.59 o'clock, calling out the apparatus from the Central fire station, Engine No. 3, from the Joseph Perkins road station and Engine No. 5, West Main street station.

Ten minutes previously Sergt. Casey and Officer Joseph Farrell had passed by the mill and at that time there was no sign of fire or smoke. Alexander Chimielewski, a call man, who was on the way to the headquarters of Engine No. 3, to remain at the station overnight, saw smoke coming from the two and a half story brick mill building and hurrying along the street met Sergt. Casey and Officer Farrell, informing them that the building was on fire. Sergt. Casey ran to the fire box and sent in the alarm while Officer Farrell remained to direct the apparatus to the fire.

Chief Henry R. Taft, first to arrive on the scene found the street completely filled with heavy, choking smoke through which he went with much difficulty. The smoke was so dense that it was impossible to see the mill building or any of the nearby buildings.

Engine No. 5 and Engine No. 1 hooked up two and a half inch water lines from a hydrant at Boswell avenue and Broad street and Engine No. 3 laid two and a half inch lines from a hydrant opposite the mill building.

The fire had a tremendous start when discovered for the firemen found the interior of one section of the mill a veritable furnace. Shafting and pulleys were red hot and the intense heat drove the firemen back several times.

Blinded by the choking smoke and hindered by the intense cold the firemen, however, stubbornly fought the raging flames which were under control by 1.30 o'clock when the recall was sent in. Families residing in the vicinity of the mill building were forced to leave their homes by the smoke.

The fire started in what is known as the "case room" where empty packing cases were stored. From this room the flames traveled into other sections of the building and up to the second floor through belt holes and steam pipe openings. The fire broke through the roof of the single story boiler room but did not get out of the main mill building.

Officials of the fire department are investigating the origin of the fire. It is understood that papers were found strewn on the office floor and it was said that some of the mill records were found missing from the office, but that they had been taken from the safe during the fire as a precautionary measure. It is also understood that an official of the company saw lights burning late Saturday night in the section of the mill where the fire originated and that he went into the mill and turned off the lights.

The damage to the building, which is owned by the Maria T. Turner estate, is estimated at $2,500. The damage to stock, fixtures and other equipment, will run into several thousands of dollars, the loss being covered by insurance.

The boiler room and the room where the fire started were extensively damaged. The damage to the stock and equipment was largely caused by smoke and water. The owners of the mill complimented the fire department on the efficient manner in which they fought the blaze and on the rapid response to the bell alarm. A resident of the vicinity stated Sunday afternoon that the drivers of the apparatus deserved credit for the manner in which they guided the apparatus through the blinding smoke.

At 9:24 o'clock Sunday morning the fire broke out again and Engine No. 3, Squad A and Deputy Chief D. J. Brennan responded. A spark under the slate roof of the boiler house caused a small blaze which was extinguished with three gallons of chemical.

An estimate of the loss on the stock, fixtures and equipment could not be secured Sunday from officials of the plant. However, it is understood that the total loss will be several thousands of dollars.

DIRECTS RESCISSION OF BOUNDARY LINE AGREEMENT

Decision rescinding a boundary line agreement between two Roosevelt avenue residents, Mikolaj Zieziulewicz and Josef Danilowicz, has been given in a common pleas court case by Judge C. B. Waller.

In his memorandum of decision Judge Waller says:

The parties by their written agreement (Exhibit A) attempted to settle a dispute concerning the boundary line between their adjoining properties which was the subject matter of the suit then pending in this court. The defendant admits he failed to carry out the terms of this agreement and in this answer by way of counterclaim he alleges that the agreement (Exhibit A) was entered into under a mutual mistake as to a material fact.

It appears that the line described in Exhibit A was arrived at by placing a rule or straight edge on the map Exhibit 1, with one edge touching the center of the post shown on the map as standing in the line of the highway and the other end passing through a point averaging half way between two pig houses shown on the map at the northwesterly side of the properties.

The agreement, Exhibit A, was entered into before an actual survey of the proposed line had been made. The agreement was based upon what appeared to be the line as shown by the application of the straight edge between the two above described points shown on the map, Exhibit 1. The map was not accurately surveyed in relation to the actual location of the two pig houses and there is a considerable variance between the location of the proposed line as so shown on the map and the location of the line as laid out on the land by actual survey.

As appears from the application of a straight edge to the map, the proposed line would not take from the land occupied by the defendant more than a maximum of four or five feet in depth at any point, whereas on actual survey of the proposed line at some points the line extended more than ten feet in depth into the property occupied by the defendant.

I think it is clearly established that neither party had in mind that more than two or three feet in width would be taken from land occupied by the defendant by the agreed line.

I find that the agreement, Exhibit A, was based upon an erroneous assumption as to a material fact and that the agreement should therefore be rescinded.

Judgment may therefore be entered for the defendant for a rescission and cancellation of the agreement, Exhibit A.

COLCHESTER MAN SUES FOR $25,000 DAMAGES

TWO BOUND OVER ON BOZRAH ROBBERY CHARGES

Probable cause being found, the cases of Elmer Gallup, 35, of Bozrah, and Stanley W. Martin, 23, of Uncasville, charged with breaking and entering, were bound over to the superior court, when they were presented before Justice of the Peace John Sweeney by Grand Juror J. P. Allyn at Bozrah Saturday afternoon. The two men were taken back to this city, where they were locked up at police headquarters as they were unable to furnish surety on their bonds of $1,000 each.

The accused were arrested Friday afternoon at Bozrah by State Police Officer Murphy of the Groton barracks and Constable Daniel Marra of Fitchville for a series of robberies alleged to have been effected at the small grocery store conducted by I. Botnick in Fitchville. A portion of the loot, which was found in two bags cached away in two outbuildings, has been recovered by the police. At the time of the accused's arrest they were living in a house near the Botnick store.

An effort will be made to have as many families present as possible and as many members of each family as can possibly be in attendance. A special award will be given to the family best represented. The topic of the pastor, Rev. David A. Pitt, D. D., will be "Is Religion Failing in the Home?"

URGES PROPER SENSE OF PRIDE IN JEWISH YOUTH

A forceful and thoughtful sermon was delivered by Rabbi Samuel Epstein, a senior student at the Jewish Theological Seminary of America, New York, at the services of the Norwich Community synagogue Friday evening at the B'nai B'rith rooms on Shetucket street. Announcement was made at the services by President Abner Schwartz of the purchase of the Community house, which was received with great enthusiasm.

In his sermon Rabbi Epstein spoke upon the subject of pride and arrogance. Pride, he said, prevents a person from self-knowledge and causes a strain in relationship between individuals. The proud person regards everyone as beneath him, while his fellowmen resent this attitude of condescension. If this continues they drift apart never to meet again in a friendly manner.

"Among nations we find that because of the growth of society knowledge and its resulting prosperity more fortunate ones try to lord it over the smaller peoples. The latter resent this patronizing attitude and this often results in the most devastating wars of history. This was pre-eminently the case with Germany before the war. Because of its growth industrially and in efficiency it attempted to dominate the rest of the world, with the result that it suffered disaster. The domineering pride of our country seems to be heading it in the same direction.

"Shall we, then, dispense with pride? No! A lack of pride in what is ours causes us to ridicule it and exaggerate the importance of foreign culture. It is this lack of pride which is working such havoc among the Jewish youth. This over-humility is bringing it about that they are deserting the culture of their ancestors. It is bringing about the gradual assimilation of our people, and the disappearance of our heritage.

"The only solution of both these evils—arrogance and lack of pride—is a proper sense of self-respect. We should learn to be humble which is not synonymous with a lack of proper self-evaluation. The two outstanding illustrations of humility are the careers of Joseph and Moses. Joseph attained high office in Egypt, yet he recognized his brethren who were mere shepherds. Moses, although reared as an Egyptian prince in the palace of Pharaoh, nevertheless, joined his enslaved brethren and erected a united nation. Let us hold these examples before us at all times and emulate their humility."

ALPHABETICAL PROCEDURE AT THE NAVAL CONFERENCE

Will Give France Precedence Over Italy in Proposing Plan For Limitation of Naval Armaments—American and Japanese Delegates Were Quiet Yesterday While the European Delegates Maneuvered Over Technicalities Relating to Franco-Italian Problems, Including Naval Parity—Great Britain Has Cancelled Orders For Construction of Two Cruisers.

LONDON, Jan. 27—(AP)—France today snatched a delicate victory on a point procedure for the formal agenda of the five power naval disarmament conference after a three hour meeting of the chief delegates at Number 10 Downing street.

With their task of hammering the agenda into shape still far from complete, the delegates will shift their work tomorrow from Downing street to St. James' palace and hold another plenary session at 10 a. m.

Secretary of State Stimson admitted that today's meeting, which lasted far past the lunch hour, had proceeded more slowly than he desired.

What happened was that after nearly three hours of keen discussion, the delegates endeavored to settle part of their disagreement by invoking the alphabet, and under its auspices France, by precedence over Italy, was granted the right to propose discussing of the French plan for limitation of naval armaments by total tonnage instead of by categories of ships.

This is expected to produce a compromise on the global tonnage proposals satisfactory to all the powers. Meanwhile, Italy's desire to plunge into the question of maximum and minimum fleets for each country must wait.

For the Americans and the Japanese, it was largely a day of watchful waiting while the European delegates maneuvered in a mass of technicalities relating to Franco-Italian problems, including naval parity.

It remained for the British government to add a realistic disarmament touch, entirely apart from the conference itself, to the events of the day by announcing the cancellation of construction orders for two 10,000 ton cruisers, the North Umberland and the Surrey.

Suspension of construction on these ships was announced by Prime Minister MacDonald before he started on his American trip last autumn, and the admiralty's order of the day simply makes suspension absolute. Plans for the two cruisers had been perfected, but work had not begun. They do not figure in the British estimates of the fifty cruisers necessary for her minimum fleet allowance.

Outside the conference rooms, the Americans and the Japanese chiefly devoted themselves to denying various reports and rumors.

In quick succession, the American spokesman assured questioning correspondents first, that nothing had been done in London to settle the 30,000 ton difference in cruiser tonnage still existing betwen Britain and America in parity estimates, and second, that the question of an increased cruiser ratio for Japan has not been discussed by the American delegation in London, and third, that the proposed Mediterranean security pact, concerning which many rumors have been current since the conference started, has not been taken up with the American delegation.

NO RELIEF FOR MONEY SITUATION IN CHICAGO

CHICAGO, Jan. 27—(AP)—Plans for relieving Chicago's and Cook county's exchequers, were fruitless today, while public officials and civic leaders continued the search for a way out of the municipal money muddle.

Silas Strawn, chairman of the "citizens' rescue committee," was in Washington on other business and until he returns Wednesday, the civic situation was expected to remain more or less status quo—which finds both city and council virtually "broke."

Mayor Thompson, asked if he would co-operate with the Strawn committee, said he had not been asked to.

Caldwell made known the school board besides owing a $480,000 coal bill, had not paid the gas and light bills since last August. Coal dealers have threatened to shut off the schools coal supply, but the gas and light companies have made no demands for immediate payment, Caldwell said.

Meanwhile, the 40,000 city, county and school employes carry on without any pay since January 1, in some instances since December 15.

DEATH OF LAST CHILD OF RALPH WALDO EMERSON

CONCORD, N. H., Jan. 27—(AP)—Dr. Edward Waldo Emerson, son of Ralph Waldo Emerson and last surviving child of the great philosopher, died today. Dr. Emerson, who was 85 years old, had been a practicing physician in Concord, but in his later years, gained note in the arts of painting and writing. He also became his father's literary executor.

Born in Concord, Dr. Emerson was graduated from Harvard in 1866 and from the Medical school in 1874. He practiced medicine almost exclusively until the death of Eliot Cabot called him to the work of editing his father's works. He was the author, among other works of "Emerson in Concord," "Henry Thoreau as Remembered by a Young Friend," and had edited the centenary edition of Emerson published in 1903 and some of his father's correspondence and journals.

He is survived by his son, Raymond Emerson, who lives here, seven grandchildren, and numerous nephews.

SEARCHING FOR FLIERS EIELSON AND BORLAND

NOME, Alaska, Jan. 27—(AP)—Searchers today dug into tightly packed snow and ice around the wreckage of an airplane ninety miles southeast of North Cape, Siberia, in their quest for Carl Ben Eielson and Earl Borland, American aviators missing since November 9 last.

Pilots Joe Crosson and Harold Gillam who Saturday located the wreckage specified in their reports that it was the demolished all-metal monoplane flown by Eielson and Borland.

Four men taken to the scene yesterday from the ice-locked trading ship Nanuk in planes piloted by Crosson and Gillam, explored the areas around the wreckage in the belief that Eielson and Borland were flung out to instant death when their ship crashed in a blinding snowstorm November 9 or were under wreckage of gasoline cases near the cabin.

BRITISH WOMEN MARRYING AMERICANS ARE "STATELESS"

LONDON, Jan. 27—(AP)—The term "a stateless person" was used today by Foreign Secretary Arthur Henderson in the house of commons with reference to women of British nationality who marry Americans.

Questioned regarding the "anomalous state of affairs" existing in this connection, the secretary said a British woman marrying an American ceases to be a British subject under the British nationality and status of aliens act of 1924 and becomes an alien, thus having to comply with all requirements for aliens including registration with the police when stopping in British towns.

Under the law of the United States, however, an alien woman marrying an American does not become an American citizen and is not entitled to receive an American passport unless she becomes a citizen by naturalization.

KANSAS CITY, Kansas, Jan. 27—(AP)—Five persons were killed near here late today in the crash of a monoplane of the Central Air Lines bound from Wichita Kansas to Kansas City. The cabin plane plunged to earth from an altitude of about 300 feet, near the Fairfax airport and burst into flames.

"HOOVER" VOTERS BARRED AS DEM. CANDIDATES IN FLA.

TALLAHASSEE, Fla., Jan. 27—(AP)—With campaigns for June primaries in the offing, Florida voters were informed today by Attorney General Fred H. Davis that literal application of state election laws would bar from participation as candidates in the democratic primary, all persons who voted for Hoover in the 1928 general election.

The opinion was expressed in the attorney general's answer to a letter from a resident of Hastings, Fla. The same rule applies, said Mr. Davis, whether the candidates voted for Hoover and otherwise followed the regular list of democratic nominees. Many Floridans voted such a split ticket at the last general election.

The law has no effect on voters, however, explained J. T. G. Crawford, national democratic committeeman for Florida. Any democrat who felt he could not support Al Smith in the general election may come back and vote the democratic ticket at any time, he said.

Massachusetts notified the clerk by telegraph that it had no objection to the reply.

The first section of the reply denies all affirmative allegations in the Massachusetts amended answer. The second section challenges the necessity for the diversion of the Ware and Swift, claimed by Massachusetts to be necessary to provide an adequate water supply for the Boston metropolitan district. This section reads:

"The complainant further says that there now exists in the eastern part of the commonwealth of Massachusetts, a full and adequate supply of water susceptible of use for a domestic supply for the metropolitan district and that there is no necessity now existing to divert waters from the watershed of the Connecticut river valley to the metropolitan district for such purpose."

Murphy, who was vice president of the Kohler company, has brought suit in superior court contesting his million dollar will and charging that Murphy, his first wife and two sons were put to death mysteriously. Murphy was 71 at the time of his death. His entire estate, worth an estimated $1,000,000 or more, was left to the second Mrs. Murphy and she was named executrix. The witnesses were A. M. Martin and Mary Lillian Kent, the latter Murphy's secretary. It was dated March 6, 1926, and was filed for probate Jan. 25, 1929.

Mrs. Carroll charged in her suit that Murphy did not sign the will of his own accord and that the witnesses were tools of the second wife. Mrs. Murphy was accused of having dictated and signed the document.

The reported use of Busch's name in telephone conversations between the suspected robbers over wires tapped by the police, led State's Attorney John A. Swanson to undertake the inquiry. He was released after being questioned by Patrick Roche, chief investigator for the state's attorney.

WOULD BAR ALL DRINKERS FROM THE DRY LAW SERVICE

Attorney General Mitchell Would Have Enforcement Personnel Composed of Sincere Believers in the Volstead Act—Personal Opinion Expressed Following Endorsement of the Williamson Bill—Committee Will Start Today to Perfect the Bill For Submission to the House

WASHINGTON, Jan. 27—(AP)—If Attorney General Mitchell has his way, prohibition enforcement officers will not be drinkers but—to the contrary—will be sincere believers in the Volstead act.

The head of the justice department, who would bear the burden of dry enforcement responsibility under the Williamson bill being considered by the house expenditures committee, revealed his views in a long letter made public today. He endorsed the bill in an appearance before the house committee just before conclusion of hearings, and forwarded the expression of his personal opinions a few hours later.

Mr. Mitchell's views were contained in an answer to a private citizen who had called attention to inquiries being made by a justice department agent concerning candidates to a United States marshalship. The citizen's name was withheld.

Saying the investigation was under his direction, the attorney general defined his purpose as "to obtain all the information that is available about any candidate which bears on his qualifications for the post and his probable efficiency."

At the hearing, Representatives Cochran, democrat, Missouri, and Stone, republican, Oklahoma, had inquired whether dry agents should not pledge themselves to abstain from liquor drinking. Mitchell wrote that he believed "that no man who makes a practice of drinking intoxicating liquor or who has definite pronounced views in opposition to prohibition, belongs, during this administration in any post having directly to do with the prosecution of cases under the national prohibition act."

The treasury department now has charge of dry enforcement, Secretary Mellon already had endorsed its transfer to the justice department.

Representative Schafer, republican, Wisconsin, sought in vain today to have the expenditures committee invite Dr. Clarence True Wilson, of the Methodist board of temperance, and F. Scott McBride, superintendent of the Anti-Saloon league, to appear. The committee also refused to invite J. J. Britt, chief counsel of the prohibition bureau of the treasury.

Schafer said he wanted McBride and Wilson to appear so they would not seek to have the prohibition enforcement bureau transferred "to the department of agriculture five or ten years from now for failure to enforce prohibition."

With the receipt of the Mitchell letter, Chairman Williamson of the committee announced that hearings had been closed and the committee would go into executive session tomorrow to perfect the bill for submission to the house, probably late in the week.

An attack on the Christopherson bills to broaden the powers of the United States commissioners to hold summary trials of petty offenders of the prohibition laws was launched in the house by Representative Celler, democrat, New York, on the ground that they were unconstitutional. They would, he declared, deprive the people of right of trial by jury and if enacted would not cause better enforcement of the dry laws.

In his testimony, Attorney General Mitchell made it clear that the Williamson measure did not make it mandatory for the justice department to investigate all the permits issued by the treasury department for industrial alcohol withdrawals. The bill specifies that the two departments shall be jointly responsible.

The house wet bloc selected its executive committee at a meeting late today, naming Representative Beck, republican, Pennsylvania, as chairman.

The committee is to select another group to petition the judiciary committee to hold hearings on bills providing 2.75 per cent beer by weight. This committee plans to produce testimony to the effect that such content is not intoxicating and that 2.75 beer would aid in enforcement of prohibition.

A committee of four, Representatives Stafford, republican, Wisconsin; LaGuardia, republican, New York; Connery, democrat, Massachusetts, and O'Connell, democrat, New York, was appointed to look after the interest of the wet bloc on the floor of the house.

The executive committee consists of Representative Linthicum, democrat, Maryland, chairman of the wet bloc, as ex-officio chairman; O'Connor, democrat, New York; Britten, republican, Illinois; Cullen, democrat, New York; Florence P. Kahn, republican, California; Dyer, republican, Missouri; Sabath democrat, Illinois; LaGuardia, republican, New York; Mary K. Norton, democrat, New Jersey; James O'Connor, democrat, Louisiana; Igoe, democrat, Illinois; Connery, democrat, Massachusetts, and Schafer, republican, Wisconsin.

The farm board warned last week against an overproduction of dairy products and asked farmers to consume some of their own produce on farms.

Part of the credit for improvement, Legge said, was due to the board's recent loan of $3,000,000 to the Land o' Lakes Creameries which had been enabled to hold stocks off the market.

VOLUNTOWN

At last, Voluntown residents are enjoying the benefits of electric lights. Friday evening last, homes in the Beachdale section were lighted for the first time. Thursday evening, the section from the Shetucket pike corner down through Main street was added, all stores at the center being connected and lighted; all others who are wired will be connected by the end of the week or as soon thereafter as possible. All who have used the lights are expressing their pleasure at the opportunity of using this modern method of lighting, and it is believed that many more will embrace the opportunity before long. Kerosene and gas lamps for many are a thing of the past and many will be for sale or the junk heap. The campaign for electric lights started about a year ago when a petition was started in the village. Rudolph Magrey carried the petition to all homes in the village and surrounding territory and spent much time and effort in securing subscribers and obtained over 100 signers. The Beachdale Co., and the Glasgo Finishing Co. also aided in the work. Mr. Magrey deserves the sincere thanks of the people of the village for his successful efforts in bringing this modern convenience to them.

Work has also been started in the Yellow mill by the American Felt Co. in a small way, but is expected to increase in the near future. There have also been many improvements in local property, many homes being improved by additions new walks, etc., giving the village a better appearance. Another benefit to the community was the starting last summer of the bus line, furnishing transportation at reasonable rates to Glasgo and Jewett City, which is greatly appreciated by local people, especially mill workers in this village, who are employed in the above-named places. The patronage of this service is steadily increasing.

KILLINGLY COLLECTOR STARTS DRIVE TO GET UNPAID TAXES

(Special to The Bulletin)

DANIELSON, Jan. 27.—Application of the big stick in order to collect some odd 80 overdue personal taxes in Killingly was begun by the town today. Constable Louis S. Barstow is collecting by summary process and within the next few days will appear to those who owe the town on a personal tax account.

Refusal to pay the constable, and settlement now involves not only paying the tax and penalty amounting to $3, but also the officer's fees, a total of $10, means a trip to the county jail at Brooklyn. Up to late this afternoon there had been no report received from Constable Barstow at the selectmen's offices relative to his having found it necessary to place anyone in his car for conveyance to jail.

All of the delinquents have been sent notices and informed that they must answer to them within a period of five days. It may be that some of the delinquents are exempt from paying the tax, for one reason or another, but even if this be true, they are required to answer to the notice just the same, and if the constable calls upon them to collect they must pay his fees.

The action now being taken is by command of the state of Connecticut, and this is set forth in the notices. The forecast is that the delinquent list will be cleared up within a few days. It may be that someone will go to jail before this is achieved, however. It is pointed out that arguing about paying with the constable will be wholly useless. He has no discretion as to whether or not one shall pay. He has been sent out to collect.

WEDDING

With numbers of relatives and friends in attendance, Miss Bertha Hawkes of Hampton, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lester Hawkes, and Henry Chartier, son of Mr. and Mrs. Victorien Chartier of South street, West Side, were united in marriage at St. James' church at 7:30 this morning. The bride was attended by Miss Julienne Chartier, sister of the groom, as bridesmaid, and Armand Bouthillier, a relative of the groom, was best man. Rev. Joseph Bergin, M. S., performed the marriage ceremony and was celebrant of the nuptial mass.

The bride's gown was of white satin trimmed with lace. She wore a veil and her bouquet was of yellow carnations. Following the marriage there was a reception attended by many relatives and friends of the bride and groom in American Legion hall. The bride received many beautiful gifts. Chief John McFarland this morning received a report relative to the activities of a man who was about the Broad and L'Homme street section Sunday afternoon seeking to sell religious pamphlets. At one home, while the members of the household were all upstairs, he took the liberty of entering, and his presence was not discovered for some time. This incident recalls that on two different occasions men offering religious pamphlets for sale on Sundays in Danielson have been placed under arrest, to appeal later from penalties imposed in the local court and to escape penalty in the superior court.

There were 106 deaths as against 123 births in the town of Killingly during 1929, it is shown by the records of vital statistics kept by Town Clerk Frank T. Preston. A trio arrested at the Lantange place on intoxication charges were fined $5 each, with costs. Joseph Rossie and John Picillo, Providence men, were fined $5 each for gaming. Rossie, who claims that $200 was grabbed from his hand in a crap game, did not get it back. Others who were in the crap game had their cases nolled on payment of costs. Several plants here are available to concerns that might consider locating in Danielson, and some of these properties can be bought at very reasonable figures. TUBURSKI SIGNS WAIVER ON QUANTITY OF HOME BREW

(Special to The Bulletin)

PUTNAM, Jan. 27.—In city court this morning, John Tuburski, who conducts a small farm on Park street in the south end of the city, by virtue of his willingness to sign a waiver on a quantity of home brew, seized by police in a raid Saturday, escaped the ordeal of having to appear before Judge Geissler to answer for charges of liquor law violations. It was quite apparent that evidence procured against Tuburski was insufficient to warrant his being arraigned.

Tuburski is an old offender. A few months ago he was arrested and convicted on liquor law violation charges and only recently he was before city court on a charge of failing to send his son to school.

Ice dealers have started the task of gathering the ice harvest from the local ponds. The work of cutting the cakes was well underway on many ponds this morning. The first incisions showed ice to be more than 15 inches thick, a record freeze. Extra help is being employed to draw in the harvest to the sheds and work is continuing into the night in order to complete the work before the arrival of a thaw or rains. The extreme thickness of the ice and the weather report of continued cold has dispelled the possibility of another ice shortage next summer.

Building Track Support

The New Haven railroad have commenced building a support for the track, to be in use while the two piers are being erected that will carry the new viaduct over the railroad's right of way.

The pile driver, unlike the contractor's machine, is operated by steam, and is capable of striking 400 blows a minute.

While the work is being done the apparatus stands on the main track, hence there is a regular train crew, a conductor and two flagmen, on duty. Some idea is obtained of how complete this work must be, when it is known that the big 300-ton freighters must be supported.

SURPRISE AT NORWICH FOR MR. AND MRS. CRARY

Twenty friends of Mr. and Mrs. James E. Crary, formerly of Pachaug, gave them a surprise party Sunday evening, at their new home at 25 Hobart avenue, Norwich. During the pleasant social time, a fine table lamp was presented Mr. and Mrs. Crary, as a remembrance. Mrs. Crary served salad, sandwiches, cake, candy, ice cream and coffee, and was assisted by Mrs. Ruth Holmes, Mrs. Eino Kajalo, Mrs. Augustus Hoelck and Mrs. G. A. Kennedy. Mr. Crary is in much better health than he has been for some time, and, with his wife, greatly enjoyed meeting old friends and neighbors.

CHECKING AUTO FATALITIES

While there is a demand for a reduction in the number of accidents, some satisfaction is to be gained from the fact that in the state of Connecticut during the past year there was no increase in fatal motor accidents over the previous year.

Connecticut probably had more cars traveling over its highways in 1929 than in 1928. Thus, when it was able to prevent an increase in fatalities, it is possible to reach the conclusion that some recognition is being given to the necessity of driving more carefully and of the better enforcement of the laws.

There was a decrease in the total number of accidents, the 1929 record being 25,177, which was 126 less than the previous year, but an important contribution to this decrease appears to have been made by the alteration of the requirements surrounding the reporting of accidents. Last year the accidents which did damage of less than $25 did not have to be reported, whereas in the previous year all accidents where the damage was over $10 had to be reported.

But 466 deaths on the highways of Connecticut in each of the last two years is far too great a number. That means that a person was killed every day in the year and two others, in addition, for every week, or nine persons every week for a period of two years. That is not a record of which Connecticut can be proud. Except for the automobile and the methods some employ in driving it, or the carelessness of other users of the highways, the great majority of those 932 would probably be alive today.

But with the opening of this new year and with 11 months more to go, it is not a pleasant thing to contemplate that unless there is a marked change for the better in the observance of highway safety there will be 466 or more fatalities on our highways this year. It rests with the users of the roads, the pedestrians as well as the drivers of vehicles, to say what the 1930 fatality and accident records will be. They can be reduced. Other states have demonstrated that. Connecticut has found that they can be kept from growing larger and with the proper recognition of danger and the determination to give the right cooperation for greater safety it will find that they can be reduced.

REDUCING ILLITERACY

There is bound to be much speculation as well as interest in the disclosures of the next census. It is expected that there will be a larger population and that there will be a different distribution of people. While the number will be increased the center of population will probably be shifted and there will be a fund of valuable information relative to other things which will be certain to interest Tom, Dick and Harry. And yet what concerns Tom may be of little concern to Harry. Thus it will be a case of "There's the figures, take what you like and study them to your heart's content," and let the other fellow do likewise.

There is one matter in which general interest ought to be sufficient to make a marked showing for the better. That is in regard to illiteracy. It is a matter which concerns certain sections and certain states much more than it does others, and yet the whole country has reason to be anxious for a steady and decided decrease. It is not a matter that has been left entirely to the states, for various organizations have been long devoting effective attention to improvements, and it will have to be admitted that they have made valuable contributions to the results.

Thus there will be an eagerness to see what has been accomplished in the past ten years in this direction. No one need think that the job has been completed or that efforts to wipe out illiteracy can be abandoned. In the two censuses this century it has been revealed that progress is being made in the right direction but that we still had something like 5,000,000 in this country who could not read nor write in any language. That means a serious handicap, not only to those people, but to the states in which they live and to the country. It has even been estimated that illiteracy costs the United States $825,000,000 a year. It figures conspicuously in connection with the health, the crime and the standard of living throughout the country. Where it is due to lack of schools, weak educational laws or aliens, well defined problems exist which ought to be solved and as soon as it can be said that all but a few can be regarded as out of the illiterate class the effort should be concentrated on the reading and writing of the English language.

EXPERIENCES WITH RUSSIA

While the United States has persistently refused to extend recognition to the soviet government until Moscow was ready to meet the requirements of this country, other nations have been flirting with Russian recognition and learning that all is not gold that glitters.

In the extension of recognition and the exchange of ambassadors certain of the countries have been endeavoring to increase their trade prospects. They have been willing to take a chance in order to prevent others from getting too great an advantage in Russian trade. And yet, even with the trade as a lure, nations are finding that Russia is playing a sharp game and while it is free to promise none too much reliance can be placed upon its promises.

Last year, for the second time, Great Britain recognized Russia. One of the provisions was that Russia would refrain from revolutionary efforts and communistic propaganda. The first resumption of diplomatic relations was a fizzle resulting in the Russians being thrown out after alarming disclosures, and now, within a few months of the second recognition, London is disturbed by those agitations which have their inspiration at Moscow. The Russian ambassador has been informed by the British foreign office that the tactics being employed are likely to imperil the relations of the two countries.

That is telling the story plainly, but down in Mexico actions speak louder and plainer than words. The Mexican government has dismissed the soviet minister and severed relations with the soviet government. This is because of a series of demonstrations directed against Mexican embassies in different countries by communistic leaders who were acting, in the belief of Mexico, on orders from Moscow.

When it is remembered that Mexico was considered to be fertile ground for communistic agitators and that attention was being called to the firm relationship between the two governments, it is quite evident that a decided change has taken place. Soviet Russia isn't playing fair even with those who were considered, and trying to be, its friends. That being so, what could be expected from it by nations which have always viewed that government with suspicion and are unwilling to have any relations with it diplomatically? The experiences others have had with it confirm the belief that we have made no mistake.

PROMOTING REFORESTATION

New York is being asked for the appropriation of a large sum of money by the present legislature. The expenditures will involve much construction that has long been delayed and is now being urged to meet institutional requirements. The prospects are that the outlays may cause a substantial bond issue next year.

For that reason there may be a disposition to delay action on the proposition to appropriate the sum of $20,000,000 to be spent in the next 15 years for establishing a million acre forest reserve in that state in order to supply timber for the state's woodworking industries.

This must be looked upon as an ambitious programme in reforestation. New York has done much in the way of such work and is putting out many trees each year, but nothing on so elaborate a scale has previously been undertaken. It has large areas of protected forest land, many experimental tracts and much wooded land, but the opportunity for growing more trees for marketing is ever present.

New York is one of those states which has experienced the loss of vast amounts of timber. Its wooded areas have been cut over and little attention paid to growing other crops of trees. It is a situation common to many states and yet the need of putting the large areas of waste land to work and making them yield a crop that will become more and more valuable as the years go on should not be overlooked.

The quicker New York can make a start in that direction the quicker a most valuable example will be set for the individuals of that commonwealth to fall in with the movement and actually produce much more of the timber which New York industries require each year.

THE AIR MAIL

Uncle Sam has taken a most favorable attitude toward the transportation of mail by airplane. Huge outlays have been made for that purpose in order to speed up the delivery of the mails and to give encouragement to air service. It has been long realized that it was costing the government far more for such service than it was getting in return. In other words, it has been paying for the mail air service far more than it has collected through the air mail rates. This has been the price of commercial aviation encouragement.

This has helped to contribute to the large deficit experienced by the postoffice department and it is not surprising that the postmaster-general has advocated a change in the entire rate scale and air mail system of his department.

The idea of the postmaster-general is to make use of airplane transportation the same as use is made of the trains, by fixing a rate for each mile of travel for certain weight or area in the flying machine. The experiments in sending mail through the air have not proved bonanzas for the air transport business. It has demonstrated the need of adjustment in order that there may be less difference in the rates, in order that there may be proper compensation and in order that passenger traffic may be encouraged. The desire to have all air lines operated in accord with the best practice is in keeping with the experiences thus far. They are today going through those experiences of transportation undertakings in other periods. It is certain that each year will see more passengers and more mail carried by airplane and it will be necessary to make adjustments from time to time.

WASHINGTON AFFAIRS

(Special to The Bulletin)

WASHINGTON, Jan. 27.—The supreme court turned a deaf ear to Connecticut's pleadings regarding diversion of the waters of the Connecticut river by Massachusetts, when the case came up the past week. The court ruled that it neither could nor would take action prior to the report to be filed by the special master appointed by the court. Justice Holmes was presiding in place of Chief Justice Taft, who is south trying to rest and recuperate after his recent severe ill turn.

Congress has given its attention to controversial matters during the entire week, and verbal tilts have been the order of the day. In the senate the tariff has held the floor, while in the house controversies have ranged and raged all the way from prohibition to immigration. The Connecticut delegation has not attempted to take the lead in debate, but its members have stoutly defended and tried to secure passage of such amendments to the tariff as they believe will be of benefit to Connecticut, but "Jordan is a hard road to travel" under the combination of republican insurgents and democrats, which can control enough votes to turn down New England propositions.

Representative Robert Luce gave the house an interesting ten minutes this week, when he outlined the first instance of a public land commission, and quoted the Bible to prove his facts. It came about a heated discussion as to certain commissions appointed by the president, and to which members from specifically interested sections had made objection. Mr. Luce quoted from the book of Numbers, when the Lord said unto Moses, "Send thou men, that they may search the land of Canaan, which I give unto the children of Israel; of every tribe of their fathers shall ye send a man." Mr. Luce finished the quotation, then turning to the house remarked, "This is the first appearance of the public land question."

Not content with jibing at objectors to presidential commissions, which objection Mr. Luce pointed to as "an attempt to discredit the present administration of this government," Mr. Luce sent a dart straight into the heart of California boosters. "I regret," said he, "to grieve my colleagues from California, but must add that the first great commission came back bringing specimens of the fruit of the lands. They reported that they had cut down a branch with one cluster of grapes, and they bare it between two upon a staff.'" Mr. Luce smiled and added with apparent apologetical regret, "Even California cannot produce a bunch of grapes that will require two men to carry it." And the entire house and the galleries joined in the laugh that followed.

Let us drop politics for a moment and turn to certain phases of Washington social life, with the much discussed vice-presidential hostess playing the role of star.

"Mrs. Gann—first turn to the right," the boy announces as the elevator approaches the tenth floor of the hotel where Vice-President Curtis and his sister make their home. A crowd of women and men step out, and making the turn to the right, find themselves at the end of a long line, with the drawing room and the vice-presidential hostess seen from afar. For it is Mrs. Gann's At Home day. Out here men in high official and diplomatic life "make calls."

Wraps are doffed, and hung on racks that line the private corridor; women fumble hastily in beauty bags of gold, silver, old tapestry or whatever makes the best "match" for their calling togs; then little groups break from line and enter the drawing room, first dropping their visiting cards in the silver tray held by a maid at the door.

Mrs. Gann stands just inside; a military aide in full uniform makes the presentations as you whisper your name into his listening ear. Mrs. Gann smiles as she greets you. It is one of those smiles that not only show smiling lips but make little wrinkles way up around her eyes; it is a smile that is likely to become as famous among her callers as was the Taft chuckle in the days of the Taft administration.

At Mrs. Gann's side stands her niece, Mrs. George, daughter of the vice-president, if the At Home comes when the daughter of Mr. Curtis is a visitor, as was the case this week. Wednesday is Mrs. Gann's day at home. It is also Cabinet day, by rule of Washington society. Then it is that Washington puts on its best afternoon bib and tucker, and goes calling from 4 to 6.

This week Mrs. Gann received more than 1,200 callers that day. She wore a simple afternoon dress of dark violet velvet, especially notable in bringing out her splendid blonde coloring and stately figure. Standing at her right was Mrs. George, daughter of the vice-president. Mrs. Gann is a half sister of Mr. Curtis, and no Indian blood flows in her veins, but Mrs. George is a marked contrast, and shows her Indian ancestry in her soft dark complexion and in her wonderful jet black hair, brushed smoothly back and coiled in a big low knot. It is beautiful hair, and would stand comparison with the wings of a black bird, or the hackneyed test of a "raven's wing."

Mrs. George wore a perfectly plain dress of black velvet, unrelieved by color except a beautiful orchid placed high on her right shoulder.

A very pleasant custom at Washington At Homes is to assume that everyone either knows everyone else, or would like to know them. As a result, you chat with whoever chances to stand near by. You may introduce yourself, or merely exchange a few words, then pass on, as suits you best.

The Curtis-Gann dining room was fragrant with great pink roses that furnished the table decorations. Although many congressional women from senate and house assisted, the prevailing custom at present is a sort of glorified self-service. You walk up to the table, and make your own selection of tiny sandwiches, cakes or sweetmeats; you step right up to the distinguished women who are in the seats of the mighty, as "pouring," and tell them your preference as to tea or coffee, and whether sugar, cream or lemon is to be added. Then you back away from the table and, when ready, a maid or a butler comes and takes away your plate and cup. It is all very simple and informal.

Mrs. Gann served tiny sandwiches, fruit cake and her own specialty of "bacon biscuits." They are very small cream of tartar biscuits, so small they seem almost to have been cut with a thimble. They are piping hot from the oven and inside each is a tiny bit of crisp bacon. The whole thing is so small you can pop it into your mouth at once. They were famous long before Mr. Curtis became vice-president and are made by an old colored cook who has served the Gann-Curtis family for many years.

You do not return to bid your hostess good bye; you slip out of the dining room, take your coat from the rack and reach the elevator just in time to hear the boy still saying, "Mrs. Gann—first turn to the right," and from the elevator pours another group of vice-presidential callers. Reaching the ground floor, you hear the hoarse cry of the door man calling automobiles by number for those leaving, and you meet men and women scurrying towards the elevators, on their way to the vice-presidential apartment. And so it will be every Wednesday throughout the Washington social season.

A SENSIBLE GIRL

"Yes, yes I'll come. Anything to keep peace in the family." Dirk clicked the telephone back on the hook. A weekend at the dunes at his sister's cottage meant nothing but misery for Dirk. If it rained, there would be interminable bridge games, and if the sun were bright there would be long walks with girls in high-heeled slippers.

"Empty-headed girls," murmured Dirk contemptuously.

The telephone tinkled again. "And Dirk," said his sister, "I forgot to tell you to stop at the Spero building for Jane Edding. You won't mind her, so much, really. She's not so dumb. Writes advertising copy for the Walters people. You'll know her right away. She'll wear a red rose, she says." The voice died away before Dirk could protest.

Dirk gritted his teeth and slammed his brakes as he maneuvered his gray roadster through Saturday traffic. At the curb in front of the Spero building a young lady, pert and pretty, stood staring out at the maze of cars. Pinned to the lapel of her very green coat was a red rose of astonishing size and brilliance. There was no doubt that this was Jane Edding. Dirk stopped his car at the curb.

"Lothario!" she said calmly and stepped into the car.

"Jane Edding!" answered Dirk rather more pleasantly than was his custom in addressing young women.

"How did you guess it?"

"The red rose. Franny said you'd be wearing one. If I'd been blind I could have seen that rose." The car sped south to the drive.

"It is my flare for advertising," she said and laughed a soft, happy laugh that made the cautious Dirk take his eyes from the road and look at the girl in the set beside him. She looked like the girls his sister forced on him, but still she was different. She is very much alive," Dirk reflected as they drove on in silence.

"You haven't been out to Franny's before?" he found to his surprise that the talking was being left to him.

"No" she answered, looking out over the blue water of Lake Michigan. "I've always been too busy, I guess. I work."

"Oh," answered Dirk. "You don't work on week-ends, surely?"

"Yes, I do. I work all the time. I am one of these ambitious souls. The girls call me Ad Copy-Cat."

"Oh!" said Dirk, and he knew that on this afternoon it was his own tone that was stupid and yet he could not resist the vitality of his girl.

"What do you do?" he asked.

"I work at the selling game as many hours as possible, as many days in the week as I'm not forced to accept invitations to stupid parties with people who say stupid things."

Dirk blushed under his tanned skin. This girl was—almost rude!

Perhaps Jane saw the blush, perhaps she just felt that she had overplayed the part of bored indifference that Franny had told her would be the way to interest this Dirk person, perhaps though she just couldn't help turning to him then and smiling.

Dirk swerved the car to miss a truck. He He never had seen such a frank, pleasant smile and with that smile Dirk forgot everything in the world but advertising copy and a girl who wrote it.

"When we get there you won't just fade away, will you?" he asked.

"Why?" asked the girl.

"Because," Dirk blushed, "you are the only girl I know who can talk like a man."

"We aim to please," laughed Jane.

It was after supper on the beach that night that Dirk walked along the moonlit shore with the girl of his dreams. Yet strangely enough, now that he had found her, he wished for something different. The soft breeze was delightful. The moonlight fell softly on the rippling water. What a night for romance—and what a girl—a really sensible girl.

"Say, Jane," Dirk found himself saying as they walked along arm in arm "I'd like to hear you talk about poetry, or moonlight nights—or love! Don't you ever think about anything but business?"—Chicago News

A Washington Bystander

By KIRKE L. SIMPSON
Associated Press Staff Writer

WASHINGTON, Jan. 27.—Mrs. Ruth Hanna McCormick, "At L., Illinois," as the directory describes her, should find comfort in recent senate proceedings for her senatorial hopes.

She is about the first woman to get the senatorial bug seriously, so seriously that she began campaigning for the senate almost before she actually got her house seat.

And another senate tradition has toppled. It had to do with sanctity of that exclusive chamber from feminine invasion. This observer never saw women on the senate floor while in session, except for lady house members, until the two rayon experts from the tariff commission staff appeared there during the tariff debate.

A Fallen Barrier

The fall of that ancient barrier against the fair sex may well have caused a flutter in the gallery pew reserved for feminine senate committee clerks.

That is a very recent acquisition for them. The pew is duly roped off against the public. If real senate doings are in prospect, you always see it packed full of official, or at least semi-official, femininity.

On the floor below, men secretaries to senators scamper about at will. Even the uproar over executive session leaks which barred newspaper scouts from the chamber, but which also just about swept away star chamber meetings of the senate, failed to exclude senatorial men secretaries. Perhaps lady secretaries will be admitted soon.

Men experts from government departments have always been called in now and then to sit beside senators during debates. Veteran committee clerks, men clerks, are a frequent sight on the floor, aiding their chiefs.

But not until the rayon twins, Miss Ruth Peterson and Miss Eveline Southworth, crashed those tottering senate gates, did feminine frills and furbelows, including those presumably made of rayon, get a place in the senate floor picture.

An Expert Is An Expert

Clearly, a tariff expert is a tariff expert, be that expert of the masculine or feminine gender. Vice-President Curtis so ruled when the courtly Senator Walsh of Massachusetts sought admittance for Miss Peterson. Senator Norris felt that way about it.

"If a tariff expert is entitled to be here, then he or she is entitled to be here, regardless of sex," he declared.

Yet Miss Peterson had trouble convincing senate doorkeepers of that fact. At least, Senator Walsh said so.

"I trust that information (the Curtis pronouncement) will be conveyed to the doorkeeper, so the lady will have no trouble about entering the chamber," contributed Senator Tom Heflin.

"There will be no trouble about it," was the vice-presidential fiat, and there wasn't. Miss Peterson and her huge brief case were soon in the thick of the fray.

She held a sort of back seat school of instruction in rayon data, with Senators Walsh and George of Georgia as attentive pupils. They passed it on to the senate.

YOUR HEALTH

The Art Of Seeing.

By LOYD MILLS, M. D. Los Angeles.
(From Gorgas Institute.)

Eyes resemble cameras insofar as each has a dark chamber, shutter, lens and sensitive film; but there the likeness ends. The flat camera film records all objects with equal clearness but the curved retina sees objects sharply only at one tiny spot about 1-200 of an inch square, placed nearly in the center of the back of the eyeball. Here an arrangement of sensitive nerves and cells, found nowhere else in the eye, gives this little area its marvelous power for transmitting details and conserving memory. The span of this most important part of vision is from a point to an area one half in in diameter. At any single look you can see clearly only one small flower in a bouquet, one bead, one word five letters in width, or one small pattern of those countless patterns which exist in everything throughout the world. The Japanese recognize the exquisite values inherent in this form of vision when they place one delicate blossom in a vase so that it shall gain undivided attention.

The anatomic structures upon which this form of vision depends are fixed long before birth. They may be injured or lost by disease or accident but never can be enlarged, or acquire a different order of vision by any kind of educational spurring. It has been thought that the area of central vision could be widened by training eyes to higher speed of reading, but such attempts nearly always end in upsetting the balance between the muscles of the two eyes or produce eyestrain and nervous and mental strain all out of proportion to any theoretical benefit. Modern high speed education must bring its demands into line with correct eye functions.

The great peripheral vision, which surrounds the island of central vision, was given for protection and location only. It has neither accuracy nor memory and literally is the vision of impression. Correct seeing requires that the objects be located and identified by the combined visions, after which central vision alone is used in a series of deliberate, effortless views of small areas. Accuracy is the goal where the objects seen are worthy of such attention. Otherwise they are seen only to be avoided and dismissed from the attention.

The educated man carefully uses his eyes to select what is worth seeing. In that way they are typical of the wide use of all our powers, so that we may get the best there is out of life.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Need More Industries

Mr. Editor: That was good news to hear some time ago that the chamber of commerce organized a publicity bureau to draw business to Norwich. Norwich is a good shopping centre. However, the publicity bureau should also draw industries to concentrate and locate here. This is still more important. The business will improve automatically if there are enough factories here providing plenty work for the people. Earning people are buying people. The publicity bureau is just the right group to advertise Norwich all over the eastern United States. Little mountain towns in Pennsylvania are chosen by some industries to place their plants there. How are these localities discovered? By just such publicity bureaus. Norwich, with far better transportation facilities and closer to large population centers certainly would not be overlooked if the chamber of commerce would realize the situation and do something. That would be better than entertaining foreign potentates.

Yours,
AN INTERESTED CITIZEN.

The Signs Of The Times

Mr. Editor: In Matthew, chapter 16, third verse, we read that Christ tells the Pharisees, that ye can discern the face of the sky, but can ye not discern the signs of the times? How many people understand now the signs of the times and of Christ's second coming?

Luke 12:37th reads: "Blessed are those servants whom the Lord, when He cometh, shall find watching; verily I say unto you, that He shall gird himself and make them to sit down to meat and will come forth and serve them." (Spiritual meat). Christ is here, and is serving the spiritual meat to those who understand it. The day of the Lord is the judgment day, and it is here and now, and God is not willing that any should perish, but that all should come to repentance.

A Few Idle Thoughts

Mr. Editor: I do not think human nature has changed from what it was, in the last 50 years, for as I review the passing years there has always been those who are ever in the search for pleasure. Norwich, it seems, has been specially favored by nature in catering to the ones who love the real thrill of outdoor life, such as skating and coasting. The one thing that the young people of today have missed is sleigh riding. This was not alone a recreation but it was one of the finest things one can recall in early days in New England to put pep into a person, with a good sleigh, good buffalo robes, perhaps your sweetheart, and a fast horse to move along. Even the horse seemed to enter into the spirit of the occasion. You hear the crunch of the runners as they break through the thin crust of ice that had formed on the top of the snow, the sound of the bells and all so graduated that they seemed in harmonies with everything, for even the very stars in the sky seem to take on a different appearance. As you look up to the sky, this, too, adds to the sublime wonders of nature's world for the frosty air seems to create another twinkle to this wonderful drama. As you give all this a thought you think of the question of a little child who, having seen a lamplighter lighting the lamps on the street, had asked with wonder, who lights the stars at night?

There was no question that the ideal time to go out for a spin was just when the sun was sinking in the golden west in a blaze of glory, and as you speed along now and again through the woods that border each side of the roadway you now and then see the moon coming slowly up over the eastern sky. As you get out into the open country you see it just coming over the top of the distant hills, and the gleam of this winter moon as it sparkles and shines upon the dazzling white of the snow that slopes down to the valley below makes a picture that appeals to all, like the brilliant, scintillating sparkle of millions of diamonds. To you old fellows, now in the evening of your lives, don't it bring back to you some of the memories you love to recall of some ride out in the glorious winter night, with your sweetheart by your side, snugly tucked beneath a splendid robe? Now and then you would slip your hand into hers and she would look into your face and smile, and you saw her eyes sparkle and glisten like twin diamonds. They rivalled the very stars above. And now you see her with her hair silvery white, still your sweetheart.

Now, all these pictures of fancy pass in rapid succession before your eyes, and on the silver screen of life there comes a fade out and you turn backward time in its flight and you see your old New England hills again. You see once more a sleigh and a young couple in the picture. You seem to hear the jingle of the bells as in the long ago. You see yourself as you were and here you have returned and will live life over again. Now, the moon is gleaming in all its wondrous glory on the western hills and God in his wondrous way places all these pictures before our eyes that we may wonder, marvel, and then adore. There are but a few of the many thoughts that come back on the sea of memory, that returns on the incoming tide. And yet, you have a longing for those days that are gone, down the trail that leads to yesterday.

Now to my young, old pals, as you sometime give a thought to those early days when life was tinted with all the wondrous colors of youth, and you recall the early days of winter sports, you can but say with Thomas Moore:

When time shall steal our years away
And half our pleasures, too,
The memory of the past will stay
And half our joys renew.

Today, we have many things to appeal to us and to hold our attention, but after all there is nothing that can compare to those simple pleasures of those early days that appealed to the urgent temper of youth, with memories of happy days, and all its glorious winter sports.

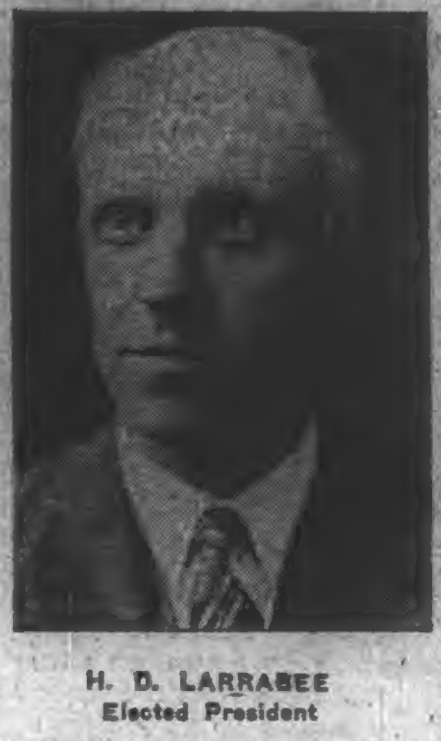
BOY SCOUT WORK REPORTS GOOD GAIN IN YEAR; OFFICERS ARE ELECTED



H. D. LARRABEE
Elected President

At the annual meeting of the Eastern Connecticut Council, Boy Scouts of America, Monday evening at the rooms of the Norwich chamber of commerce, H. D. Larrabee was elected president, succeeding Charles Coit, who has held the office for two years. Mr. Coit was named representative to the national council of the Boy Scouts of America, as successor to the late Nathan A. Gibbs.

The meeting, with an attendance of about 85, was called to order at 7:45 o'clock by the retiring president, Mr. Coit. Mr. Coit welcomed the scoutmasters, chairmen of committees, merit badge councilors and members of the executive board and called upon the chairmen of committees to make reports.

Annual Reports Made

William M. Wyman, reporting for Arthur E. Story, treasurer, declared that he and Walter Casey, as auditors had gone over the accounts of the council for 1928 and 1929 and had found them in perfect order.

Scout Commissioner Arthur L. Peale reported on the work of the deputy commissioners and declared that scoutcraft work is showing a great improvement.

Mr. Larrabee, chairman of territory, reported for the district committees of Danielson, Putnam, Stafford Springs and Willimantic; told of the training courses being conducted by the council, and declared that the extension work is progressing satisfactorily.

Membership Growing

Charles V. James, reporting on troop organization, pointed out that the enrollment of scouts June, 1929, was 84, whereas at the present time the enrollment is 461. Objectives for the year as given by Mr. James were the establishing of a Jewish troop on the West Side, a troop at Elizabeth street school, another Roman Catholic church troop, a troop at Broadway school and an American Legion troop.

Edward J. Graham, chairman of the educational committee, declared that steps were being taken to organize more troops in the city schools and that he is in hearty agreement with the principles of the Boy Scout movement.

Interest in Camping

Dr. R. R. Agnew, chairman of the committee on camping, reported that 40 per cent of the boys under this council were in camp last summer and that if 40 per cent should attend camp this summer with the increased enrollment it would mean that the Eastern Connecticut council would have to find ways and means of providing its own camp. He declared that a nucleus fund should be set aside for this purpose.

Charles B. Gilbert, chairman of training, reported on the training thus far conducted and set up as objectives for the coming year a patrol leaders' course in Norwich, one or more short specialization courses in first aid and nature study, an elementary scoutmasters' course in Willimantic and Danielson and an advanced course in scoutmastership to be given in Norwich this fall.

James V. Pedace, chairman of the publicity committee, described the many different activities of his committee, listing over a dozen major contributions. In defining publicity, Mr. Pedace said: "Publicity is the art of acquainting the public with the name, nature and purpose of a given institution or organization, or product, or a combination of all."

Arthur L. Peale, reporting for H. M. Lerou, chairman of the civic service committee, enumerated 16 different major pieces of civic service performed by the Boy Scouts of this community the past year.

Rev. A. H. Abbott, reporting for the reading programme committee, told of the bookshelves for scouts placed in the Otis library and of the plan of supplementing, each week, these shelves with the better boy fiction books.

A tribute to the memory of Nathan A. Gibbs was included in the annual report.

To Start Cub Dens

He expressed his appreciation for the cooperation given him by the retiring president, other officers and the various committees of the council. He particularly stressed the cooperation extended him by the scoutmasters.

In assuming the chair, Mr. Larrabee, the newly elected president, asked for the same splendid cooperation accorded Mr. Coit during his terms of office, and stressed the importance of the success of the coming campaign for the entire work of the organization. Following a brief explanation of the set-up of the campaign by the new president, the meeting was adjourned about 9 o'clock.

Officers Elected

The officers elected for the coming year are as follows: President, H. D. Larrabee; vice-presidents, Rev. John J. Riley and Max Hanover; scout commissioner, Arthur L. Peale; treasurer, Arthur E. Story; members of the executive board, C. V. James, C. B. Gilbert, Dr. R. R. Agnew, H. M. Lerou, Rev. A. H. Abbott, Edward J. Graham, Henry A. Tirrell, J. V. Pedace, Wilbur S. Williams; national representative, Charles Coit.

VISITING TEACHER SPOKE UPON CHILD FAILURE

The January meeting of the child study group of the Woman's City club at the Wauregan hotel Monday afternoon which was to have been in charge of Mrs. John P. Huntington, was taken over on a two-day notice by Miss Margaret Bridges, Norwich's new visiting teacher, when Mrs. Huntington was suddenly called to Poughkeepsie, N. Y., by the illness of her daughter, who is at Vassar college.

Miss Bridges' subject, Why Children Fail at School, was most timely, coming as it did during these days when examinations are being held in the schools. The close attention of the group, which is made up of mothers and teachers, was given Miss Bridges, as she gave first, a brief outline of her work as visiting teacher, explaining the training necessary, actual teaching experience combined with that of a trained social worker. She must get the viewpoint of both the teacher and the parent, acting as it were as a connecting link between school and home.

Miss Bridges showed just how the cause for failure in school can be traced and the different solutions for the different problems worked out, naming as causes, too advanced work, which can be determined by a series of tests which determines the child's real capacity; physical reasons, a marked irritation, eye strain, abscessed teeth or a physical defect, that has not been recognized. A child may not be getting enough rest and sleep, movies for the grade pupils and too many social activities for the high schol pupils may mean home work not prepared and the over-stimulation making schol routine tame and uninteresting by contrast. There may be too much time devoted to piano, drawing or dancing lessons and not enough time left for school work.

Orderly school progress depends in a large majority upon home preparation of certain lessons. The parents' responsibility in regard to home work includes providing adequate space, equipment, light and quiet for the school child, budgeting the time so that there is no encroaching on other recreation or sleeping time. As there is a marked difference in children, no two alike, such a variation of ability, then should plans be made accordingly, not for them, but with them, considering the ability of the child in the work always.

INVESTIGATING POSSIBILITY FIRE WAS INCENDIARY

State policemen from the Grotton barracks were reported on Monday to be investigating the possibility that the midnight fire Saturday at the Turner & Stanton Co. cordage mill on Broad street was of incendiary origin.

No positive developments along that line had been reported up to nightfall.

Insurance adjusters were here Monday and it was reported that the fire damage was claimed at about $7,000, of which about $3,000 would be on the building and $4,000 on stock and fixtures.

Dismissals From Hospital

Patients dismissed at the W. W. Backus hospital Monday were Mrs. Adrian Beausejour and infant daughter, Taftville; Louis Cuyance, Jewett City; and Michael Ziesulka, 62 Roosevelt avenue.

At the meeting, each nurse reported on the work accomplished in her district for the year. The giving of toxin anti-toxin for the prevention of diphtheria was an important part of the year's work.

ALCORN WANTS TO KNOW WHY STATE WANTS LAND

The efforts of Connecticut to acquire by purchase or otherwise approximately 5 1-2 acres of land at Crescent beach, Niantic, for construction of a new building for tubercular children at Seaside, has not progressed beyond the "skirmishing stage," as disclosed by further correspondence between the state tuberculosis commission and Hugh M. Alcorn, counsel for the heirs of Eliza McCook, owners of the porperty sought.

The state commission has been endeavoring to obtain a definite answer as to whether the McCook heirs will sell approximately 382 feet of shore front property to the state, and the price asked for such land, while on the other hand Mr. Alcorn has been seeking information as to why the state requires the land now sought.

The following letter, under date of Jan. 7, is the reply of the tuberculosis commission to the December communication of Mr. Alcorn: "In reply to your letter of Dec. 31, 1929, may we be permitted to say that you and your clients are well aware from the information which you have received as to the plans of the state for improving the facilities at Niantic, and from an examination of the plans for the building to be erected and the improvements to be made there, that 60 feet of additional land will not provide an adequate site for the enlarged institution. We, therefore, respectfully request that you reply to the questions asked in our letter of Nov. 26, 1929."

The Reply

Under date of Jan. 16, Mr. Alcorn replied as follows: "The plans you refer to were not prepared until long after the commencement of the second condemnation suit, in October, 1925, which sought to take the 5 1-2 acres which you are now asking my clients to sell. These plans were before us and were fully considered during the pendency of that suit, and in the summer of 1927, as you well know, an agreement was made to settle the whole controversy upon the basis of a frontage of 140 feet on the beach, the negotiations leading to that result having been authorized by Governor Trumbull. Under the circumstances we confess our inability to understand why you are now seeking a frontage of 282 feet—quite apart from the existence of your 1922 agreement for 60 feet.

"Referring to your suggestion that '60 feet of additional land will not provide an adequate site for the enlarged institution' we desire to remind you that in 1923 the general assembly appropriated for the use of your commission $100,000 for the erection of a fireproof infirmary building for the Seaside children, and that the McCook family then assented to your request for 60 feet of their land in order that these children might not be longer subjected to the fire hazards of the existing dilapidated wooden structure. This land and the money to build this fireproof structure have been at your disposal for seven years.

"It is not our desire to prolong this correspondence unnecessarily, but a definite reply from you as to your intentions respecting these agreements would be helpful to us and would appreciably shorten our negotiations."

The final letter of the series from the tuberculosis commission to Mr. Alcorn was dated Jan. 21 and is as follows: "This commission is not interested in any claims that a settlement has ever been made between the heirs of Eliza McCook and it, with reference to the amount of land needed at Niantic to carry out its plans for the enlargement of the institution under its care at that pace.

"After a careful study of the requirements of the institution this commission has decided that the land described in its letter to you dated Nov. 26, 1929, is absolutely needed by the state at this time, in order that a building of the proper size and design for the treatment of the children under its care may be constructed. All that the commission has asked is whether or not your clients are now willing to sell to the state the parcel of land in question, and, if they are willing to sell, the price at which the state can acquire this land.

"An early reply to this inquiry will be greatly appreciated."

CORONER E. G. M'KAY ENDS INQUIRY IN WSHEMAN CASE

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Jan. 27.—Coroner Edward G. McKay, Norwich, was in New London and concluded his investigation into the death of Jacob Wsheman of 25 Shapley street, who died of a fractured skull three weeks ago, according to the theory of the police as a result of a brutal attack. As a result of Wsheman's death, Charles Williams is being sought on a charge of murder. Williams' home is in Norfolk, Va., and he has been employed as a cook on a barge. A warrant for Williams' arrest has been issued, but to date he has not been found. Coroner McKay today interrogated numerous witnesses with whom Wsheman discussed the attack upon him about 24 hours before he died. As a result of the fight, Linwood Farrell, 27, of 535 Main street; William Franklin, Ernest Johnson and Irving Gilliam, all of Hill street and all Negroes, have been under arrest as material witnesses, but today after Coroner McKay concluded his investigation and the quartette was presented in court, Gilliam was ordered discharged but the other three were held until the case comes up again in a week. Farrell, known as "Peanuts," and Franklin, known as "Rattlesnake Pete," together with Johnson and Williams, were in a Main street restaurant the night of the fatal fight. A quarrel between Wsheman and some of the Negroes is known to have occurred and it is also known that the Negroes followed the Lithuanian to the street. Farrell has informed the coroner that he and Williams followed Wsheman to Shapley street, where Williams is alleged to have beaten the Lithuanian, leaving him unconscious in the gutter. Two days later the man died of a fractured skull, but between the time that he succeeded in reaching his home and the fight, he told numerous persons who it was that beat him and it was these persons from whom Coroner McKay obtained information today.

GARDE'S EX-MANAGER SAID TO BE SHORT IN ACCOUNTS

(Special to The Bulletin.)

NEW LONDON, Jan. 27—The police today started a search for Sol. Manheimer, until recently employed as manager of the Garde theatre. A warrant for Manheimer's arrest charging him with the embezzlement of $850 has been issued by Prosecuting Attorney Max Boyer and has been given the detective bureau to serve, if Manheimer can be found. Manheimer was relieved of his duties at the motion picture and vaudeville theatre last week and Wednesday left town by automobile. Since then the shortage in the accounts of the theatre funds was revealed. When the shortage was revealed complaint was made to Prosecuting Attorney Boyer and the warrant for Manheimer's arrest was issued. Manheimer is known to have gone to New Haven for within a day or two a friend of the former theater manager received a letter from the latter in which it was intimated that Manheimer was despondent and anticipated suicide. Manheimer's friends, however, give but little or no credence to the intimation, believing that Manheimer's intimated such an act more to cover up his tracks than anything else. Mrs. Manheimer and their infant are still in New London and the wife has made the statement that she is not aware of the whereabouts of her husband, nor has she been since he was relieved of his theatrical duties.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

ON THE TRAIL OF THE BOY SCOUT

The Boy Scout movement has passed the experimental stage. There may be modifications of it in the future looking to even greater efficiency, but its worth has been proven so effectively that none needs to question its being a national asset.

The scout has written his trail in the open places of nature. Boys have by means of scouting learned to know nature and to love it. The exercise of body, mind and soul has been in the great out-of-doors as much as possible. Healthful conditions are thus supplied for the proposed exercise in all the three fundamental lines.

But the trail of the scout has also been blazed in the home. The boy who is taught the necessity of obedience in connection with the things he personally wanted to do cannot help taking that lesson into his home life. He will more readily obey his parents than before.

Clean, right thinking is constantly held before the scout as a standard to be maintained. If by chance the opposite for a moment shows its face the frown of other scouts soon puts it to flight and forbids its reappearance.

The relation of the scout movement to the school is one of the closest cooperation and mutual helpfulness. One high school principal has described scouting by saying: "It has done what no scheme has ever done before—made the boy want to learn." Teachers, therefore, like parents, have an easier time with scouts.

The scout movement is absolutely non-sectarian, both in principle and in practice. But its program provides recreational activities which are easily adapted as an adjunct to the work of the church and the Sunday school. It serves an important need in keeping the boy in contact with the religious activities of his own church. He does not get the desire to graduate so evident in growing boys.

No greater thing for the Norwich of tomorrow could be done than to enlist all of the 1,600 eligible boys of this city in the Boy Scouts of America. It is a name they will proudly assume if the people of Norwich will provide the means and ways. It is Norwich's splendid opportunity to do this, as we will continue to tell you.

Palace Theatre.

A powerful lyric poem which has been read by 160 million people and published in hundreds of English and foreign editions is the theme of a great picture which opens tomorrow at the Palace theatre. This picture is "Evangeline," a beautifully adapted screen dramatization of Longfellow's immortal epic of old Acadia. In the star part, the part of the lovely girl, Evangeline, is Dolores Del Rio, while Roland Drew plays the part of her lover

DOLORES DEL RIO "Evangeline"

DOLORES DEL RIO

This new program of the Palace, starting Wednesday and lasting three days is undoubtedly the greatest double feature offering ever presented to the Norwich public. For not only do we have the incomparable Del Rio in "Evangeline," but as a companion feature, Alice White and Chester Morris appear in a great talking Vitaphone special, "Playing Around." With other shorter features to complete the bill, the program is one that cannot be duplicated, one which is a fulfillment of the promise made by Warner Brothers to the Norwich public when that great studio organization took over the Palace in the interests of better entertainment for this community.

It is unnecessary to tell the thousands who have read and loved "Evangeline" of the plot of this famous picture, any more than we need to tell the public who Dolores Del Rio is. It is rarely that a theatre can present two such stars as Dolores Del Rio and John Barrymore in the same week. By the way, don't forget that today is the last day on which to see the great Barrymore at the Palace in his first talkie, "General Crack."

Lecture in Slater Hall.

There are innumerable questions which come to every thoughtful parent about his child. Why does my child now resent any parental authority when formerly he accepted it perfectly naturally? Why does he wish to keep things from me when I was formerly in his condifence? Why doesn't he do better work in school? What can I do to make him more social? Is it harmful for him to daydream so continually?

These are things which occur to parents who want their child to develop happiness and efficiency or mental health as well as physical health.

Dr. E. Van Norman Emery is a well known authority in the field of the child's mental health. His articles which have appeared in various medical magazines as well as The Parent's Magazine are already known to many people in Norwich.

Dr. Emery was formerly the director of the Los Angeles Child Guidance Clinic but since September has been with the department of Psychiatry and Mental Hygiene at Yale university.

Dr. Emery's talk which is to be held in Slater hall annex is one of a number which have been arranged by the Norwich Branch of the Connecticut Society for Mental Hygiene.

Broadway Theatre.

Regretfully, and with many a heavy sigh, Maurice Chevalier, that lovable Frenchman, starring in "The Love Parade," at the Broadway, is packing his grips, for tonight marks his final appearance here in that sparkling musical romance. With lovely Jeannette Macdonald as the lovesick queen, Maurice has sung and clowned his way into the hearts of Norwich fans, and regrets at his departure is tempered only by the announcement that he will soon be featured again at the Broadway in a typical Chevalier production. Tomorrow the program changes from musical comedy to deep, dark mystery, with the advent of "The Thirteenth Chair." Tod Browning's famous and thrilling murder mystery, filmed directly from the stage success, "The Thirteenth Chair" introduces theatre-goers to a new order in mystery drama, with ghosts, a ghastly crime, a baffling mystery, and a dramatic duel of wits between detectives and a spiritualistic medium seeking to save her lovely daughter from suspicion. Margaret Wycherly as the medium has her original stage role, and the part of Inspector Delezante is masterfully played by Bela Lugosi. Conrad Nagle and Leila Hyams head the cast, which includes many well known stage and screen stars. The surrounding program includes Frances Williams and Her Melody Boys in "The High C's." Another Darktown all-talking comedy, "Brown Gravy," with all the familiar Birmingham characters, Harry Fox and his Six American Beauties, selected from the chambermaids of the world (!) a riotous skit, "Just Like a Man," with hubby and wifey swapping housework and office work, and Derickson & Brown, a clever and unusual singing specialty, with the latest Fox movietone news.

Looted Cop's Refrigerator

In spite of his membership in the Westerly police force and reputation among brother officers as a detective, Officer Leroy H. Norman, residing at 60 School street, Westerly, was the victim the past week end of desperadoes of the second story type. His refrigerator was looted. A police list of missing articles, if such a one is made up, it is understood, would include such Sunday valuables as one-half a roast chicken and fixings. Officer Norman's reputation as a sleuth it is feared by his friends, will depreciate greatly unless the guilty parties are summarily brought to justice.

Snow and ice making a sidewalk slippery, caused Mrs. Mary A. Gorman, wife of Edward Gorman, of 23 Rocket street, to fall in front of the Westerly high school building on Broad street Saturday evening. She sustained a broken right arm and a bone in her right ankle was cracked. Mrs. Gorman, who is 70, was on the way from her home to the Westerly Furniture company store on High street with her husband's supper. Mr. Gorman has been employed by that company for several years. A stranger lifted Mrs. Gorman from the ground and offered to take her home, but at that time two women came along and assisted her to the furniture company. From there she was taken home by automobile.

To satisfy a judgment for $3400.00 against Adolph Brugger of Wequetequock in favor of Mrs. Martha B. Thoren of Newburgh, N. Y., the undivided one-half of the Brugger property at Wequetequock was sold at public auction Saturday afternoon at 2 o'clock on the premises by Alexander Marr of Pawcatuck, a committee appointed by the superior court of New London county to make the sale. The property was struck off to George R. McKenna of Pawcatuck for $1850.00, there being little interest in the sale. The property adjoins Wequetequock casino to the north and consists of a well appointed bungalow, garage and large poultry house with fruit trees and nearly two acres of land, fronting the state highway and reaching back to Wequetequock cove.

Sunday, Alfred E. Burdick of 18 Lester avenue, who has been in the Westerly hospital for the past four weeks with an infected finger, was discharged. He was injured while at work at a machine at the C. B. Cottrell plant and has suffered two operations for amputation of his finger.

A number of Westerly business blocks, among them the Barrows and Briggs buildings on Pawcatuck river bridge, had water and heating pipes freeze during the night.

Atmospheric conditions were peculiar in Westerly in the early hours of Monday morning. There was quite a fall of snow from apparently cloudless skies, which was explained by some as the result of the exceptionally frosty air and dampness, which indicated an approaching storm.

LOCAL HOUDINI SHOWS THE CROWDS WHAT HE CAN DO

The Fishing Village has a new Houdini, John Crane, who can make a pack of cards almost talk. He can make a 50-cent piece go out of sight and he claims to be the only man who can make a 25-cent piece float on top of water. He can take an iron hat and with nothing up his sleeve, can make a West View duck and a lot of pigeons fly from it quicker than the eye can see. He will get out of a packing box in ten minutes and if he fails, the Noank Houdini crane will give 25 dollars to the man who nails the box and closes it with ropes. The man with all the tricks wants two men to stand by with axes in case he fails to do the trick. A large packing box was got from a store and taken to the Aunt Sarah Peabody club room on Shore avenue before a crowd that wanted to see this Mystery Man do his stuff. Several carpenters in the crowd with hammers and spikes to hold the man in the box were ready. Some said it cannot be done! how is a man going to get out after being shut in tight in a box with not enough spare room for a house cat?"

Houdini Crane got set and the last board being nailed on. The Mystery Man waved to the crowd to show he was in there O. K. Then a fisherman put on the rope so that a lion could not get out. William Crowell with a axe, also Marvin Porter at his right with a fireman's axe, stood ready to break the box if the new Houdini of the Fishing Village failed to get out in ten minutes.

Soon the boards began cracking like frost on a roof on a January day. In seven minutes he was a free man but as all in, and fell to the floor helpless. "Gee!" he said, "when them carpenters put in nails they do a job! I thought I was stuck! Never got in such a tight place before in all my life!" The crowd cheered the Noank new Houdini so that the neighbors thought another war had broken out. He thanked them all for their applause. Then getting hand-cuffed, pump chains, he was chained from head to feet. In four minutes and six seconds he laughed at the crowd, walking around as if nothing had happened. This new chain trick man has them all guessing. A small bag large enough for this small sized giant to go out of sight in was brought. Putting on four locks, he could not escape this time the crowd thought sure they had him bottled up. Shaking like a dog after a flea he rolled and pulled like a steam engine going up a long grade, but in twenty-one minutes he finally got loose. The sweat was rolling off him like water off a ducks back. It made him groggy, but the same smile was there. He was a mystery to every one that saw him and Houdini claimed that was enough for one night. He doesn't want to give his tricks away. Some one said "Give us a speech!" "Well," Houdini Crane said, "when I was in New York state, in 1920, one of the largest crowds ever saw Houdini do his stuff packed each side of the street watching me in the mid-air from a 22-story building in Buffalo, getting out with chains around my body, hanging by my toes. It took me six minutes to do the trick and the crowd went wild. They threw their hats in the air and tons of paper were thrown to the wind. The fire company blew the siren—never did I see such a crowd to give one a real ovation. One store gave me a suit of clothes and I had enough cigars for about 25 weddings. They thought I was great, well, if I do say it, 't sure was mean to swing in the air to get loose from handcuffs and with chains around your body. I traveled up to Manchester, N. H., looked the place over, not to rob the town, but to see the tallest building so I could pull of a new stunt for the crowd to talk about for a while. When the mayor heard I was in town the news spread. It was a great day, the sun was shining on both sides of the street. It was around September, 1925, before the leaves fell. I came down the Main street wearing a claw hammer coat, a ten-gallon hat and swinging a cane, puffing on a Buffalo Special cigar and came to a building that was 26-stories high. I removed my coat and hat, leaving on my vest. A crowd of 15,000 was watching me. I did the human fly stunt crawling by my fingers from the bottom to the top of the huge building. When about half way up, I felt my fingers slip and down I came but caught myself on a window sill. Women fainted and many were catching their third breath—thought my days were over and knew I was going where all the human flies go when they miss. But back I went slow as a mud turtle trying to out run a reindeer. At the last story I knew I could make it all right, so I swung my body over the top and onto the roof. It took me an hour to do it. That crowd sure did some cheering and they felt better when I was on the roof. The people looked like fleas on the ground. But I did not follow that building climbing. The mayor gave me a chest of silver, the key to the city of Manchester and hope I would come again and get out of the jail cell. I promised the mayor I would, being treated so good. Well, that is all I know tonight so I want to thank you all for coming to see me do my mystery tricks! Soon Houdini Crane will pick out the tallest building in the fishing village and jump from the top in a parachute to the ground, so be on hand to see me do it and if the airplane man's umbrella doesn't open up, then I will kiss the world good bye for ever!"

The new Mystery Man, or Noank's Houdini, has made a bet and it was never known that one was found until he was found out by Red Eldrigh, at the waiting room. So watch for the big jump soon!

BURGESS BEDTIME STORY

Farmer Brown's Boy Hears A Thump

BY THORNTON W. BURGESS

It startles one sometimes to see How big a little thing can be.
—Timmy the Flying Squirrel.

It was only a few days before Farmer Brown's Boy discovered that some one was still taking corn in that corncrib. But though he thought and thought, he couldn't imagine who it could be. He was sure that neither rats nor mice could climb up into the corncrib from the ground. He was sure that Chatterer the Red Squirrel and Happy Jack the Gray Squirrel could neither climb up from the ground nor get to the roof of the corncrib from the nearest tree. Therefore, it was a great mystery how anybody could be taking corn.

He studied the ground all around the corncrib for signs, but he found none

"It can't be, yet it is," said Farmer Brown's Boy. "Every day I find signs that prove to me that corn is being taken. Now it is a few scattered grains; now it is a bare corncob. I have set traps, but haven't caught anybody. Somebody is too smart for me. I really don't mind the small amount of corn taken, but I do mind being fooled. I don't like to think that I am not smart enough to find out who is doing it."

So Farmer Brown's Boy took to visiting the corncrib at all hours of the day. Of course, he didn't learn anything for Timmy the Flying Squirrel was now making his visits only at night and leaving long before daylight. So all this watching on the part of Farmer Brown's Boy was useless. He studied the ground all around the corncrib for signs, but he found none. He knew that Chatterer the Red Squirrel was over there every morning, but he was sure that Chatterer never did get inside. He wished that snow would come. You know, snow has a way of telling stories. He was sure that if snow came he would be able to find tracks, unless, as he sometimes suspected, a mouse or mice might be living in the corncrib all the time.

Then one evening it happened that he was standing near the corncrib and back to it just about dusk. He had paused there just for a moment. Suddenly he heard a light, soft thump. He pricked up his ears. It was a very light thump, but it was a familiar thump. He had heard that kind of thump before. You know, Farmer Brown's Boy is wise in the ways of the little people of the Green Forest.

"That thump was on the roof of the corncrib," said Farmer Brown's Boy. "Somebody landed there." He stepped back and looked hastily, but no one was to be seen. He hadn't really expected that any one would be seen. There was a twinkle in the eyes of Farmer Brown's Boy, however. "That was a Flying Squirrel, or else I miss my guess," said he. "That was Timmy the Flying Squirrel. He jumped from that tree. So he is the one who has been taking my corn! I wonder that I didn't think of him before."

Of course, this was guesswork on the part of Farmer Brown's Boy, but it was very good guessing. He didn't in the least doubt that he was right. But to make sure, he was on the watch early the next night. When the Black Shadows first began to creep out from the Purple Hills, Farmer Brown's Boy stationed himself where he could watch. Gradually the dusk grew deeper. It was getting so dark now that it was difficult for him to see. He had just about given up hope when he caught sight of a little dark spot coming down from high up in a tree near the corncrib. Almost at once there was a soft thump and he saw a little form disappear over the edge of the roof. He smiled happily. It was a great satisfaction to have solved the great mystery.

MOTHERS ARE LEARNING USES OF MAGNESIA

From the beginning of expectancy until baby is weaned. That's the time Phillips Milk of Magnesia performs the greatest service for many women.

It relieves the expectant mother's nausea, heartburn, "morning sickness," inclination to vomit; helps her digestion. Its mild but effective laxative action assures regular bowel movement.

Phillips Milk of Magnesia is better than lime water for neutralizing cow's milk for infant feeding. A teaspoonful of it does the work of a half pint of lime water. It is a mild laxative; harmless, almost tasteless.

All drug stores have Phillips Milk of Magnesia in generous 25c and 50c bottles. Always insist on the genuine, endorsed by physicians for 50 years.

"Milk of Magnesia" has been the U. S. Registered Trade Mark of the Chas. H. Phillips Chemical Co. and its predecessor, Chas. H. Phillips, since 1875.

FREE: to young mothers and prospective mothers: "Useful Information," an invaluable little book on the health of mother and child. Write the Phillips Co., 117 Hudson St., New York, N. Y. It will be sent absolutely free of charge.

Could Not Work Pimples Itched so Badly. Healed by Cuticura.

"For about three months I suffered with pimples and blackheads. The pimples were hard and red and broke out on my face and arms. I could not do my work because they itched so badly, and my arms burned when I scratched them.

"I used other remedies but they were useless. I had the trouble about a month before I began using Cuticura Soap and Ointment. In about three weeks I could see a great improvement, and it took at least another month before I was completely healed." Terrible Eczema Goes Quickly

There is one simple and inexpensive way to reduce the danger of swollen veins and bunches, and get them down to normal, and that is to apply Moone's Emerald Oil night and morning. People who have painful enlarged veins should not neglect them, for they sometimes burst and cause much misery and loss of time.

Moone's Emerald Oil besides being so marvelously antiseptic that it at once destroys germs and poisons caused by germs in such a remarkable healing agent that eczema, barbers' itch, salt rheum, and other inflammatory skin eruptions go in a few days.

For years it has been used for boils, ulcers, abscesses, and open sores, and with the most perfect success.

Every good druggist guarantees Emerald Oil to end you skin troubles or money back.

BETTER THAN SUNSHINE FOR FRAIL CHILDREN

Just ask your own physician—he will tell you growing boys and girls should have plenty of Vitamins A and D if their bones, teeth, eyes and body are to properly develop — if they're to escape rickets and the evils of malnutrition.

Oftentimes the inconvenient and weather won't permit children to obtain these precious Vitamins from the sun but Cod Liver Oil never fails—it's full of these valuable energy-creating and health-building Vitamins.

And now, thanks to a learned chemist, delicate boys and girls obtain the same Vitamin benefit from 2 McCoy's Cod Liver Oil Extract Tablets as by taking one teaspoonful of pure Norwegian Cod Liver Oil and for every ailment, sickness, rundown or underweight condition for which Cod Liver Oil is prescribed McCoy's is equally as good.

The Vitamins have been extracted by a special process from pure Vitamin tested, Norwegian Cod Liver Oil and put into this sugar coated tablet form and it's these Vitamins which are so important to health—Oil without the Vitamins is worthless.

So why make your children's lives a torment with the obnoxious oil when they are sure to get all the Vitamins they need from these pleasant-to-take, sugar-coated tablets. 60 tablets, 60c at drugstores everywhere — take your Vitamins straight.

STOCK MARKET WAS STRONG DURING GREATER PART OF SESSION YESTERDAY

NEW YORK, Jan. 27—(P)—The stock market had the appearance of strength during the greater part of today's session although the index of 30 leading stocks was unchanged from Saturday. Several of the high priced industrials and specialties were whirled up 4 to 10 points, and net gains of 1 to 3 points were quite numerous, but these were interspersed with a rather long list of net declines, most of which were held to a point or two. The day's sales ran close to 3,600,000 shares.

The day's news provided little in the way of market influences. The annual report of Montgomery-Ward, showing earnings of only $2.60 a share, was somewhat worse than generally expected, and the stock promptly sold down 3 5-8 points, but it recovered all but a small fraction of its loss before the close. When the "bull" movement was at its height last summer Montgomery-Ward earnings estimates ran above $6 a share. Sears Roebuck declined in sympathy and then shot upward to close with a net gain of 4 3-8 points.

Wall street regarded the Montgomery-Ward report, and other 1929 earnings statements, as so much water over the dam, and appeared more interested in current statements and forecasts. The U. S. Steel quarterly report, due after the close tomorrow, is expected to show 1929 earnings in excess of $18 a share.

Fox Film went through another erratic performance, closing 1 1-2 points higher at 31, after having sold down to 26 3-8 in the early trading. Postponement of the receivership hearing until after the close of the market inspired heavy short covering on the possibility of an amicable settlement being reached by opposing stock interests. Other amusement shares displayed a strong undertone, Paramount Famous Lasky, Radio-Keith-Orpheum and Warner Bros. Pictures all closing with good gains.

Details of the Republic Steel corporation merger financing were announced after the close of the market, Central Alloy closing at 33 3-4, up 1-8, and Republic at 78 3-8, up 1 1-8, or about in line with the merger terms. Good buying developed in some of the other independent steels, particularly Inland and Vanadium, which closed with substantial gains. U. S. Steel common sold down 1 1-2 points to 177 1-2 after having set a new high for the year at 180 1-2.

Food shares showed a strong undertone with the demand centering in National Biscuit, Beechnut Packing and F. G. Shattuck. J. I. Case, up 10 1-2 points, led another advance in the farm implement shares. Efforts to bring about a rally in the copper shares met with rather strong resistance and the net gains in that group were small. In the motor group, Chrysler and Yellow Cab were turned over in large volume but the net gains were small, but Auburn added 4 1-2 points to its recent gain. Parmelee Transportation advanced a point to a new 1930 high at 22.

Air Reduction, U. S. Industrial Alcohol and Sloss Sheffield Steel each lost about 4 points.

Call money renewed at 4 1-2 per cent and then dropped to 4, with the supply so plentiful that loans were available in the "outside market" at 3 1-2 per cent. Time money and commercial paper rates were unchanged.

With the exception of coffee, which advanced 17 to 23 points, most of the leading commodity markets lost ground. Chicago wheat futures were down about 1 1-4 cents a bushel, with larger declines in the Winnipeg market, on selling influenced by reports of increased Russian offerings in foreign markets. Cotton sold off nearly $1 a bale as a result of the bearish interpretation placed by traders on the general farm outlook for 1930 by the bureau of agricultural economics. Corn yielded a fraction of a cent a bushel on bearish crop estimates.

Foreign exchange trading was rather quiet, with the British and Dutch rates sagging to new low levels for the year. Sterling cables were quoted around $4.86 1-2 and Dutch guilders around 40.13 cents. Spanish pesetas broke nearly 20 points to 12.96 points.

CHICAGO GRAIN MARKET

CHICAGO, Jan. 27—(P)—Crumbling away of wheat values at Winnipeg and Liverpool did much to force the wheat market here downward today to lowest levels reached in months. Export business in North American wheat was lacking, and a decrease of 3,355,000 bu. in the United States wheat visible supply was smaller than generally had been looked for. Much attention was also given to authoritative forecasts that wheat price advances over 1929 can only result from severe damage to winter wheat or from reduction of spring wheat acreage.

Corn, oats and rye outdid wheat in some respects, and touched new low price records for the season. Chicago closing quotations on wheat were nervous, 1 @ 1 1-8c to 1 3-8 a bushel under Saturday's finish. Corn closed 3-8c to 3-4c down and oats 5-8 to 7-8c off, with provisions varying from 13c decline to a rise of 2c.

Notwithstanding that unusually active buying developed when the Chicago wheat market descended today to $1.25 a bushel, May delivery, equaling the federal farm board loan basis, the buying orders were finally exhausted, and a break to $1.24 1-2 ensued. Later the market here rallied owing more or less to reports that National Grain corporation purchases of cash wheat at Minneapolis were the largest yet made. Accelerating the late rallies in Chicago wheat values were purchases for previous speculative sellers who were in a position to collect profits. Commission house buying for new investors was also a factor helping recovery of the market.

A striking feature of the day's developments, regarding wheat was that the Winnipeg wheat market showed itself persistently weaker than the market here. An increase of 2,528,000 bu. in the amount of wheat on ocean passage was also a subject of special notice. At times, too, selling here was increased because of word of further Russian offers to ship wheat abroad, but advices later were to the effect that the Russian wheat was at prices above buyers' ideas. Meanwhile, heavy selling of May and July deliveries of rye here was done for houses with foreign connections, and this circumstance counted also to a material extent as a bearish influence on all grain, wheat in particular.

Increasing arrivals of corn acted at times as a decided weight on the market for feed grains. Today's corn receipts, however, although larger than a week ago continued to be smaller than a year back.

Provisions averaged lower, responsive to downturns both in hog values and in grain.

NEW YORK, Jan. 27—(P)—Earning of the first 26 railroads to report for the full year 1929 show net operating income of about $148,497,000, compared with $140,277,000 in 1928, an increase of 5.8 per cent. The same carriers, however, reported less favorable earnings for December, the total showing a decline of about 18 per cent from the same month of 1928.

Establishment of a chain of retail stores in Canada is reported under consideration by Dunhill International, controlled by the Schulte interests. Wall street heard that the plan may involve the purchase of existing tobacco stores in the dominion. Reports of the plan were characterized as "premature" by A. L. Ogden, vice president.

The common stock of the Blaw Knox Co., of Pittsburgh, was placed on a $1.50 annual basis today with the declaration of a quarterly dividend of 37 1-2 cents. The stock had been paying $1 annually. The dividend is payable March 1, to stock of record Feb. 14.

Treasury Balance.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 27—(AP)—Treasury receipts Jan. 24 were $5,907,517.53; expenditures $4,522,288.81; balances $106,593,336.90.

COTTON

NEW YORK, Jan. 27—(P)—Cotton futures closed barely steady, 16 to 19 points lower; spot quiet; middling 17.30.

THE CURB MARKET

NEW YORK, Jan. 27—(P)—Bullish price tendencies in today's curb market were more pronounced, but there were still sufficient soft spots to give it the appearance of irregularity. Chief speculative interest centered in the spectacular gain of 55 points in Deere & Co., to 620, which contrasts with a low of 210 and a high of 642 last year, on the publication of the 1929 report showing earnings of $63.60 a share, as against $37.50 in the previous year.

Commonwealth & Edison ran up 28 points to 266, and closed within 3 points of the top, but gains in most of the other leading power and light stocks, including American Superpower, American Gas & Electric, Associated Gas and Niagara & Hudson, were held to a point, or less. Recent accumulation of the public utilities has been based on the theory that they are likely to be least affected by a business depression, as evidenced by the steadily mounting gross and net earnings over the past few months.

A brisk demand was again apparent for some of the natural gas stocks, particularly Dixie and United Gas. Airplane issues showed little change. A gain 4 points in Ford Motors of Canada B and the renewed weakness of Stutz Motor bonds featured the automotive grup. Schulte United preferred and the Schulte real estate issues recorded sharp gains.

Gulf Oil of Pennsylvania advanced nearly 2 points and most of the others improved fractionally in quiet trading. Blaw Knox dropped 1 3-4 points to 33 1-8 despite the inauguration of dividends at the annual rate of $1.50. Lehman corporation, with a gain of nearly 2 points, featured the investment trust and trading corporation group. Baltimore & Ohio "rights" held steady around 1 1-8 and 1 1-4, but the convertible bonds yielded slightly. Fox Theatres closed fractionally higher at $8 a share despite the institution of receivership proceedings against that company.

BOND MARKET

NEW YORK, Jan. 27—(AP)—The movement of bond prices was confused today. Closing quotations were about evenly divided between gains and losses, although the averages showed a decline for all groups.

Convertibles flashed a little of their mid-summer vigor, especially the American Telephone 4 1-2s, which made a maximum rise of 4 points and closed 2 1-2 higher on a turnover of about $1,200,000, principal amount, the largest in weeks. There were net advances of 1 to 3 points in American International 5 1-2s, Atchison 4 1-2s, New Haven 6s, Reading Coal & Iron 6s and Commercial Investment Trust 5 1-2s. Public Service of New Jersey 4 1-2s, which lose their conversion privilege on Saturday, rose 3 1-2.

Several high grade rails rose sharply on small transactions. Columbus & Hocking Valley first 4s gained 4 1-8, Illinois Central first 3 1-2s rose 2, Nickel Plate 4 1-2s advanced 2 1-8, and Lake Shore General 3 1-2s rallied 1 1-4. In no instance, however, was a turnover of more than $5,000 principal amount, involved. In more general trading Burlington 4 1-2s, Rock Island general 4s, Union Pacific 4 1-2s and Western Maryland 4s improved about half a point each, while losses of similar proportions developed in Baltimore & Ohio 5s, Missouri Kansas Texas prior lien 5s and Pennsylvania gold 5s.

Utilities were mostly firm. Illinois Bell Telephone 5s, Kansas Gas & Electric 6, New York Edison 6 1-2s, Pacific Telephone first 5s, American Telephone 5s of 1960, and Utah Power & Light 5s made fractional improvement, although closing prices were somewhat below the day's high. Most of the net losses in this group were on thin dealings.

Industrials reflected a light demand and stood virtually still. In the specialties division, Shubert Theatre 6s rose 2 points and Schulco 6 1-2s, Series B, 3 1-2. North American Cement 6 1-2s morning in Liberty 4 1-2s suggested improved activity in the United States governments, but buying orders appeared to have been satisfied by the early flurry and the group quieted, selling off on the day.

Foreign obligations were irregular. There was further liquidation of the Australians, with the 5s of 1957 selling off 2 1-4 points and the 5s of 1955 dipping below their 1929 minimum. European loans were steady but inactive.

THREE BUILDING PERMITS GRANTED BY FIRE MARSHAL DURING PAST WEEK

With the issuing of three building permits by Fire Marshal Henry R. Taft during the past week the total number of permits for the month of January was brought to 14. Included in the permits are several for new dwelling houses within the city limits. The permits issued during the past week were for alterations and a new garage.

Work progressed favorably on building projects now in the process of construction. Peck-McWilliams Co., contractors, who are now at work at the Norwich Inn have made good progress with the work at this place. The metal lathing on nearly all the rooms is complete and the rough plaster work is being done. As soon as possible the hard finish plaster will be put on. The contractors are in hopes that the inn will be ready for its initial opening on May 30th.

On the McKinley avenue extension where several new houses are being built work has progressed very favorably during the past week. Two of the houses are almost ready for occupation and only a small amount of interior work is to be finished.

To Peck-McWilliams Co., contractors, to make alterations to the present brick building at 104 Main street owned by Beckenstein and Taylor. A new glass front is to be installed in the store on the lower floor of the building. New lally columns will be put in and a new plate glass front installed. The glass will be set in copper and the entrance to the store will be tiled. The estimated cost of the alteration is $1,200.

To Mrs. Pauline Rossmark to erect and alter the present frame hen house on her property at 18 Stonington road. The addition will be 16x18 feet and will be on concrete piers. The entire structure when completed will be 22x18 feet. The estimated cost is $75.

To Clifford L. Crary to erect a frame garage at his place on 36 Baltic street. The garage will be 20x20 feet and will accommodate two cars. The foundation will be of stone and cement. The estimated cost is $150.

REAL ESTATE SALES AND MORTGAGE LONS

During the past week there were seven sales of real estate in Norwich an increase of six sales over the corresponding week in 1929. The mortgage loans for the respective weeks were $25,076 and $18,068.

There were six sales of real estate in New London during the past week as compared to seven sales for the same week a year ago. The mortgage loans for the respective weeks were $43,730 and $87,418.

NEW LONDON

Favorable action by congress on the item providing $850,000 to start work on the new Coast Guard academy buildings is the only thing now standing in the way of starting work at the new site off Nameaug avenue. The money has been included in the first general deficiency bill of President Hoover and action is anticipated within the immediate future.

As soon as the money is available it is expected that work will begin. The plans for the new buildings have practically been completed and approved of and all other preliminary steps have been concluded. The project is the largest to be undertaken in this city in many years and will prove a decided boom in local building activities.

The present request for funds constitutes but one-third of what the new academy will cost when completed, it being planned to make appropriations for the remaining money next year.

The buildings to be erected together with the estimated cost, and also other work contemplated and the cost, are as follows:

Administration building, $160,000; cadet barracks, $420,000; academic building, $300,000; engineering building, $435,000; gymnasium and armory $300,000; enlisted mens' barracks, $35,000; general storehouse, $42,000; boiler house and stack, $75,000; observatory, $2,500; superintendent's quarters, $22,000; officers' quarters, $30,000; wharf and boat house, $15,000; roads and walks, $56,000; grading, $76,000; fencing, $22,000; piping, etc., $110,000; contingencies, $123,000.

The foundation has been completed for a house which is to be built for E. L. Raymond in Morton street, a new thoroughfare running parallel with Ocean and Montauk avenues through a part of what was formerly Plant field. The new structure is to be 26 by 38 feet and will contain a living room, dining room and kitchen on the first floor and four bedrooms with a tiled bath on the second floor.

There will be oak floors and a fireplace with a cobblestone chimney. A two-car garage will be erected in the rear. Another house was recently completed for Mr. Raymond in Thames street.

BUILDING PERMITS

Chas. Ogdne, frame dwelling, Ocean avenue, $9,000.

U. S. Government steel and frame cover building, rear 173 Bank street, $3,000.

Number of permits for the week, 3; estimated cost of buildings, $37,000.

BUILDING SITUATION

Although admitting that we have not yet reached the point of improved conditions in the building industry no alarm is expressed regarding reported losses in December from the preceding year in the national monthly building survey of S. W. Straus & Co., New York. These reports are not considered alarming, except to those who have looked for an immediate upturn in building activities and are rather in keeping with conservative expectations. Official figures received by the Straus company from 588 cities and towns of the country for building permits issued in December show a loss of 39 per cent. compared with the same month of 1928 and of 19 per cent. from November, 1929. For the entire year the same centers revealed a loss of 12 per cent. from 1928 and 18 per cent from 1927.

BETTERMENT SEEN BY MID-YEAR

Commenting on the national building outlook, the Straus company survey says further that the period of high money, extending back over two years or more, followed by the spectacular crash in Wall Street in October and November have affected adversely general building progress throughout the country. Although we have now run into a period of cheap money, which may be regarded as a fortuitous circumstance from the builders' point of view, the effects of the stock market debacle cannot be quickly dissipated.

The slower pace which has existed in the industry since the peak year of 1926 has undoubtedly taken up much of the building slack. Surpluses have been greatly curtailed and the fundamentals of the situation are sound. With a favorable money market and the efforts being put forth by industrial leaders throughout the nation to keep general business on the go, it may reasonably be expected that a turn for the better in building operations will be forthcoming by mid-year or possibly earlier.

WESTERLY

Westerly Building Inspector Thomas Wills and Zoning Inspector Louis J. Rossi have issued the following building and zoning permits for the third week in January:

Jan. 21. Allen H. Seeds of New York and Weekapaug. Construct cellar, 16 feet by 20 feet, under part of summer home, near Weekapaug point, at Seed cottage for heating plant.

Jan. 24. Harvey C. Perry, 8 Margin street. Build one and one-half story addition, 15 feet by 24 feet, to house at 12 Margin street.

SOME KINDS OF ECONOMY PROVE COSTLY MISTAKE

It is strangely true that a good many people are over-cautious at the wrong time, observes a writer in The Brick Kiln. They take safety measures against conditions that can exist only in one's fancy.

On the other hand, there are those who throw caution to the four winds—and usually at the wrong time. There are those who, in making a decision or selection that will have a vital bearing on their future happiness, do so in a casual, haphazard manner that later exacts its punishment in the form of dissatisfaction, irritability and unhappiness. The old familiar adage, "Mary in haste and repent in leisure," might well be paraphrased, "Select your home haphazardly and repent from week to week."

The most beautiful things in life are closely identified with a real home. The poets sing its praises and the entire world joins in the chorus. Architects devote a life of thought to designing a home that will bespeak happiness and good cheer. Artists derive great pleasure from depicting in their paintings the warmth and bliss of real home life.

Not so with the home buyer. In a great many cases he seems to be utterly oblivious of the factors that make a real home. In a great many cases he is unmindful of the hazards that beset the careless home buyer. He may not realize that there is a world of difference between a wooden home and a brick home. He may not realize that the running mates of a wooden home are heavy paint bills and frequent repair bills. He may not realize that the degree of fire safety in a wooden house is so low that the insurance rates are correspondingly high.

Were the home buyer to investigate, he would find that the actual cash difference in the price between a wooden house and a brick house is easily absorbed by a coat of paint and a repair bill; that because of rapid deterioration of wooden construction the potential resale value of a wooden house is cut down to a negligible sum; and in many cases reselling a wooden house is a most difficult proposition. The country is rapidly learning to appreciate the mental comfort to be derived from living in a substantial, durable, fire-safe, storm-proof brick. The road of building progress is lined with brick.

ATTRACTIVE HOME OF CLINTON THOMPSON ON SPRING GARDEN AVE.

The above is a photograph of the home of Clinton Thompson on Spring Garden avenue in Thamesville. The house which is one of the most attractive on the street was built by Contractor Francis M. Toomey, of East Great Plain. The house is of the semi-bungalow type located on a high and large lot. A heavy stone wall adds an attractive feature to the grounds about the house.

The exterior of the building is in brown stained shingles with white trim. The roof is covered with artistic composition shingles. The windows are of large size with leaded lights at the top. The door is of paneled oak with six panes high in the door.

The interior has four rooms and breakfast nook finished on the first floor while the second floor rooms have not yet been finished off. The rooms are large with oak floors and hard-finish plaster walls. There are many built-in features including china closets, medicine cabinets and telephone cabinet. The bathroom is in white tile with white tub and other fixtures.

A hot air distributor furnishes heat for the house and the plumbing is all in brass. The foundation is of stone and cement with a concrete block underpinning.

LIGHT FIXTURES TO MATCH CUPBOARDS

One of the new rules of interior finish seems to demand that the installation of one of these fascinating wall cabinets calls also for wall electric light fixtures on either side which are in perfect keeping with the cabinet. In working out possible combinations in this respect electric designers are achieving some interesting effects, especially when the various colonial patterns are employed in cabinet design. One of these, in particular, calls for a rectangular cupboard, with an eight-paned door ending in a semi-circle at the top, flanked by flat fluted columns and delicately ornamented capitals supporting—or appearing to support—a flat panel at the top. As ornamentation for this cupboard the designer of the electrical wall fixtures selected the twin candle type curving in to a somewhat ornamental wall plate pointed at both top and bottom. The effect of this combination is quite striking, for the ornamentation of the fixture is a perfect complement for the simple and delicate lines of the cupboard. The fact that the cupboard can be, and should be, used for glassware, lends to the attractive character of the entire ensemble.

This arrangement, however, is not the only suitable one, even for this type of cupboard. Another design used in conjunction with a beamed lower wall, calls for an old lamp fixture, with holders curving out from round and only sightly ornamented wall plates and surrounded by short glass fixtures designed to imitate the stubby type of oldtime lamp chimney. When the rest of the room's decorations are in keeping this arrangement is unusually effective.

It is possible, thanks to the wide and increasing choice of fixtures offered by the average electrical shop, to make one's own selection of wall fixtures to go with cupboards. There are a number of colonial patterns, any one of which would go well with cupboards, of the type described, or numerous others along simpler or more ornate lines.

MARKED CHANGES NOTED IN HOME PLUMBING

While the world has always been confronted with the problem of sanitation, it is only very recently that much progress has been made in this field, especially in its relations to the home. Some authorities claim that more progress has been made in plumbing and sanitation since 1900 than during the entire era preceding this date. We know definitely that the present century has witnessed some marked developments in this field.

Most of us take the things around us for granted, never stopping to realize that the blessings we enjoy were denied those who preceded us. A six-year-old boy would find it hard to believe that it was considered quite an event to have an automobile ride 25 years ago. The same is true of household plumbing. If a person were to go into a house in which the plumbing of the 1890's and the 1900's was in use he would be surprised. He is so used to present-day conveniences that he does not realize that they are of very recent origin.

Suppose we go into a house typical of 1900. Our host takes us through his home, of which he is quite proud. He shows the chandelier for both gas and electric light, which, he informs us, is quite an innovation. If we look out of a back window, we can see the stable, where he keeps his carriage horse.

He will have us know that the plumbing in his house compares favorably with that in any other house we're likely to visit. Just take the kitchen. The sink is encased in wood, and has a wood drainboard on one side. He shows us some slate laundry tubs. He then takes us to the second floor, and lets us inspect his bathroom. The lavatory consists of a marble slab in which a bowl is set. Another piece of marble serves as the back of the fixture. He is very proud of this lavatory. The bathtub has a zinc lining. Both fixtures are encased in wood—and as the plumbing in this house is second to none, hard wood is used. He admits he has some trouble with his fixtures, however. It is hard to keep them clean. The lavatory bowl frequently becomes loose and has to be reset from time to time.

Since that day times have changed, not once but several times. In 1902, solid and enameled porcelain came into use. Bathtubs and lavatories entered into a period of evolution. The wooden encasements were done away with. Tubs, sinks and lavatories were finished in white. Lavatories were cast as units. The claw-foot bathtub made its appearance.

Progress was not made with the kitchen sink until later, however. As late as 1912, it was common to find the old wood-encased sinks in pretentious residents. People realized, however, that this type of sink was unsatisfactory and impractical. It was inevitable, therefore, that they have them taken out and replaced with enameled ones.

Plumbing even then was regarded as a necessity pure and simple. People realized in a general way the importance of sanitation, and they came to regard bathing as nothing more or less than a means of keeping clean.

In time, however, a new attitude arose. The average citizen realized that plumbing added to his comfort, and that he should consider it as a means of increasing his enjoyment of life. The result was a new development in plumbing standards.

One of the first changes was the replacing of the claw-footed bathtub by one with sides fitting flush to the floor. Every housewife who has cleaned under the old claw-footed affair knows what this means. Another great change was the introduction of color in plumbing fixtures. Green and pink and blue and yellow fixtures were installed. Artistic lavatories took the place of their unpretentious predecessors. The bathroom became a thing of beauty.

People also discovered that the most enjoyable method of bathing is with a shower. These devices were installed in many homes. In most cases they were set over the bathtub so that the spray would drop into it. In some instances, however, they were installed in separate compartments.

The modern kitchen sink, with its double drainboard, its electric dishwasher, and its swing spout, delights any woman who does her own work. The enameled laundry tubs also appeal to her. She takes particular delight in having plenty of hot water.

One important development that has taken place in the plumbing industry is a mechanical improvement of the fixtures. Manufacturing standards have materially advanced with the passing years. Take such simple things as faucets. In the house built in 1900, the faucets tarnished. They had to be polished frequently. The same was true of the house built in 1915. It is not, however, true of the better type of house constructed in 1925. Fixtures now are given a special finish which makes them non-tarnishing.

Kitchen sinks are finished with acid-resisting enamel, which will not be stained by the juices of fruits and vegetables. Lavatories and bathtubs have impervious surfaces which dirt cannot penetrate. As a consequence, it is a simple task to clean them.

As can be seen there has been a material change in the style of equipment now in use. Modern fixtures tend to reduce housework and add to beauty. In these two ways, the fixtures add to home comfort.

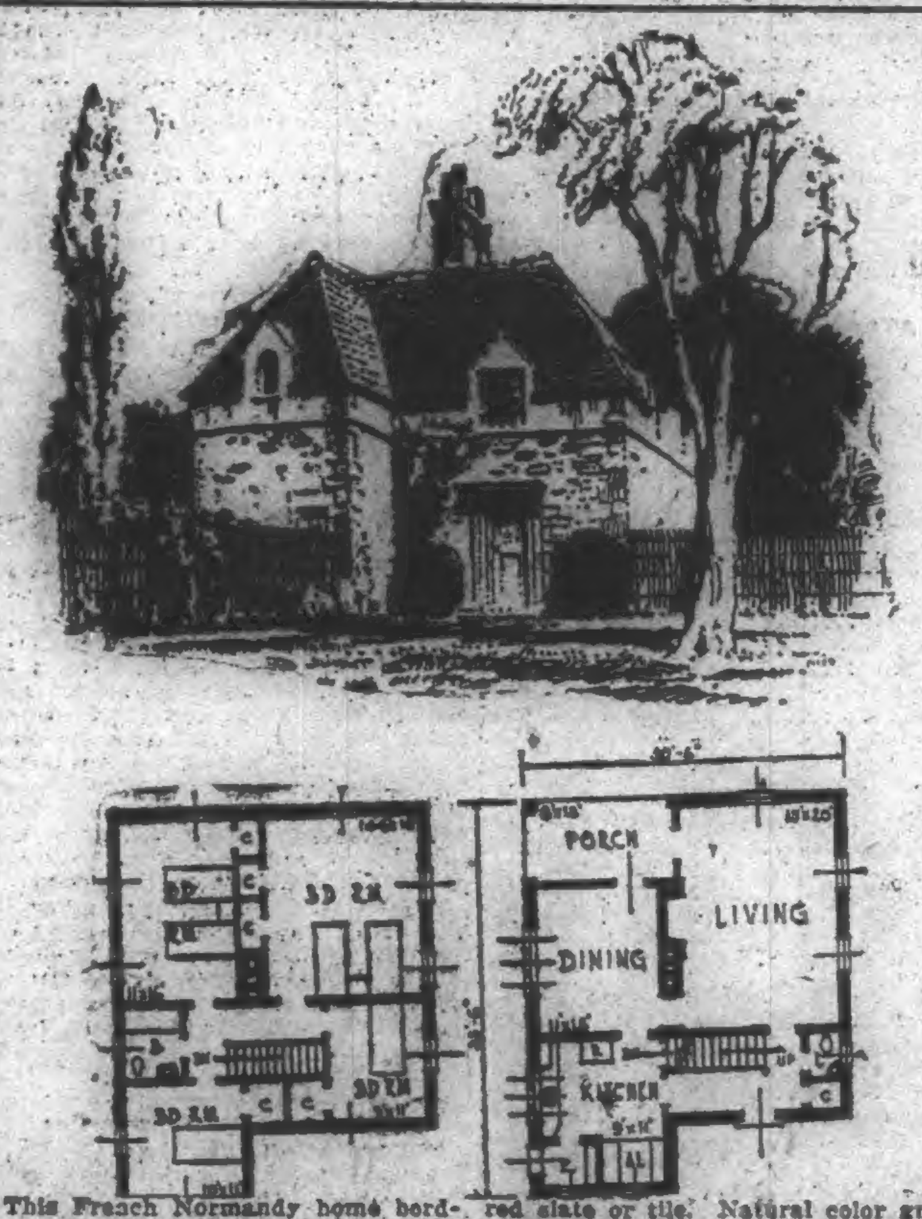
QUESTION OF SPANISH PREMIER UNANSWERED

MADRID, Jan. 27—(AP)—The question of whether General Primo De Rivera will continue at the head of the Spanish government or retire remained unanswered tonight by the army and navy.

The highest military and naval officers still were exchanging opinions, studying the situation and polling their subordinate officers to decide how to reply to the impulsive offer of the dictator to resign.

The universe to which the earth belongs contains more than 30,000,000,000 stars.

Here's A French Chateau In Miniature



This French Normandy home borders on the chateau type. The woven wood fence adds to its beauty, while poplar trees in the background supply a suitable frame. The design is intended for a 60 foot lot.

Two of the four bedrooms overlook the garden. The bathroom on the second floor is supplemented by a lavatory and toilet on the first floor located near the staircase.

The dining alcove is a particularly desirable feature. Both living room and dining room open to the porch, and the two rooms are placed in desirable relative position.

Stone or white-washed brick is used for the exterior walls, with a roof of red slate or tile. Natural color gray-weathered oak for the front door is necessary to the color scheme. The small number of windows is characteristic of the type, but cross ventilation is obtained in all rooms both on the first and second floors.

Construction costs will vary according to prevailing wage scale and quality of materials. Estimates for communities of medium size is $9,000 to $10,000, including all necessary items and heating and plumbing. Costs would be lower in smaller cities.

BOND MARKET

NEW YORK, Jan. 27—(AP)—The movement of bond prices was confused today. Closing quotations were about evenly divided between gains and losses, although the averages showed a decline for all groups.

Convertibles flashed a little of their mid-summer vigor, especially the American Telephone 4 1-2s, which made a maximum rise of 4 points and closed 2 1-2 higher on a turnover of about $1,300,000, principal amount, the largest in weeks. There were net advances of 1 to 3 points in American International 5 1-2s, Atchison 4 1-2s, New Haven 6s, Reading Coal & Iron 6s and Commercial Investment Trust 5 1-2s. Public Service of New Jersey 4 1-2s, which lose their conversion privilege on Saturday, rose 3 1-2.

Several high grade rails rose sharply on small transactions. Columbus & Hocking Valley first 4s gained 4 1-8, Illinois Central first 3 1-2s rose 2, Nickel Plate 4 1-2s advanced 2 1-8, and Lake Shore General 3 1-2s rallied 1 1-4. In no instance, however, was a turnover of more than $5,000 principal amount involved. In more general trading Burlington 4 1-2s, Rock Island general 4s, Union Pacific 4 1-2s and Western Maryland 4s improved about half a point each, while losses of similar proportions developed in Baltimore & Ohio 5s, Missouri Kansas Texas prior lien 5s and Pennsylvania gold 5s.

Utilities were mostly firm. Illinois Bell Telephone 5s, Kansas Gas & Electric 6, New York Edison 6 1-2s, Pacific Telephone first 5s, American Telephone 5s of 1960, and Utah Power & Light 5s made fractional improvement, although closing prices were somewhat below the day's high. Most of the net losses in this group were on thin dealings.

Industrials reflected a light demand and stood virtually still. In the specialties division, Shubert Theatre 6s rose 2 points and Schulco 6 1-2s, Series B, 2 1-2. North American Cement 6 1-2s moved up 1.

Substantial transactions during the morning in Liberty 4 1-2s suggested improved activity in the United States governments, but buying orders appeared to have been satisfied by the early flurry and the group quieted, selling off on the day.

Foreign obligations were irregular. There was further liquidation of the Australians, with the 5s of 1957 selling off 2 1-4 points and the 5s of 1955 dipping below their 1929 minimum. European loans were steady but inactive.

THREE BUILDING PERMITS GRANTED BY FIRE MARSHAL DURING PAST WEEK

With the issuing of three building permits by Fire Marshal Henry R. Taft during the past week the total number of permits for the month of January was brought to 14. Included in the permits are several for new dwelling houses within the city limits. The permits issued during the past week were for alterations and a new garage.

Work progressed favorably on building projects now in the process of construction. Peck-McWilliams Co., contractors, who are now at work at the Norwich Inn have made good progress with the work at this place. The metal lathing on nearly all the rooms is complete and the rough plaster work is being done. As soon as possible the hard finish plaster will be put on. The contractors are in hopes that the inn will be ready for its initial opening on May 30th.

On the McKinley avenue extension where several new houses are being built work has progressed very favorably during the past week. Two of the houses are almost ready for occupation and only a small amount of interior work is to be finished.

To Peck-McWilliams Co., contractors, to make alterations to the present brick building at 104 Main street owned by Beckenstein and Taylor. A new glass front is to be installed in the store on the lower floor of the building. New lally columns will be put in and a new plate glass front installed. The glass will be set in copper and the entrance to the store will be tiled. The estimated cost of the alteration is $1,200.

To Mrs. Pauline Rossmark to erect and alter the present frame hen house on her property at 18 Stonington road. The addition will be 16x18 feet and will be on concrete piers. The entire structure when completed will be 22x18 feet. The estimated cost is $75.

To Clifford L. Crary to erect a frame garage at his place on 38 Baltic street. The garage will be 20x20 feet and will accommodate two cars. The foundation will be of stone and cement. The estimated cost is $150.

REAL ESTATE SALES AND MORTGAGE LONS

During the past week there were seven sales of real estate in Norwich an increase of six sales over the corresponding week in 1929. The mortgage loans for the respective weeks were $33,076 and $13,063.

There were six sales of real estate in New London during the past week as compared to seven sales for the same week a year ago. The mortgage loans for the respective weeks were $43,730 and $87,413.

NEW LONDON

Favorable action by congress on the item providing $850,000 to start work on the new Coast Guard academy buildings is the only thing now standing in the way of starting work at the new site off Nameaug avenue. The money has been included in the first general deficiency bill of President Hoover and action is anticipated within the immediate future.

As soon as the money is available it is expected that work will begin. The plans for the new buildings have practically been completed and approved of and all other preliminary steps have been concluded. The project is the largest to be undertaken in this city in many years and will prove a decided boom in local building activities.

The present request for funds constitutes but one-third of what the new academy will cost when completed, it being planned to make appropriations for the remaining money next year.

The buildings to be erected together with the estimated cost and also other work contemplated and the cost, are as follows:

Administration building, $180,000; cadet barracks, $420,000; academic building, $300,000; engineering building, $435,000; gymnasium and armory $300,000; enlisted mens' barracks, $88,000; general storehouse, $43,000; boiler house and stack, $75,000; observatory, $2,500; superintendent's quarters, $22,000; officers' quarters, $50,000; wharf and boat house, $15,000; roads and walks, $38,000; grading, $76,000; fencing, $22,000; piping, etc., $110,000; contingencies, $123,000.

The foundation has been completed for a house which is to be built for E. L. Raymond in Morton street, a new thoroughfare running parallel with Ocean and Montauk avenues through a part of what was formerly Plant field. The new structure is to be 26 by 38 feet and will contain a living room, dining room and kitchen on the first floor and four bedrooms with a tiled bath on the second floor.

There will be oak floors and a fireplace with a cobblestone chimney. A two-car garage will be erected in the rear. Another house was recently completed for Mr. Raymond in Thames street.

BUILDING PERMITS

Chas. Ogdne, frame dwelling, Ocean avenue, $9,000.

U. S. Government steel and frame cover building, rear 172 Bank street, $3,000.

Number of permits for the week, 3; estimated cost of buildings, $37,000.

BUILDING SITUATION

Although admitting that we have not yet reached the point of improved conditions in the building industry no alarm is expressed regarding reported losses in December from the preceding year in the national monthly building survey of S. W. Straus & Co., New York. These reports are not considered alarming, except to those who have looked for an immediate upturn in building activities and are rather in keeping with conservative expectations. Official figures received by the Straus company from 583 cities and towns of the country for building permits issued in December show a loss of 39 per cent, compared with the same month of 1928 and of 19 per cent, from November, 1929. For the entire year the same centers revealed a loss of 12 per cent, from 1928 and 13 per cent from 1927.

BETTERMENT SEEN BY MID-YEAR

Commenting on the national building outlook, the Straus company survey says further that the period of high money, extending back over two years or more, followed by the spectacular crash in Wall Street in October and November have affected adversely general building progress throughout the country. Although we have now run into a period of cheap money, which may be regarded as a fortuitous circumstance from the builders' point of view, the effects of the stock market debacle cannot be quickly dissipated.

The slower pace which has existed in the industry since the peak year of 1925 has undoubtedly taken up much of the building slack. Surpluses have been greatly curtailed and the fundamentals of the situation are sound. With a favorable money market and the efforts being put forth by industrial leaders throughout the nation to keep general business on the go, it may resonably be expected that a turn for the better in building operations will be forthcoming by mid-year or possibly earlier.

WESTERLY

Westerly Building Inspector Thomas Wills and Zoning Inspector Louis J. Rossi have issued the following building and zoning permits for the third week in January:

Jan. 21. Allen H. Seeds of New York and Weekapaug. Construct cellar, 16 feet by 20 feet, under part of summer home, near Weekapaug point, at Seed cottage for heating plant.

Jan. 24. Harvey C. Perry, 8 Margin street. Build one and one-half story addition, 15 feet by 24 feet, to house at 12 Margin street.

SOME KINDS OF ECONOMY PROVE COSTLY MISTAKE

It is strangely true that a good many people are over-cautious at the wrong time, observes a writer in The Brick Kiln. They take safety measures against conditions that can exist only in one's fancy.

On the other hand, there are those who throw caution to the four winds—and usually at the wrong time. There are those who, in making a decision or selection that will have a vital bearing on their future happiness, do so in a casual, haphazard manner that later exacts its punishment in the form of dissatisfaction, irritability and unhappiness. The old familiar adage, "Marry in haste and repent in leisure," might well be paraphrased, "Select your home haphazardly and repent from week to week."

The most beautiful things in life are closely identified with a real home. The poets sing its praises and the entire world joins in the chorus. Architects devote a life of thought to designing a home that will bespeak happiness and good cheer. Artists derive great pleasure from depicting in their paintings the warmth and bliss of real home life.

Not so with the home buyer. In a great many cases he seems to be utterly oblivious of the factors that make a real home. In a great many cases he is unmindful of the hazards that beset the careless home buyer. He may not realize that there is a world of difference between a wooden home and a brick home. He may not realize that the running mates of a wooden home are heavy paint bills and frequent repair bills. He may not realize that the degree of fire safety in a wooden house is so low that the insurance rates are correspondingly high.

Were the home buyer to investigate, he would find that the actual cash difference in the price between a wooden house and a brick house is easily absorbed by a coat of paint and a repair bill; that because of rapid deterioration of wooden construction the potential resale value of a wooden house is cut down to a negligible sum, and in many cases reselling a wooden house is a most difficult proposition. The country is rapidly learning to appreciate the mental comfort to be derived from living in a substantial, durable, fire-safe, storm-proof brick. The road of building progress is lined with brick.

LIGHT FIXTURES TO MATCH CUPBOARDS

One of the new rules of interior finish seems to demand that the installation of one of these fascinating wall cabinets calls also for wall electric light fixtures on either side which are in perfect keeping with the cabinet. In working out possible combinations in this respect electric designers are achieving some interesting effects, especially when the various colonial patterns are enployed in cabinet design. One of these, in particular, calls for a rectangular cupboard, with an eight-paned door ending in a semi-circle at the top, flanked by flat fluted columns and delicately ornamented capitals supporting—or appearing to support—a flat panel at the top. As ornamentation for this cupboard the designer of the electrical wall fixtures selected the twin candle type curving in to a somewhat ornamental wall plate pointed at both top and bottom. The effect of this combination is quite striking, for the ornamentation of the fixture is a perfect complement for the simple and delicate lines of the cupboard. The fact that the cupboard can be, and should be, used for glassware, lends to the attractive character of the entire ensemble.

This arrangement, however, is not the only suitable one, even for this type of cupboard. Another design used in conjunction with a beamed lower wall, calls for an old lamp fixture, with holders curving out from round and only slightly ornamented wall plates and surrounded by short glass fixtures designed to imitate the stubby type of oldtime lamp chimney. When the rest of the room's decorations are in keeping this arrangement is unusually effective.

It is possible, thanks to the wide and increasing choice of fixtures offered by the average electrical shop, to make one's own selection of wall fixtures to go with cupboards. There are a number of colonial patterns, any one of which would go well with cupboards, of the type described, or numerous others along simpler or more ornate lines.

MARKED CHANGES NOTED IN HOME PLUMBING

While the world has always been confronted with the problem of sanitation, it is only very recently that much progress has been made in this field, especially in its relations to the home. Some authorities claim that more progress has been made in plumbing and sanitation since 1900 than during the entire era preceding this date. We know definitely that the present century has witnessed some marked developments in this field.

Most of us take the things around us for granted, never stopping to realize that the blessings we enjoy were denied those who preceded us. A six-year-old boy would find it hard to believe that it was considered quite an event to have an automobile ride 25 years ago. The same is true of household plumbing. If a person were to go into a house in which the plumbing of the 1890's and the 1900's was in use he would be surprised. He is so used to present-day conveniences that he does not realize that they are of very recent origin.

Suppose we go into a house typical of 1900. Our host takes us through his home, of which he is quite proud. He shows the chandelier for both gas and electric light, which, he informs us, is quite an innovation. If we look out of a back window, we can see the stable, where he keeps his carriage horse.

He will have us know that the plumbing in his house compares favorably with that in any other house we're likely to visit. Just take the kitchen. The sink is encased in wood, and has a wood drainboard on one side. He shows us some slate laundry tubs. He then takes us to the second floor, and lets us inspect his bathroom. The lavatory consists of a marble slab in which a bowl is set. Another piece of marble serves as the back of the fixture. He is very proud of this lavatory. The bathtub has a zinc lining. Both fixtures are encased in wood—and as the plumbing in this house is second to none, hard wood is used. He admits he has some trouble with his fixtures, however. It is hard to keep them clean. The lavatory bowl frequently becomes loose and has to be reset from time to time.

Since that day times have changed, not once but several times. In 1902, solid and enameled porcelain came into use. Bathtubs and lavatories entered into a period of evolution. The wooden encasements were done away with. Tubs, sinks and lavatories were finished in white. Lavatories were cast as units. The claw-foot bathtub made its appearance.

Progress was not made with the kitchen sink until later, however. As late as 1912, it was common to find the old wood-encased sinks in pretentious residents. People realized, however, that this type of sink was unsatisfactory and impractical. It was, inevitable, therefore, that they have them taken out and replaced with enameled ones.

Plumbing even then was regarded as a necessity pure and simple. People realized in a general way the importance of sanitation, and they came to regard bathing as nothing more or less than a means of keeping clean.

In time, however, a new attitude arose. The average citizen realized that plumbing added to his comfort, and that he should consider it as a means of increasing his enjoyment of life. The result was a new development in plumbing standards.

One of the first changes was the replacing of the claw-footed bathtub by one with sides fitting flush to the floor. Every housewife who has cleaned under the old claw-footed affair knows what this means. Another great change was the introduction of color in plumbing fixtures. Green and pink and blue and yellow fixtures were installed. Artistic lavatories took the place of their unpretentious predecessors. The bathroom became a thing of beauty.

People also discovered that the most enjoyable method of bathing is with a shower. These devices were installed in many homes. In most cases they were set over the bathtub so that the spray would drop into it. In some instances, however, they were installed in separate compartments.

The modern kitchen sink, with its double drainboard, its electric dishwasher, and its swing spout, delights any woman who does her own work. The enameled laundry tubs also appeal to her. She takes particular delight in having plenty of hot water.

One important development that has taken place in the plumbing industry is a mechanical improvement of the fixtures. Manufacturing standards have materially advanced with the passing years. Take such simple things as faucets. In the house built in 1900, the faucets tarnished. They had to be polished frequently. The same was true of the house built in 1915. It is not, however, true of the better type of house constructed in 1929. Fixtures now are given a special finish which makes them nontarnishing.

Kitchen sinks are finished with acid-resisting enamel, which will not be stained by the juices of fruits and vegetables. Lavatories and bathtubs have impervious surfaces which dirt cannot penetrate. As a consequence, it is a simple task to clean them.

As can be seen there has been a material change in the style of equipment now in use. Modern fixtures tend to reduce housework and add to beauty. In these two ways, the fixtures add to home comfort.

QUESTION OF SPANISH PREMIER UNANSWERED

MADRID, Jan. 27—(AP)—The question of whether General Primo De Rivera will continue at the head of the Spanish government or retire remained unanswered tonight by the army and navy.

The highest military and naval officers still were exchanging opinions, studying the situation and polling their subordinate officers to decide how to reply to the impulsive offer of the dictator to resign.

ATTRACTIVE HOME OF CLINTON THOMPSON ON SPRING GARDEN AVE.

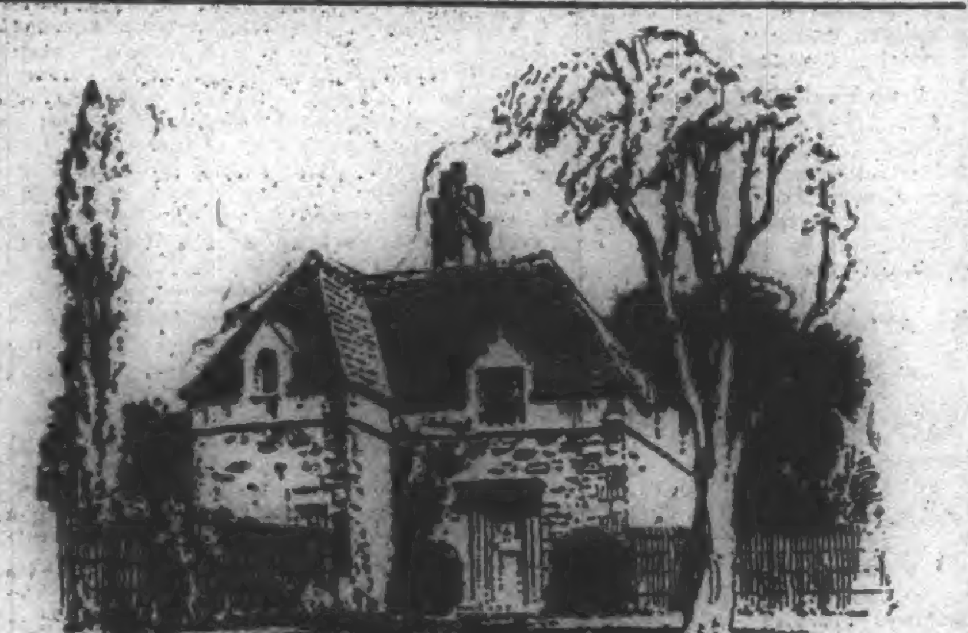
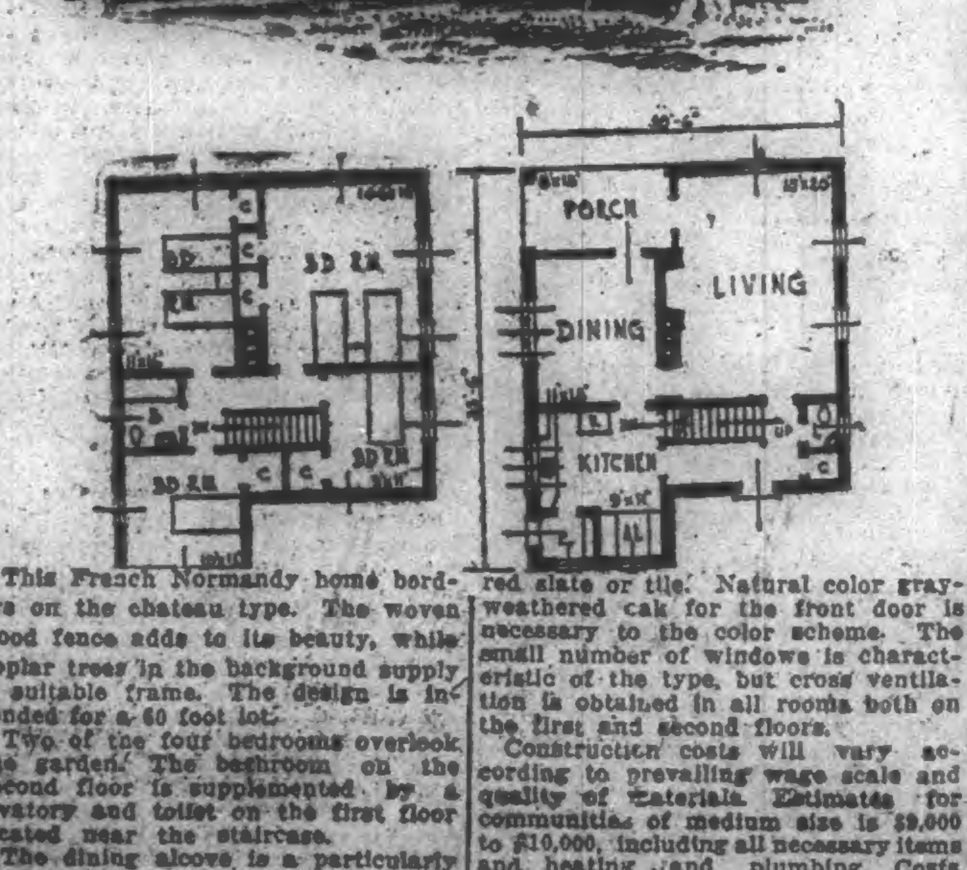
The exterior of the building is in brown stained shingles with white trim. The roof is covered with artistic composition shingles. The windows are of large size with leaded lights at the top. The door is of paneled oak with six panes high in the door.

The interior has four rooms and breakfast nook finished on the first floor while the second floor rooms have not yet been finished off. The rooms are large with oak floors and hard-finish plaster walls. There are many built-in features including china closets, medicine cabinets and telephone cabinet. The bathroom is in white tile with white tub and other fixtures.

A hot air distributor furnishes heat for the house and the plumbing is all in brass. The foundation is of stone and cement with a concrete block underpinning.

Here's A French Chateau In Miniature





This French Normandy home borders on the chateau type. The woven wood fence adds to its beauty, while poplar trees in the background supply a suitable frame. The design is intended for a 60 foot lot.

Two of the four bedrooms overlook the garden. The bathroom on the second floor is supplemented by a lavatory and toilet on the first floor located near the staircase.

The dining alcove is a particularly desirable feature. Both living room and dining room open to the porch, and the two rooms are placed in desirable relative position.

Stone or white-washed brick is used for the exterior walls, with a roof of red slate or tile. Natural color gray-weathered oak for the front door is necessary to the color scheme. The small number of windows is characteristic of the type, but cross ventilation is obtained in all rooms both on the first and second floors.

Construction costs will vary according to prevailing wage scale and quality of materials. Estimates for communities of medium size is $9,000 to $10,000, including all necessary items and heating and plumbing. Costs would be lower in smaller cities.

HOLY CROSS RELAY TEAM TO RUN AT INDOOR MEET AT ARMORY SATURDAY

Appearance of the Holy Cross varsity relay team, which last Saturday in the Boston Garden beat Harvard, Jimmy Daley, Bernie McCaffery and Bill Madden, other Holy Cross track luminaries, was announced Monday evening for the second Academy indoor track meet to be held at the state armory here Saturday night. These boys, who will appear in special events, will supplement an Academy-Stonington dual meet.

McCaffery and Daley were leading performers in the Boston meet last Saturday and it is considered a very fortunate stroke that Norwich is able to obtain their services. McCaffery is rated as the best at 600 yards indoors while Daley is the college 60-yard sprint champ. Madden will run from scratch in a special mile affair against Johnny Sullivan of the Duwell A. A. of this city, Minor of Chapman Tech. New London, Georgie Lambert of N. F. A. and Ed Cotter, Westerly high's pride in the long distance events.

All of the Holy Cross boys have appeared in the big indoor meets throughout the country in the past few seasons. Last winter McCaffery was one of the most sensational performers in the country, winning six out of his seven races. He won the world's invitation 500-yard race of the New York A. C. last year against a formidable field.

The evening's programme as presently constituted, will be about the same as in the meet a week ago last Saturday when the Wildcats lost their opener to Suffield prep.

The high school end of the meet will have, in addition to the Academy and Stonington, representatives from New London Bulkeley, Chapman Tech and Hartford high. Bulkeley and Hartford will enter sprint teams and Chapman Tech a sprint team and mile relay quartet.

FITCHVILLE PHANTOMS WIN FROM LEBANON QUINTET

The Fitchville Phantoms took over the Lebanon Farmers, 32 to 23, in a fast and furious game at Lebanon on Saturday evening. Francis Gribbon, flashy guard, was the individual star with 10 points to his credit. Yankewitz was a close second. The Phantoms would like games with Noank or the Colchester Firemen. The summary:

WALKER'S CASE TO COME BEFORE COMMISSION TODAY

NEW YORK, Jan. 27.—(AP)—The New York state athletic commission is scheduled to consider tomorrow the case of Mickey Walker, middleweight champion, with the chances great that the 160-pound king will make peace with the solons and defend his crown against Rene DeVos, Belgian challenger, in Madison Square Garden, March 14.

Walker, suspended here three years ago for failure to defend his title in the specified time limit, aggravated his offenses by failing to appear before the commission when summoned. He has not fought in New York state since winning the middleweight crown from the late Tiger Flowers at Chicago in 1926. Walker's title was declared vacant last year by the National Boxing association for inactivity, despite his defense of it against Ace Hudkins in Los Angeles last October.

SIMPSON WILL COMPETE IN N. Y. A. C. TRACK MEET

NEW YORK, Jan. 27.—(AP)—The New York Athletic club announced today that George Simpson, of Ohio State university, the only sprinter on record to run 100 yards in 9 2-5 seconds, will compete in the N. Y. A. C. games at Madison Square Garden, Feb. 17.

As opponents for Simpson in a special 60-yard sprint, the management hopes to bring together such speedsters as Jimmy Daley, Holy Cross, national and intercollegiate indoor sprint champion; Kriss, Cleveland A. C.; Kent, Colgate; Boyle, Penn; Hussey, N. Y. A. C.; and Furth, New York university.

LACOSTE WILL BE READY FOR TITLE PLAY THIS SUMMER

NEW YORK, Jan. 27.—(AP)—Rene LaCoste, the most machine-like of the great French tennis stars, is entirely cured of the illness that kept him out of the Davis cup challenge round last year and is planning another international campaign this season, reports no less an authority than Big Bill Tilden.

The American champion, now playing in the tournaments along the Riviera, writes in the current issue of "American Lawn Tennis," that far from retiring from the game, LaCoste expects to play in the French and English championships again and to take his old place on the tri-color Davis cup team.

Tilden said Alain Gerbault, veteran tennis player and lone ocean navigator, and the English tennis expert, A. Wallis Meyers, were the sources of his information that LaCoste is now himself again.

With LaCoste and Cochet once more heading the French defense forces, the task ahead of the United States and other challenging nations becomes increasingly difficult, Big Bill points out.

Incidentally, Tilden announced himself "annoyed" that his name was included on the list of "Davis cup squad" members issued some weeks ago and repeated emphatically that he will not be available for the United States team.

Tilden says further that the French are working to bolster their team in doubles.

It was in the doubles last year that the Americans made their most impressive showing against the defenders, Johnny Van Ryn and Wilmer Allison defeating Henri Cochet and Jean Borotra in straight sets.

Tilden's prize protege, Wilbur F. Coen, Jr., of Kansas City, will join Big Bill on the Riviera soon, being booked to sail on the Bremen, Feb. 1.

The Kansas City youngster, who now is 18, will not be available for American zone Davis cup play but may be called upon to join the team in Europe.

Jean Borotra, the bounding Basque, bustled over here on a business trip last winter to win the national indoor championship, but cannot make it this year. Frank Hunter, who gave him a great battle in the final, is favored to win the 1930 event which starts Feb. 1 at the Seventh Regiment armory here.

At New London last night the Norwich Girls basketball team, led by Miss O'Hart, won an easy victory over the Yergan Girls club, 43 to 4. Miss O'Hart shared the honors with Miss Kslasek in spectacular basket shooting, the former caging 12, while the latter had five and a foul. The summary:

SHYMAS VS. RADIO FIVE TONIGHT

For the attraction at the Parish hall, Taftville, tonight the fast Radio five of Danielson will furnish the opposition against the Shyma five of the village. This game should turn out to be one of the best games of the season as the visitors have a fine record so far this season, holding wins over some of the fastest teams in that section of the state. Not forgetting the old Taftville-Danielson rivalry, this game should be a hummer.

The visitors will send down a fast line-up, including stars of the Killingly high school of a few years back. Included in their line-up will be Gale, at left forward, Withy, right forward, with Mayhew at the toss-up position, while Adams, Goodreau and League will endeavor to check the local forwards. This is without a doubt one of the fastest bunch of basketball players to perform before the local fans this season and the Danielson manager feels sure that they will return home having administered the first defeat to the local team on their home floor.

In an endeavor to keep their record intact the locals have been hard at work and with their final practice Sunday afternoon everyone was in first class condition with the exception of Lemieux, their stellar guard, who will see the game from the sidelines. The locals will take the floor in the following order: Gauthier and Dugas, forwards; Pete Finn, center; Jim Murphy and Peltier in the backcourt, and S. Finn and Labarre will be held in reserve.

In the preliminary game the Shyma Juniors will stack up against the newly formed Battery B team of Norwich. The Juniors will line up as follows: Durr and Bonin, forwards; Raymond, center; Burelle, Wilk and Bunk, guards.

We've all heard about the fellow who is so big hearted he'd give you the shirt off his back.

But didja hear about the office girl who was so big hearted she gave away her employer's tailor-made coat?

This happened in one of the business houses in our city not so many days ago. It seems that the Boss had just had a new overcoat made by a local tailor, and it was some snappy benny, too.

As usual he came to the office the morning after he got the coat and as was his custom he hung it in the cloak closet, along with another old overcoat which he had discarded.

Not having any further use for the old coat he told one of the girls in the office to give it to the janitor. Well, that was all right as far as it went and he promptly forgot about it.

It being a mid day he did not wear the new coat to lunch and thought no more about it until he was leaving the office late in the afternoon, when he went to get his coat.

He opened the closet door and reached in for the brand new coat. It was not there. He looked on the floor, thinking it might have dropped down. No, it wasn't there, either.

The old coat was hanging on its accustomed hook but the new coat was gone. The office girls had gone home so there was nothing to do but wear the old coat home vowing that he'd know who took that coat before another sun had set.

It was no laughing matter to lose a nice new tailor-made overcoat before you'd worn it a single day. Whoever took that coat was going to be the recipient of some advise about the treatment of other people's wearing apparel. They couldn't take his coat and get away with it.

Next morning he was at the office bright and early. As the office force reported for work each and every one was questioned as to what had become of the coat. No one knew. Finally the office girl appeared. Had she seen his new coat. No, she hadn't.

Well, somebody had. Somebody in that office knew what had become of that coat. Just as he was getting ready to call somebody on the carpet who should come walking through but the janitor.

The boss looked, and his eyes started to pop out of his head, for proudly strutting along was the janitor gloriously clad in the boss' new overcoat. To say the boss was speechless is putting it very mild.

The janitor walks right up to the boss and says "Thanks, boss, for this overcoat, it sure is a dandy. Best coat I ever had and it ain't been wore much either." And he turns around so's the boss can get an eyeful of how nice it looked.

Well that coat came off as quick as any coat ever did. It seems the office girl had given the janitor the new coat instead of the old one.

And now there is peace in the office but the boss resolves to do his own giving in the future. It's less hard on the nerves.

WOMEN'S INDOOR TENNIS REACHES THIRD ROUND

BROOKLINE, Mass., Jan. 27.—(AP)—Seven of the seeded players entered in the women's national indoor singles tennis tournament, including Miss Margaret Blake, of Boston, the defending champion advanced into the third round here today during the opening play on the Longwood covered courts. The eighth, Miss Alice Francis, of New York, defaulted.

Miss Virginia Rice, Boston, seeded sixth, was the only one on the list to encounter any kind of opposition. She drew Mrs. John L. Bremer, of Boston, in a second round match. Mrs. Bremer won the first set, 6-4, and then faltered, giving Miss Rice the next two by scores of 6-0, 6-2.

Mrs. John Jessup, of Wilmington, Del. top seeded, gained the third bracket by vanquishing Miss Louise Rogerson, Boston, with the loss of only two games. When the opening play ceased tonight, the field of 38 starters was reduced to 16, thereby paving the way for the start of the women's indoor doubles tomorrow.

WALKER DENIES CHARGES MADE BY HIS WIFE

TRENTON, N. J., Jan. 27.—(AP)—In answering his wife's suit for divorce, Edward P. "Mickey" Walker, middleweight champion of the world, categorically denied today charges of excessive drinking, philandering and extreme cruelty.

The boxer likewise entered a denial to an allegation he had spent $60,000 on a "lavish" trip to Paris. He seeks custody of a five-year-old son.

The Walkers were married Jan. 28, 1923, and separated last summer. She filed a suit for separate maintenance but subsequently withdrew it to enter a petition for divorce in the court of chancery.

A home was maintained by Walker at Rumson. Mrs. Walker, who seeks to resume her maiden name of Margaret Kelly, is in California.

JONES WINS DECISION OVER LATZO IN FAST BOUT

PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 27.—(AP)—Billy Jones, Philadelphia Negro, won the decision over Pete Latzo, Scranton, Pa., in a free-hitting ten-round bout at the Arena tonight. Latzo, former holder of the welterweight crown, weighed 175 1-4, Jones, 178.

Tonight's bout was Latzo's second appearance in the ring after an absence of more than a year. About 15 months ago he received a broken jaw in a fight with Jimmy Braddock, and for weeks it was believed the exminer's fighting days were over.

Jones proved a rugged trial horse for Latzo in his attempted comeback. The Negro not only was fast, but boxed cleverly and punched hard with either hand.

SPECULATOR AWARDED NATION SPEED SKATING TOURNAMENT

SPECULATOR, N. Y., Jan. 27.—(AP)—The national outdoor speed skating championships today were awarded to Speculator. They will be held February 21 and 22. The North American Skating association wired the Hamilton County Sports association its plea had been granted.

With the North American outdoor speed skating championships scheduled for Lake Placid and Saranac lake, northern New York will see two of the year's biggest ice events. The North American championships are open to Canadians.

CLINTON PROS VS. ARMORY A. A. TONIGHT

The fast Clinton Pros will oppose the Armory A. A. this evening at the state armory in Danielson and all indications point to a very fast and close game. These two teams have met every year and the visitors have always made Danielson go the limit to cop off the victory. This year the Clinton team has strengthened the lineup with P. Vattes, who played with the Boston Whirlwinds for a time and who is considered one of the fastest forwards in New England. The Clinton Pros won the Central Massachusetts championship last season and they are away to a good start this year. They have lost only one game in eleven starts.

The Armory A. A. has shown considerable improvement in the last two games and appears to have hit their stride. The manager has decided to start the same lineup which put up such a wonderful game last week against the Phi Deltas of Indiana.

There will be a fast preliminary game which will start at 7:45 between the All Stars and the Southbridge All Stars. There will be dancing after the main game.

ILLINOIS TO WAGE SUIT FOR $10,000 FORFEIT MONEY

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., Jan. 27.—(AP)—The Illinois state athletic commission will wage a legal battle to force Manager Jack Kearns and Mickey Walker, middleweight champion, to pay a $10,000 forfeit to the Shriners' hospital for crippled children at San Francisco.

Before agreeing to allow Walker to meet Tommy Loughran for the light heavyweight championship here last year, the Illinois commission forced Kearns to post a $10,000 forfeit with the California commission, guaranteeing that Walker would defend his title at Los Angeles, preferably against Ace Hudkins. Walker failed to meet Hudkins within the time limit and the Illinois commission ordered the California body to pay the $10,000 to the Shriners' hospital. Manager Kearns stopped the order by gaining a temporary injunction.

LITTLE CHANGE IN CONDITION OF CANTILLON

HICKMAN, Ky., Jan. 27.—(AP)—Doctors reported little change in the condition of Joe Cantillon former big league baseball player, tonight but marveled at the hidden strength with which he has held off the fatal effects of a stroke.

Once since the turn for the worse Sunday he regained consciousness and holding himself straight up in bed he tried to tell a story about Rube Waddell but his paralyzed throat refused to shape the words and he lapsed again into a coma.

Messages were received from the only three men in baseball today who started when Joe did, Connie Mack, Charles Comisky and Wilburt Robinson.

MRS. STETSON IS MEDALIST IN BELLEAIR TOURNAMENT

BELLEAIR, Fla., Jan. 27.—(AP)—Mrs. Helen B. Stetson, Philadelphia, former national women's champion, captured the qualifying medal today in the annual January women's golf tournament, here, with a score of 85.

Mrs. Norman Rood, Wilmington, Del., was second with an 88, while Mrs. Edmond Guggenheim, Roslyn, L. I., was third, with 90.

DETROIT, Jan. 27.—(AP)—Terry Roth, Brooklyn featherweight, will arrive here tomorrow to prepare for his bout with Pete Firpo at Olympia Friday night. The entire proceeds from the card will be given to Mrs. Mary Darmand, mother of Mickey Darmon, who died after being knocked out at Olympia last Friday night. Carlo Mazzola and Marty Stone will meet in one of the other bouts on the card.

Halaiko Kayoes Verde

ROCHESTER, N. Y., Jan. 27.—(AP)—Steve Halaiko, Auburn lightweight, knocked out Phil Verde, of Rochester, in the third round of a scheduled six round bout here tonight. Halaiko, twice crowned National A. A. U. champion, floored Verde five times before sending him down for the final count. It was Halaiko's tenth straight victory since turning professional last fall.

SHORTSTOP POSITION TO PLAY IMPORTANT PART IN RACE

NEW YORK, Jan. 27—(AP)—The task of making the 1930 pennant race in the American league close and exciting, may become the responsibility of a group of young men identified now only by the statement that they will play shortstop for four of the clubs.

This important position is wide open on half the clubs in the league and how well the contenders fill it may be the answer to the problem of unseating the champion Athletics from the baseball throne.

Baseball's close observers have nominated the Yankees, Tigers and Indians to make long summer afternoons unpleasant for Connie Mack and his tribe. The St. Louis Browns and Washington Senators are mentioned, too, but not so often.

St. Louis and Washington have capable shortstops in Ralph Kress and Joe Cronin, but the chances are that Managers Shawkey, Harris and Peckinpaugh have no idea who will play the position for the other three challengers.

The Yankees have three or four likely candidates with Mark Koenig sure of a trial. Durocher and Lary will be in the race. A pair of Bills, Rogell, formerly of the Red Sox and Akers, who finished the season in Detroit last year, probably will be Bucky Harris' hope. Gardner, Lind and others will fight it out for Cleveland.

John (Joe) Boley seems good for another year with the Athletics. If not, Eric McNair, may step in to fill the job. Chicago has a good shortstop in Chalmer Cissell, but Irvin Jeffries may replace Cissell, giving the former soldier a chance to move over to second base.

The Athletics are in and will be hard to get out. The A's have the pitchers, while the returns are not all in for some of the other clubs. After the shortstop puzzle is worked out, the Yankees must turn to the mound and the same tangle must be unraveled by the Tigers. Detroit had the hitters last year and will have them again but a way must be found to stop the opposition bats. Cleveland had great pitching in 1929 and will need no better to be dangerous this season.

Connie Mack is in position to take the field with his world champions intact. No other clubs in the league can say the same.

EMANUEL TO BE ON INJURED LIST FOR 6 WEEKS

BOSTON, Jan. 27.—(AP)—Armand Emanuel, fighting Los Angeles attorney, said today that an injury received here in his bout with Jimmy Maloney, Boston heavyweight, would keep him out of the ring for at least six weeks. Emanuel said he has already cancelled two engagements.

He described the injury as a fallen ring in the right inguinal region and claimed it resulted from a low blow. He claimed a foul at the time, but it was disallowed.

THREE-MAN LEAGUE OPENS AT AETNA THIS EVENING

LEW BROWN IS NOW RUBY BRADLEY'S MANAGER

HOLYOKE, Mass., Jan. 27.—(AP)—Ruby Bradley, of this city, flyweight who has reached the semi-final round in the Madison Square Garden tournament in that division, was taken over today by Lew Brown, of New Haven, who purchased his contract from George Sweeney, of Holyoke.

Gorilla Jones Flattens Grove

Jones floored the New Yorker four times before the knockdown that ended the fight.

Jones slammed Grove all around the ring and had the New Yorker holding on after the third round. In this session Grove went down for a count of nine and again in the fifth round for a count of five.

Tony Vacarelli, New York welterweight, outpointed Steve Gotch of Brooklyn, in the ten-round semi-final. Vacarelli weighed 150 1-2; Gotch 154 1-2.

Lampe Beats Charles

BALTIMORE, Jan. 27.—(AP)—Sidney Lampe of Baltimore, tonight won a decisive victory over Gaston Charles, French featherweight in a 10-round bout. Lampe forced the fighting throughout and newspaper men at the ringside gave him every round.

In an eight round go before the semi-final Charlie Irnst, French featherweight and companion of Charles, won a decision over Lawrence Gunn of Baltimore.

Shikat Throws McMillan

NEW YORK, Jan. 27.—(AP)—Dick Shikat, world's heavyweight wrestling champion in the eyes of the New York and Pennsylvania state athletic commissions, threw Jim McMillan, former University of Illinois athlete, after 1 hour and 54 minutes of wrestling here tonight. A succession of flying mares weakened McMillan and Shikat was able to apply the finishing touches with a crotch and body hold.

Sonnenberg Downs Penton

MANCHESTER, N. H., Jan. 27.—(AP)—Gus Sonnenberg, generally recognized world's heavyweight wrestling champion, took 72 minutes to toss Stanley Penton with his flying tackle here tonight. The local wrestler was unable to continue because his knee was dislocated by the fall.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Breed Theatre.

How does it feel to be murdered? Margaret Livingston ought to know For in "The Bellamy Trial," the thrilling murder mystery, which comes to the Breed theatre tomorrow as a Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer feature, she is the woman whose slaying provides motivation for the amazing plot.

When the scenes were taken under Monta Bell's direction, Miss Livingston had to go through the death portrayal six different times.

"Oh, death, where is thy sting?" she wailed as she rubbed liniment upon her bruised shins.

Leatrice Joy heads the stellar cast as the woman on trial. The supporting players include Betty Bronson, who enacts the role of the girl reporter George Barraud, Kenneth Thompson Margaret Seddon, Eddie Nugent Charles B. Middleton and many others.

How Much Will It Cost?

THERE'S no accounting for the peculiar manias of human beings. The debutante who affectionately fondles a pet lion and gets her picture in the society columns goes into tantrums at the sight of a mouse. The two year old babe that screams with fright at the coming of a stranger—no matter how handsome—turns smilingly with outstretched arms to the old colored nurse. The housewife consumes days wadding up strings from packages brought by the grocer—and for ten cents she could buy twine to last a year.

Business men whose time is too valuable to quibble over a few dollars in the cost of an item of equipment spend hours getting quotations on one thousand second sheets. Once in a while some printer makes a mistake and quotes too low. But he's a sport and he delivers without complaining; and next time the buyer thinks he is being held up.

Babies usually get over their eccentricities, but the business man never. Why? We confess we don't know.

A birthday party was held Saturday afternoon at the home of Mr. and Mrs. James Kirker, of Pukallus avenue, in honor of their daughter, Lucille, on her third birthday. Twenty-five of her little friends were present and during the afternoon many games were played and enjoyed. The donkey game was won by Lorraine Farrell; the peanut hunt, by Dorothy Spaulding; guessing contest, Dorothy Spaulding, and passing the book by Harriet Ryan. The dining room was prettily decorated. In the center of the table was placed a beautiful birthday cake on which were three lighted candles. The cake was presented to Miss Kirker by Mrs. Howard Spaulding.

Refreshments of assorted sandwiches, fruit, candies, ice cream and wafers, hot chocolate and soda were served by Mrs. Kirker, assisted by Mrs. James Ryan, of Twelfth street, Mrs. Richard Raymond of East Great Plains, Mrs. Floyd Monroe, Mrs. John Farrell and Mrs. Raymond Jennings, of Willimantic.

The K. S. Sewing circle of the ladies auxiliary Div. No. 18, A. O. H., met Thursday evening at the home of Mrs. Thomas Welch of 869 Boswell avenue, with a large class present. The first period of the evening was devoted to sewing of fancy articles and making of lamp shades, after which a social hour was enjoyed, during which piano and vocal selections were rendered by the members. Refreshments of salads, assorted sandwiches, cake, cookies and coffee were served by the hostess, assisted by Mrs. Geary, Mrs. Michael Kirby and Mrs. Lucian Bissonette. The circle will hold its next meeting with Mrs. Barry on Roath street, Thursday evening of this week.

A very enjoyable Christian Endeavor social was held at the Third Baptist church Friday evening when many new games were played and prizes given to several. Refreshments were served by the social committee, Doris Lund, Chris Wunderlich, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Sebastian and Elinor Howard.

Many young folks of the Christian Endeavor took advantage of the recent snow and formed a coasting party which went out to Fred Benjamin's farm, Preston City. Transportation was provided by William Sebastian and a good time was had by all.

Mrs. Henry Sebastian conducted the regular weekly Christian Endeavor meeting of the Third Baptist church, the subject being, What Our Church Is Planning This Year? Thirty members and friends were present. Miss Winnie Haydon rendered a piano solo and a special selection was played by the orchestra. Several officers gave reports on the new work that is being planned for this year, making this meeting one of the best in a long while.

TADPOLE BRIDGE APPROACHES ARE INCLUDED IN HIGHWAY CONTRACT

The construction contract on state highway work from Bishop's crossing to and through Jewett City is now out for bids and it is anticipated, it has been learned, that the next batch of road work contracts to be put out for bids will probably include a new bridge over the railroad tracks north of Jewett City, the famous Tadpole bridge.

The contract upon which the state highway commission is now asking bids covers about three and three-quarter miles of concrete highway, 30 feet wide, from Bishop's crossing to Jewett City, including the approaches to the Tadpole bridge. The bridge work itself will be in a separate contract, which is not yet out for bids.

Considerable straightening of curves will be accomplished in the new lines laid out for the road from Jewett City to Bishop's crossing. This will begin immediately upon leaving the main street of the borough where the present road curves around sharply to the east. The new layout will be in almost a straight line from the end of the borough street towards the location for the new Tadpole bridge, which will stretch over the railroad tracks diagonally instead of at right angles as in the case of the present bridge, which makes such a serious traffic hazard at this point and has resulted in many accidents.

North of the bridge also, where the road curves around Tadpole pond, this curve will be eliminated by some filling in and by cutting into the side of the hill so that the new layout will rejoin the present highway at about the Tadpole filling station. South of the Tadpole bridge, there will also be a considerable bit of filling in where there is low land now, and on each side of the bridge there will be a change of grade from the present conditions.

At a number of other points along the line before Bishop's crossing is reached there will be curves that will be straightened out in accordance with the state highway department's scientific policy of providing long sight lines for automobile traffic as a factor in diminishing the liability to collision and other types of accidents.

The work under the contract for which bids are now being sought, comes through the main thoroughfare of Jewett City, connecting with the present grade crossing elimination work at the Lisbon boundary line, and when this has been completed, it will leave the road from Norwich to Jewett City as the only piece between New London and the Massachusetts state line which is not concrete.

NORWICH MINISTERS HAVE LENTEN SERVICES IN VIEW

With the moderator, Rev. Gurdon F. Bailey, presiding, the January meeting of the Norwich Ministers' association was held Monday morning at 11 o'clock at the study of Rev. Alexander H. Abbott, in the Otis library building. Rev. Harry P. Brothwell offered the opening prayer. Rev. Frederick Baker gave an interesting talk on the subject, Is a Council of Churches in Norwich Possible? It was voted that this matter be discussed further at the next meeting of the association. There was special reference made to the spiritual uplift received by the community as the result of the recent week of prayer in observance of the 1900th anniversary of Pentecost.

The meeting accepted with regret the resignation of Rev. Harry P. Brothwell as secretary of the association. Rev. Mr. Brothwell is leaving Norwich to assume a pastorate in Waterford. Rev. George Warren Potten was named secretary to succeed Rev. Mr. Brothwell.

The meeting discussed suggestions for the Lenten programme and a vote was adopted that a committee be named to arrange for such a program which is to include a three-hour devotional service on Good Friday to be held at St. Andrew's Episcopal church, Greeneville, of which Rev. E. J. Norris is rector. Rev. David A. Pitt, D. D., Rev. Alexander H. Abbott and Rev. Norris were included on the committee.

COMMUNITY GROUPS WILL VIEW NEEDLEWORK EXHIBIT

Arrangements have been made for groups of women from a number of different communities to visit Converse Art gallery this week to see the unusual exhibit of foreign needlework, which has been brought here through the co-operation of the Woman's City club.

Taftville, Hanover, Versailles, Baltic, Gales Ferry, Preston, Montville, Franklin, Bozrah, East Great Plain, and Bean Hill are places from which groups are expected and there will probably be others while the exhibit is at the gallery up to and through February 6. The director of the museum, Mrs. Osias Dodge, has offered to provide guides for any group of women who may care to make an appointment to be shown about the collection. Mrs. Dodge may be reached at her own telephone at Norwich Town until 9 o'clock each morning. The exhibit is open from 10 to 5 on week days.

WHITE CROSS COUNCIL CLASS IN THIRD DEGREE

The White Cross council, No. 13, Knights of Columbus, initiated a large class of candidates in the third degree Sunday afternoon in St. Mary's Memorial church hall. State Deputy William Mulligan, State Secretary J. M. Phillips and former State Advocate Jerome Collins were present and spoke briefly. District Deputies David Derosier of North Grosvenordale, George McKenna of Mystic and Edward G. McKay of Norwich assisted in the exemplification. The meeting was largely attended by members of councils from all parts of the state.

After the degree, refreshments were served to the class and visiting brothers at the Knights of Columbus home. Thomas J. Driscoll was chairman of the reception committee.

SILENT DRAMA BY BUSINESS WOMEN'S CLUB

Silent drama with a vengeance was witnessed Monday night at the regular monthly meeting of the Business and Professional Women's club, which was held at the Wauregan hotel. The production, "And the Light Went Out," which was enacted entirely by members of the club, is said to have been one of the most effective amateur performances ever introduced on local stages.

From the first howl of the wind to the last flicker of the flame, the audience of 80 or more members and guests sat spellbound. The part of Raymond Greyson, the hero, faced with insurmountable difficulties, was most laudably executed, and the listeners were torn with anguish at the sufferings of the heroine, Evelyn De-Vere. Burning hatred seared the house at the dastardly actions of the villian, Herbert Vanderslice, while the calm and dignity of Mrs. De Vere was received with deepest admiration.

The play was preceded by a dinner and a short business meeting. Plans for observing business and professional women's week were inaugurated and announcement was made that the city gas and electrical department would entertain the club at the next regular meeting.

Later in the evening the members retired to the Dutch room, where they played bridge.

International Silver's Good Year

International Silver company, one of whose factories is in this city, in 1929 completed the best year in its history. Net income, after all charges, is likely to be between $16 and $18.50 a share on the 91,200 shares of $100 par common stock outstanding, after deductions for preferred dividends, according to a Wall street financial paper. This would compare with $13.84 a share in 1928 and $15.74 a share in 1927 (on present share basis), the previous record.

Silver's operations in the first nine months of last year resulted in net income of $1,098,972, after all charges, a gain of 48 per cent over the $767,892 reported in the similar period of 1928. On common stock the nine months' net last year was equal to $8.58 a share as compared with $4.94 in 1928.

PROSPECT STREET MAN PASSES FLYING TEST

James C. Adams of 122 Prospect street, who has been taking flying lessons at Hartford, passed his test last week for the state private flying license. He will continue his training until his name is recorded among the transport pilot records of the department of commerce at Washington. He has a wife and four small children who have the same enthusiasm for aviation which he has shown. His oldest child, a boy of seven, is continually teasing to be taken for a cloud scamper, Mr. Adams said, and the others are just as insistent that "Papa" carry them aloft that they may see what their home looks like from a bird's eye view. Mr. Adams, who is now a lumberman started flying last September. He soloed after ten actual flying days.

WIFE, REPUTED WEALTHY, BRINGS NON-SUPPORT CHARGE

Zazes Costulis, 40, who has been in the candy business in this city, was arrested here Monday afternoon by Officer Clifford Crary for the Hartford police on a non-support charge made by Mrs. Costulis, who is in Hartford. He was taken to that city where he will be presented in court.

Before he left here with the Hartford officer, Costulis stated that his wife was worth $70,000. The marriage of the couple took place in this city during the past summer and their honeymoon was taken by automobile in a trip to Canada and through New England, with a nephew of Mrs. Costulis as chauffeur. At that time Costulis who is a Greek, was credited by his friends with having married a wealthy widow of Turkish nationality, who had been conducting a store in Hartford.

PRIMO DE RIVERA RESIGNS AS THE DICTATOR OF SPAIN

Resignation of Cabinet Followed a Day of Rumors and Reports—Announcement Made Last Night After Premier De Rivera Had Departed From the Palace—King Alfonso Called General Berenguer to the Palace and Instructed Him to Form New Ministry

MADRID, Jan. 28—(AP)—Premier Primo de Rivera, dictator since 1923, resigned tonight and General Damaso Berenguer, long his arch enemy, was charged by King Alfonso to form a new ministry.

The downfall of the brilliant military officer and politician who had controlled Spain with an iron hand for more than six years had appeared imminent all day but it was not until after a cabinet session in the evening that the premier drove to the royal palace and presented the resignations of himself and cabinet.

Lieutenant General Don Miguel Primo de Rivera y Orbaneja, Marquis de Estella, to give him his full name and title, distinguished himself in the campaigns against Moroccan natives which for some years had been draining the national treasury, exhausting the man power and threatening to bring about a collapse of the nation.

His success followed the defeat and disgrace of the man who now succeeds him as head of the government. General Berenguer was high commissioner in Morocco in 1921 and 1922. He resigned in July, 1922, and in the following June the senate, of which he was a member, voted to impeach him on the ground that he was responsible for a severe defeat in Morocco. He was convicted, removed from the active list, and sentenced to six months imprisonment. The sentence was commuted however.

In 1926, King Alfonso showed his confidence in General Berenguer by appointing him chief of his household. The appointment was commented on at the time as indicating a breach between the soverign and Primo de Rivera for the mutual dislike between the two generals had never been concealed.

Although the actual resignation of the cabinet came suddenly it had been presaged by the events of the past few months. Primo de Rivera himself had indicated on several occasions that he expected to relinquish control of the government in 1930. His chief concern, he stated, was to provide first for a worthy successor and to pave the way for a gradual restoration of constitutional privileges to the citizenry.

Although no armed movement had been begun since the abortive artillery revolt about a year ago, there had been repeated rumors recently of plans in the making to overthrow the dictatorship. Newspapermen approached the premier during the early hours of Sunday seeking confirmation of these reports. The premier denied them but, apparently on the spur of the moment, announced that he would make continuance of his rule dependent upon the will of the chiefs of the army and navy. They had returned no public answer before the resignation today.

Primo de Rivera swept into power in September, 1923, with the support particularly of the infantry divisions of the army. A royal decree appointed him chief of the government and president of a military directory. On December 3, 1925 the military directory was superseded by a civil government which continued under the presidency of Primo de Rivera.

Last New Year's Primo de Rivera had summed up for the Associated Press what he believed to be the accomplishments of his regime. He pointed out the steps taken to rid the country of supernumerary office holders and to stabilize the currency. He emphasized the attempts being made to extend Spanish markets particularly in the new world and the efforts to build up a great Spanish merchant marine.

The government efforts to stabilize the peseta have not met with any great degree of success. Only last week the minister of finance resigned because his program had failed to avert a severe slump in the foreign exchange.

REP. SCHAFER ATTACKS THE INDUSTRIAL ALCOHOL TRUSTS

WASHINGTON, Jan. 28—(AP)—An attack on "industrial alcohol trusts" and chain stores was made in the house today by Representative Schafer, republican, Wisconsin.

He was supporting an amendment proposed by Representative Hull, republican, Wisconsin, to the department of justice supply bill to increase from $203,000 to $700,000 the funds for the prosecution of anti-trust law violations, which was defeated.

Schafer declared that there were certain widespread chain stores throttling the individual storekeepers.

"Great big monopolies are being permitted to control certain business," he said. "The government has permitted an industrial alcohol trust monopoly to form under the prohibition laws. The biggest evil is the growth of the corn sugar business, the representatives of which, by propaganda, have opposed a tarif on blackstrap molasses."

Schafer said the congress gave plenty of money for enforcement of the prohibition law against the "little fellows," but permitted the "big fellows to get away."

The amendment also was supported by Representative Pittenger, republican, Minnesota. He declared the amount carried in the bill was inadequate, contending that the justice department needed the funds in order to enforce the Sherman anti-trust laws.

YOUTH BURNED TO DEATH WHEN AIRPLANE CRASHED

PATTERSON, N. J., Jan. 28.—(AP)—Christopher Adams, 18, of 437 Van Dyke avenue, Haledon, was burned to death late today in his plane which crashed in landing on the Murchio field, Preakness, four miles west of Paterson. His companion, George Pruden, 20, of North Haledon, the pilot, was thrown clear of the plane when it crashed. He was not seriously injured.

The plane was making a landing on poor ground. One wing struck a hollow, the plane pitched over and the gasoline tank exploded.

OBITUARY

Col. Isaac M. Ullman

NEW HAVEN, Jan. 28—(AP)—An outstanding figure in the political, business and civic life of New Haven, passed from the sphere of human activity today in the death of Col. Isaac M. Ullman. An attack of angina pectoris which seized him about 1 a. m. brought death about 30 minutes later in his apartment in Hotel Taft, where he had made his home for two years or more, since giving up his residence in Whitney avenue, in which he and his wife had lived many years.

Col. Ullman will be buried from Temple Mishkan Israel in Orange street, Thursday afternoon at 2 o'clock. Today tributes from intimate and lifelong friends in every walk of life flowed in from every side, from far and near, while many spoke of more tangible expressions to perpetuate the memory of one who had given so freely of his time and his strength and resources to his native city. The surviving immediate family are his daughter, Mrs. Fred S. Wetzler, of this city, and a brother, Joseph, who shared with him in conducting a business enterprise.

Col. Ullman was for many years a member of the republican state central committee and he rarely ever took a position of supporting the state chairman, Mr. Rorabeck, because of his pronounced opposition to the latter's original selection as chairman.

His activities raised him a wide circle of friends, among whom was former President William H. Taft. He is credited with sponsoring the political careers of Rollin S. Woodruff, former governor, and U. S. Senator Hiram Bingham.

His title of colonel came to him by appointment to the staffs of Gov. Woodruff and Gov. George E. Lounsbury.

He was born in New Haven, August 29, 1868.

LONG TROUSERS FOR WOMEN RATHER THAN LONG SKIRTS

PARIS, Jan. 28—(AP)—Long trousers rather than long skirts appear to be occupying the minds of important dressmakers who showed summer styles for the first time today.

Unprecedented crowds of excited buyers and style writers filled the salons for the first peek of the couturiers' answer to the organized opposition of American women to the long skirts and general back-to-bondage styles of the winter.

The style makers have proceeded to add an inch or so to skirts here and there, pull in waist lines generally and tidy up their work, already well started, of creating a new outline for Eve.

The style makers' big stick, however, is the creation of many varieties of trouser costumes which are labled pajamas for the beach, for sun bathing, for the interior, for the studio, and even for dinner. It appeared as though they intended to lead modern women back to long skirts for daytime wear by irresistible trousers which are as long and wide as evening skirts but neater and snappier. Even the old fashioned men among the buyers who were supporting the "old fashioned" girl with her short hair and skirt were enthusiastic about the new trousers.

FIVE YEARS' PROBATION ON GRAND THEFT CHARGES

LOS ANGELES, Jan. 28—(AP)—In a stirring court scene in which creditors of Mrs. Florine Walz Williams, widow of the actor, Earl Williams, were rebuked by the bench with an allusion to Shakespeare's "Shylock" seeking a "pound of flesh", Mrs. Williams today was granted five years' probation on grand theft charges and permitted to return to New York.

The court's censure followed an unsuccessful effort by Superior Judge Walton J. Wood to institute informal proceedings for an amicable settlement of claims against the defendant.

In his decision, Judge Wood permitted Mrs. Williams to return to New York, where she was arrested and brought here for trial on charges that she obtained a loan on property which she represented was free of incumbrances. In the midst of her trial several weeks ago she pleaded guilty and asked for probation.

TWO WOMEN STILL LOVE SAMUEL G. HUTCHINSON

LOS ANGELES, Jan. 28—(AP)—Two women, the wife and the woman she is suing for $300,000 for alleged alienation of affections of her husband, testified in superior court today that they still loved Samuel G. Hutchinson, millionaire Chicago film distributor, regardless of the events of the past 20 years.

Mrs. Mattie Dean Hutchinson, Chicago society leader, in tears, said: "Yes, I love him. I still love my husband."

PENNSYLVANIA FEARS LOSS OF COAL MARKET

WASHINGTON, Jan. 28. — (AP) — Fearing that Canada might capture the New England coal market, Pennsylvania industrial and transportation interests have protested against the recent action of the senate in repealing the countervailing clause of the tariff law under which this country imposes a duty on coal from those countries taxing American coal exports.

MIDDLETOWN CHURCH DAMAGED $90,000 BY FIRE

MIDDLETOWN, Jan. 28—(AP)—The First Methodist Episcopal church was extensively damaged today by fire originating under the organ in the main auditorium. Firemen succeeded in saving the chapel and the parsonage adjoining the church. Frederick L. Phelps, a member of the official board, estimated the damage at between $90,000 to $100,000.

While the cause of the fire had not been definitely determined tonight, John D. Hoar, superintendent of alarms, said it had probably resulted from a furnace located in the basement just underneath the organ.

The church, which was of brick construction, was erected 45 years ago to replace one destroyed by fire in 1893. The Rev. Marion J. Creeger is pastor of the church.

DRY CANDIDATE DEFEATED "DRIPPING WET" OPPONENT

SPRINGFIELD, Mass., Jan. 28—(AP)—Former State Representative Frederick D. Griggs won the republican nomination in the second congressional district special primary today, defeating his "dripping wet" opponent, Frank C. Hinckley. In a democratic primary in which all three candidates were regarded as "wet," William J. Granfield, attorney, was nominated over John Hall and James H. Mulcare, attorney.

The results for the district were: Republican primary, Griggs, 12,712; Hinckley, 3,987; a majority for Griggs of 8,726. Democratic, Granfield, 5,819; Hall, 402; Mulcare, 1,606; plurality for Granfield, 3,213.

SENATE KILLS INCREASE IN TARIFF ON VEGETABLES

WASHINGTON, Jan. 28—(AP)—By a vote of 49 to 26, the senate today turned down the first of what had been planned as a series of amendments to the tariff bill to raise import levies on all vegetable, animal and fish oils and fats to a minimum of 45 per cent ad valorem.

This was the increase favored by the farm organizations to protect American farmers from foreign importations, but the test vote today discouraged any further attempts to obtain higher protection than that accorded in the pending bill.

LANCASTER, Pa., Jan. 28.—(AP)—On the basis of unofficial returns, J. Roand Kinzer, republican, Lancaster city lawyer, was chosen today to succeed the late W. W. Griest as Lancaster county's representative in congress.

With but eight scattered precincts in the county to report, Kinzer was leading his democratic opponent, George W. Hensel, Jr., by more than 2 to 1. The unofficial vote in 131 of the county's 139 election precincts was: Kinzer, 15,081; Hensel, 7,234.

CONTINUING QUEST FOR EIELSON AND BORLAND

NOME, Alaska, Jan. 28.—(AP)— Although word of the finding of the bodies of Carl Ben Eielson, noted Arctic aviator, and Earl Borland, his mechanic, in their supposed tomb of ice and snow on the Siberian Tundra still was lacking here today, a movement was begun to accord the fliers a final tribute if the searchers sent out by air and land from North Cape, Siberia, and Teller, Alaska, are successful in their quest.

Chicago Paying Off Employes In Warrants

Method Resorted to Because of 20 Month Period Without Tax Collections.

CHICAGO, Jan. 28—(AP)—Tonight was a sort of Christmas eve to 4,000 Cook county public servants, who together with city employes have been unpaid for weeks because of empty county [illegible] city treasuries.

Tomorrow the county treasure[illegible] has not signed a pay check [illegible] time will don his Santa Claus [illegible] and pass out tax anticipation [illegible] in lieu of the salary checks [illegible] by the paymaster since the first of the year.

The employes—glad enough to receive some acknowledgment of their services to the impecunious county—remained somewhat at sea as to the value of the warrants. Neither county, city nor school board can pay in cash because of a twenty-month hiatus without tax collections and the county board has determined to try the warrant method.

"I have made inquiries in my neighborhood," said one worker in the sheriff's office, "and find that the chain stores will not accept the warrants, while the local banks demand a 7 per cent discount."

But William J. Graham, county comptroller, was more sanguine: "There can be no question of their acceptability," he said. "If the banks won't take these warrants, gilt-edged securities, what will they take?" He said the downtown department stores had indicated the warrants, equivalent to first liens on the taxes collected in 1931, will be redeemed at par.

STATE TROOPERS RAIDED STOCK BROKERAGE OFFICE

NEW YORK, Jan. 28—(AP)—On complaint of P. H. Troutman, president of the Union Trust company, of Denver, Colo., state troopers today raided the stock brokerage office of Gilbert R. Burrell in Fifth avenue.

Mr. Troutman charged that Burrell had written stockholders of the Union Deposit & Savings company, of Denver, a subsidiary of the Union Trust company, suggesting that he would give them better securities in exchange for Union Deposit & Savings company certificates. Mr. Troutman said he learned of the letters from Clarence P. Sadd, of Hartford, Conn., who wrote asking his advice about the proposal. Mr. Troutman charged that his name had been forged to the letter sent Mr. Sadd on Burrell's letterhead.

Burrell was not in his office at the time of the raid and officers began a search for him.

WATER FRONT RACKETEER SHOT DEAD IN BROOKLYN

NEW YORK, Jan. 28.—(AP)—Charles "Rod" Conelly said by police to have been the successor of "Wild Bill" Lovett as head of the Brooklyn water front racketeers, was shot and killed today on a pier at the foot of Main street, Brooklyn.

Police said that Donnelly had been directing the work of 75 or 100 men at the pier, where he was a dock-loader boss, when a young man came to inform him that some men were waiting in an automobile to see him near a shack at the end of the pier. Soon afterward a worker at the pier found Donnelly dead, seated in a chair in the shack.

Donnelly had served a term in the Elmyra reformatory in his youth, police said, and had been arrested four or five times charged with complicity in homicides, but never had been convicted.

FILIPINOS BEING ROUGHLY TREATED IN SAN FRANCISCO

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 28.—(AP) — Anti-Filipino racial sentiment bobbed up today in San Francisco with the beating of three Filipino youths — Amelio Bautista, Sandos Bautista and Leon Deasis—before a police riot squad could rescue them.

Two other Filipinos, Jose Francisco and Reseguno Peraita, were attacked last night while walking on a downtown street with two white girls, who disappeared during the melee. Francisco told the police he recently married one of the girls.

The three Filipinos beaten today said they were at work in front of an apartment house when two taxicabs drove up.

"Are you Filipinos or Mexicans?" they said the cab drivers demanded.

"We're Filipinos," one of them answered, and the fight started.

FOUR MEN CONVICTED OF MURDER IN NEWARK

NEWARK, N. J., Jan. 28.—(AP)—Frank McBrien, "The Jersey Kid," who shot and killed George B. Lee, a motor bus garage cashier in a holdup Oct. 15, 1928, and three companions in the slaying and robbery, were convicted of murder in the first degree today in court of oyer and terminer. The other defendants were Victor Giampietro, Joseph Rado and Louis "Lefty" Malangn.

McBrien, and his companions were sentenced by Judge Dallas Flannagan to die in the electric chair March 9.

"Can't you make it any quicker?" asked McBrien as Judge Flannagan pronounced sentence.

The other three, smilled but said nothing when they heard their fate.

BOSTON, Jan. 28.—(AP)—The erection of a $1,500,000 structure on an island in the Charles river basin and a $100,000 tower and beacon on the summit of Mount Greylock in Berkshire county, as a memorial to men and women of Massachusetts who served in the World war, was recommended to the legislature today by the special war memorial commission appointed by Gov. Frank G. Allen.

Dry Act Controversy Far From Speakeasy

Proponents and Opponents of the Volstead Act Are Shouting Their Views.

W[illegible]TON, Jan. 28—(AP)—Congr[illegible] investigation of prohibition [illegible]nt was being discussed as a [illegible]ty at the capitol tonight at the [illegible] one of the wordiest free-for-alls [illegible] the persisting wet and dry controversy.

The day saw Attorney General Mitchell and Chairman Wickersham, of the law enforcement commission, engaged with both proponents and opponents of the Volstead act in congress—with all holding their own at nightfall.

The attorney general denied a statement by Senator Borah of Idaho, an outstanding dry critic of enforcement conditions, that the justice department had investigated the record of Prohibition Administrator Herbert, of the Montana-Idaho district. He also denied that any justice agents had been spying on Borah's office.

The Idaho republican replied that some employe of the government had investigated Herbert and had submitted the report on the dry administrator to Prohibition Commissioner Doran. He reiterated that his informant had been removed from the city after calling upon the senator at his office.

"We ought to find out all the facts," Borah declared. "We will do well to go into the whole question, when the prohibition bills come before the judiciary committee."

His statement was regarded by some as forecasting an inquiry into the prohibition unit. He is a member of the senate judiciary committee, which considers prohibition legislation.

Chairman Wickersham notified Representative Dyer, republican, Missouri, a wet, that the question of allowing 2.75 per cent beer was a legislative problem. His word was in answer to a request from Dyer for a statement on the feasibility of the beer proposition.

The Missourian rejoined that he would ask the house judiciary committee to invite members of the law enforcement commission to appear and state whether "in their opinion, such a change in the prohibition enforcement act would aid the president to better enforce the prohibition law."

While these two major encounters were in progress, house wets and drys indulged in a round of words on the floor over the pronouncement by the attorney general that he would insist upon government officers who believed in and practiced prohibition.

Representative Celler, democrat, New York, described this position as a "silly ban and restriction," saying it would have barred such men as Woodrow Wilson, Warren G. Harding, Alfred E. Smith and Newton D. Baker from government service.

Representative Oliver, democrat, Alabama, replied that "in writing that letter, Mr. Mitchell has rendered a distinct service to the American people." He added that the attorney general "seeks only to provide decent sobriety on the part of those who hold commissions in that department."

$500 REWARD OFFERED FOR CONVICTION OF VANDALS

STAFFORD SPRINGS, Jan. 28.—(AP)—The Rhode Island Worsted Co. today authorized a reward of $500 to the person or persons furnishing information leading to the arrest and conviction of the vandals who broke into the factory over the week end and did damage estimated at $15,000 to $20,000.

Officials of the company today announced that warps on 40 automatic looms in the weaving room had been slashed by the vandals, who are believed to have entered the plant some time between Sunday night and Monday morning.

A watchman is employed in the plant to make hourly inspections of the rooms. The room entered by the vandals is located on the ground floor.

SINGLE ROPE SNAPPED DURING RESCUE WORK

BORDEAUX, France, Jan. 28.—(AP)—The single rope which meant rescue to 17 members of the crew of the British freighter, Knebworth, snapped tonight after eight others had been safely brought ashore from the wreck.

Helplessly the rescue workers on shore watched the sailors clinging to the rigging while the seas broke over them. It was feared that it was impossible that they could survive until morning. The ship had broken in two after striking a reef near Biarritz. Those rescued by means of the breeches buoy included two women.

LONDON NAVAL CONFERENCE IS NEARING REAL BUSINESS

Franco-Italian Differences Are to Be Thoroughly Aired at Plenary Session Tomorrow—78 Newspaper Men Will Be in Attendance—Three Items Will Feature the Program, Brought Forward By France, Great Britain and Italy.

LONDON, Jan. 28—(AP)—Moving slowly but surely the five power naval conference tonight appeared to be nearing the real business of naval disarmament.

After the next plenary session, at St. James' palace, on Thursday, Secretary of State Stimson hopes to be able to call into action against the definite problems of the conference the American delegation's shock troops of experts and advisors, who have been marking time since the sessions began last Tuesday.

Seventy-eight newspapermen of all nations, including 12 Americans, will file into Queen Anne's drawing room for the meeting, where the Franco-Italian differences will be thoroughly aired in the open.

Three items will feature the program, brought forward by France, Great Britain and Italy.

By the adoption of the alphabetical order of presentation, which gives precedence to the country proposing a subject according to the first letter of its name, France will lead the list and will have an opportunity of formally laying before the conference her plan for limiting fleets by the global, or total tonnage, system.

Great Britain, who favors another means will then outline her theory of limitation by categories of ships, and lastly, Italy will present her argument for the establishment of fleet ratios among the nations as a necessary preliminary to disarmament.

With Premier Tardieu and Foreign Minister Grandi discusing their differences on the conference floor, there is hope for more progress than during the past week.

But if the Franco-Italian wrangling continues, a convenient committee that will be established on Thursday can take it over and put it outside the palace to cool while the conference itself gets on with cruisers, battleships, or whatever else is pushed forward on the agenda.

This committee is a steering committee of the five delegation chiefs and one other member from each, and will bring the different subjects to the agenda for conference discussion as the delegates ask for them.

If the alphabetical order of presentation continues in effect, the United States, ranking as America, will be able to bring the cruiser problem into the negotiations at any time that Secretary Stimson and his colleagues find suitable.

This is the part of the work that particularly interests the Americans and the Japanese, who have stood a little to one side during the discussion of Franco-Italian parity because it is a peculiarly European problem.

The realities of disarmament seemed to be nearer tonight as Secretary Stimson in a speech broadcast to America sketched the hopes of the conference. Mr. Stimson defined these as elimination of competition in the building of cruisers and destroyers the abolition or rigid limitation of submarines, and drastic saving on battleship expenditures.

CARAWAY DENIED THAT HE HAD RECEIVED $500

WASHINGTON, Jan. 28. — (AP) — Senator Caraway, of Arkansas, jumped up at the senate lobby committee hearing today to denounce as "an absolutely outrageous falsehood" a statement that he had received $500 for addressing an importers' organization.

Testimony by Arthur L. Faubel, secretary of the American Tariff league, aroused the committee chairman to his vehemence. Apparently angered, the witness retorted to the Arkansas democrat that he took exception to his remark.

"I don't care whether you take exception or not," Caraway shot back.

Senator Walsh, democrat, Montana, entered the dispute with a statement that Faubel had "no occasion to take exception."

"The rebuke given you by the chairman was richly deserved," he continued.

The marchers were orderly enough, though some 400 policemen had been placed in readiness. Occasionally there would be a banner decrying Katovis' "murder" or condemning imperialism. And now and then the marchers would sing.

FAMILIES ISOLATED BY FLOODS IN S. W. INDIANA

EVANSVILLE, Ind., Jan. 28.—(AP)—Ice jams continued to withhold from the outside world today the true condition of families isolated by flood waters at Point township, Fox Island, Poplar Ridge and other lowland centers in Posey county, southwestern Indiana.

Varied conclusions were reached, including one that death had laid a heavy hand on the district. Others, however, were of a more optimistic nature. National guard aviators and persons on the ground bent on rescue work, returned to their headquarters today convinced that only a break in the ice jams, permitting ingress by boat, will definitely determine the real situation.

Such a break, they declared, might be a matter of days, for the jam at the mouth of the Little Wabash river was declared tonight by Major R. F. Taylor of the 113th Observation squadron, Indiana National guard, to be a little worse than it was 24 hours earlier.

Major Taylor reported, however, that relief work by four airplanes was successfully carried out over a wide area today.

The girls, Pauline Burtner, 16, and Margaret Snyder, 15, were alleged to have been kidnaped at the seashore resort last October by leaders of a band there.

ANNOUNCES OPENING OF NEW OPTICAL DEPARTMENT

(Special to The Bulletin)

WILLIMANTIC, Jan. 28.—Ralph U. Wolmer, successor to the firm of Tracy & Wolmer, jewelers, today announced the opening on Feb. 3 of a new optical department at his establishment at 688 Main street. This new department, which embraces the most modern methods of optical testing and refracting, is generally accepted as filling a long-felt need for improved optometry services available in this section of the state.

In order to create the new department, Mr. Wolmer has caused a complete remodeling of the store, effecting drastic changes that not only provide ample room for the optical service but greatly enhance the beauty of the fine old jewelry establishment.

After a careful search of the field, Mr. Wolmer succeeded in engaging the services of Dr. W. J. Bergeron, Opt., who will be in charge of the new department and who comes here with the highest recommendations. Dr. Bergeron benefits from 20 years of experience in optometry and successfully passed both the Massachusetts and Connecticut examinations. Personally he is a man of high character and possessed of good social contacts. He was formerly secretary to the Belgium consul at Florida and speaks French and English fluently.

In renovating the store for the reception of this new service, a rearrangement of the beautiful mahogany cases has been made. Mr. Wolmer's office has been transferred from the front to a rear position, allowing an attractive display and lighting effect to be used near the store entrance.

For the optical department proper a sufficiently large waiting room, finished in charming Philippine mahogany, has been constructed and appropriately furnished. The refracting room has been equipped with the very latest apparatus for testing and refracting. Oculists' prescriptions will be filled in this department and lenses will be made in the shop. Mr. Wolmer has spared nothing in giving the public the best available equipment and knowledge in optical service and his provisions to this end are expected to meet with wide approval throughout eastern Connecticut.

OVER 5,000 PEOPLE INSPECT THREAD CITY MODEL HOME

(Special to The Bulletin)

WILLIMANTIC, Jan. 28.—Despite the fact that the advertised public inspection of Willimantic's model home concluded Sunday evening, a number of visitors continue to request admittance. That the opening of the home created wide interest through eastern Connecticut is indicated in the fact that over 5,000 people, many of them from out of town, including Norwich, New London, Danielson and Putnam, were in attendance during the nine days of the inspection. The several exhibitors were pleased to note that favorable comments of the furnishings they had placed in the model home were followed up in many instances by inquiries as to prices, which resulted in gratifying sales in a number of these cases.

The whole-hearted cooperation of the various women's organizations of the city in furnishing hostesses for each day of the inspection served materially in making the exhibit a success. The chamber of commerce, which sponsored the project of a model home, feels that dual objectives have been accomplished: Creating interest in home-ownership and giving proof of the willingness of local agencies to fully cooperate in a civic movement.

Your doctor will tell you ninety per cent of all sickness comes from inactive bowels and liver.

NEW TELEPHONE EXCHANGE INSPECTED BY MANY CALLERS

The Southern New England Telephone Co. kept open house at its new exchange building at 123 High street, Stafford Springs, Tuesday afternoon and evening. An invitation had been issued to the public to call and inspect the new home and there was a general response. It was the first visit to a telephone exchange of the majority of the visitors and many of them marveled at the simplicity and ease with which the operators put through the calls. Guides conducted the visitors through the buildings. A tour was also made through the battery room and an explanation was given of the work done by the test men and repairers and other interesting features were shown to the visitors. The new telephone system is of the most advanced type and although somewhat smaller than systems in larger communities it embraces all the features of a modern telephone office and will supply adequate and dependable service for many years. The program at the exchange Tuesday afternoon and evening was in charge of Manager J. C. Frazier. There are now over 700 telephones in the Stafford district.

47 Years' Practice Taught Dr. Caldwell

Many things about Men and Women

DR. CALDWELL loved people. He studied the habits of his patients and tried to improve their ways of living. His observations over a long period of time convinced him many people were ruining their health by a careless choice of laxatives. Then he determined to write a prescription which would get at the cause of constipation and correct it quickly and safely.

How successful his efforts were is best shown by the fact that the prescription he wrote back in 1885 has become the world's most popular laxative! He prescribed a mixture of herbs and other pure ingredients now known as Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, in thousands of cases where bad breath, coated tongue, gas, headaches, biliousness, and lack of appetite, or energy showed him that the bowels of men, women or children were sluggish. It proved successful in the most obstinate cases. So men liked it. Old folks liked it because it never gripes. Children liked its pleasant taste. And everybody is pleased with the gentle way it accomplishes its purpose.

By 1888, the demand for this laxative was so great that the doctor permitted it to be bottled and sold by drugstores. Today you can obtain Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin from any drugstore in the world.

DANIELSON

DAMAGE SUIT SETTLED FOR AUTOMOBILE COLLISION

(Special to The Bulletin)

DANIELSON, Jan. 28—James Moran, a resident of Brooklyn and in the office organization of Powdrell and Alexander, today received settlement in the way of a sizeable check from the Ward Baking company for damages claimed as the result of an accident in which his car figured on the West Side nearly four years ago, on May 18, 1926.

After trial of the suit growing out of the accident in the superior court for Windham county the verdict was in Mr. Moran's favor, and he was awarded damages of $179. Counsel for the baking company appealed from this judgment to the supreme court of errors of Connecticut, and argument of the matter was assigned for the term opening the first Tuesday of the present month. Just prior to the time for a hearing, the baking company withdrew its appeal and settlement of the case with Mr. Moran was made today. It so happens that the amount Mr. Moran received is several times larger than the amount for which settlement originally could have been made, and he also is compensated for his costs. The counsel for the baking company appealed on several grounds, but chiefly on the one that the operator of the Ward Baking company truck with which Mr. Moran's car was in collision was an independent contractor and that the company was not responsible for his doings.

Mr. Moran contended in the action that the accident happened because William H. Fielding of Providence, the operator of the baking company truck that figured in the accident, started driving the truck, parked on the left hand side of the highway on the West Side, into Elm street without giving a proper signal. The truck was overturned in the crash, but there were no personal injuries of any consequence.

Votes Extra Cash Dividend

[illegible] stockholders of Powdrell and Alexander have learned that the directors of the organization, manufacturers of window curtains and employing upwards of 1,600 operatives in this town, have voted an extra cash dividend of 37 1-2 cents a share on the common stock, in addition to the regular quarterly dividend of 37 1-2 cents a share on the common stock, and $1.75 a share on the preferred. The extra and regular common stock dividends will be paid Feb. 15, to stock of record Feb. 1, while the preferred stockholders will be paid April 1, to stock of record March 15.

Conversations with officials interested in the success of Danielson's home-building campaign appeared today to develop the fact that there is in some quarters a none too clear understanding of just how a person interested in having one of the homes to be built should go about arranging to get it. The matter is all very simple. The Building and Loan association requires that prospective home owners have a lot and some part of the money to meet the cost of the home they intend to build. Having these requirements, they purchase the necessary number of shares to obtain the remainder of the money to build the house and pay for the shares at the rate of $1 per month per share until completion of payments, a matter of just a little more than 12 years. After all, the arrangement is much the same as paying rent, with the difference that the holder of building and loan shares will have a home when they come to maturity, instead of a nice collection of receipted rent bills. Full details relative to the matter may be obtained from any official of the Building and Loan association. It is possible under the arrangement to have a very modest and comparatively inexpensive home, or a more elaborate one, as the prospective owner desires.

Jointly observing the fifth Thursday of the month, as is their custom, members of the Knights of Pythias and members of the Pythian Sisters are to meet this week in American Legion hall for a social evening. A number of speakers will be heard at the morning and afternoon sessions. Arrangements have been made for a lunch period.

One of the prettiest weddings of the season will take place at St. James' church Wednesday morning at 9 o'clock when Miss Jeanette Gareau becomes the bride of Daniel Caffery of Attawaugan. Rumors persist relative to the activities of chicken thieves throughout the countryside. Growth of the poultry industry in eastern Windham county and the fact the flocks of 1,000 birds or more are not uncommon may be one reason for preying on the poultry yards. Losses of this nature should be promptly reported to state officers. Conviction of poultry thieving may bring a heavy prison sentence, for this offense is rated a serious one under the statutes of Connecticut.

It is an interesting fact that borough officers are not being pestered to any great extent this winter by rounders seeking a night's lodging. The policy, established several years ago, by Chief John McFarland of having the borough refuse to play host to such gentry evidently has become known to the majority of the fraternity, and as a general rule they give this community a wide berth. The rule is rigidly enforced.

Upwards of 600 shares of the new series of the Danielson Building and Loan association were reported as having been subscribed today out of the 5,000 that it is the goal of the workers to sell. In addition to these shares many unreported shares are known to have been subscribed.

State Officer Emil Castagna of the Stafford barracks, formerly located at the Danielson barracks, is visiting with friends in town for a few days.

Somewhat past the mid-winter mark, as many reckon the winter season, the town of Killingly has been fortunate in relief for snow removal cost, an item that in some winters of the past has amounted to several thousand dollars.

It is persistently talked about that only a few more weeks will elapse before Killingly will be called upon to make a decision as to how it will go about making a general revaluation of the property of the town. The desire is to obtain an equitable revaluation without the expenditure of too great an amount of money, and there are well informed people who hold that this can be done.

One of the best international radio broadcasts heard here to date was that clearly bring the voice of Secretary Henry L. Stimson of the American naval parley delegation to Danielson listeners during the lunch hour today. The reception was as fine as the average good reception from nearby stations.

PUTNAM

CHANGES IN TRAFFIC LAWS EXPECTED SOON

(Special to The Bulletin)

PUTNAM, Jan. 28.—If plans now being discussed in municipal circles materialize, the city's code of traffic ordinances which in weeks past have served as instigators of heated controversy, will be thoroughly rejuvenated in such a manner that all concerned will be benefited by the proposed change. The introduction of one-hour parking on Main street and other important thoroughfares in the shopping district is inevitable. Its birth is expected early in the spring months. One hour parking in all probability will be accompanied by a new ordinance providing for a motor coach terminal in the east side of the city, near the municipal parking grounds on South Main street. If this change is brought about the majority of motor bus lines improvising Union square for a terminal and incidentally creating numerous traffic jams in this spot will complete their runs at the proposed bus center on South Main street, opposite the square.

The plan is widely discussed in official circles. Police are in favor of the change and their opinion is being upheld by city fire officials who realize the danger of a coach terminal so near the fire station. At the January meeting of the common council a petition was presented by a number of merchants in the business center, requesting that the council take steps towards providing for the 60-minute parking in the main streets, at which time first mention was made of the change of the motor coach terminal.

With the large stock of products disposed of in less than a fortnight after Mrs. Walter J. Bartlett, leading Putnam business woman, disclosed her intentions of retiring from the city's commercial life, the Main street store bearing her name is about to close its doors after 36 consecutive years in the city's business field. Bartlett, three years ago, made the announcement two weeks ago that the well known establishment would in a short time cease to exist.

NEW ENGLAND'S CHANCE

There isn't anything in which New England should be much more interested than New England. For the past few years a real force that has been bringing this to our attention is the New England council. Through that organization New England has been made to realize the importance of mass action and its several states have come to recognize its undeveloped possibilities.

The New England council has been doing much for the development of New England in many directions. It knows that the opportunities have by no means been exhausted and it comes forth with the advice that the way to help build up New England is to support its industries.

A word to the wise should be sufficient. New England, long since known as a manufacturing region, has been experiencing keen competition from other parts of the country. It has seen other sections grow rapidly and prosper. It is not ready to acknowledge that that means the passing of the prominence of New England industrially. It knows that there have been important industrial changes but the passing of certain old ones has opened the way for new and different ones. New England has grown and it will continue to grow. The point on which the council is bearing down is that New England must not fail to do something for itself whenever the opportunity presents itself.

It has long since been maintained that New England states can supply, if they will, a much larger share of agricultural products. Instead of importing such quantities of apples, pork, spring lamb, lumber and other things from points far away, on which huge transportation charges have to be paid, they can be produced near home. And if produced at home, they should find a ready home market.

Industrially New England is in a position to meet the requirements of its millions of people. This is one direction in which New England production can supply New England requirements. It is, therefore, no more than should be expected that New Englanders should see that their wants are filled by buying New England products. The aim of the New England council is well directed. With the proper amount of cooperation it should have fruitful results. There is a chance for the whole six states to get back of and make the most of this suggestion.

THE EIELSON SEARCH

Missing since last November, there was little to encourage the belief that Lieutenant Eielson and Earl Borland were alive in the desolate north, where they were by no means novices, and yet there could be no thought of failing to do everything possible to assist or rescue those who had made themselves so conspicuous by similar efforts in behalf of others.

From all indications at the point where their plane crashed, there was never a chance of extending aid. There was a violent crash with the throttle wide open that must have brought instant death to those involved. Even if the aviators had jumped there seems no probability that they survived.

From the snow that has fallen in that region it seems a bit surprising that the searchers were able to discover any trace at all of the plane, but they were searching a locality over which a trapper had declared he heard a plane about the time the missing aviators disappeared. This proved to be real information and now it remains to be seen whether the diggers can locate the spot where the fliers are buried beneath the blanket of snow and ice.

Lieutenant Eielson was one of the skillful pilots who had full confidence in his ability to meet difficult situations successfully. He was not daunted by hazards. He was ever ready to take chances for the sake of accomplishment or the extension of aid to others and it was on such a mission that the crash came.

It is inevitable that there will be hope maintained until it is established beyond any chance that Eielson and Borland are dead, though the fact that their emergency supplies in the crashed machine have not been disturbed, together with the other conditions, seems to preclude any possibility that they are alive. Such able and daring aviators will be seriously missed. Their loss to aviation is real, but they have made a mark for themselves which cannot be removed.

SAVING NAVAL EXPENDITURES

There cannot fail to be a good impression created by the British announcement to the effect that it has revised its naval construction programme, will not construct two warships and may go further in that direction.

With such a starter, the British have begun to play trumps and the effect upon the others cannot be otherwise than favorable. Limitation is the aim. Every warship that was planned but will not be built means a financial relief not only to country but, inferentially, to others. It means just so much less reason for construction by other nations.

When such a matter is brought to attention it means recalling the saving that has been effected as the result of the Washington agreement. It brings to mind the assertion that the United States, Great Britain and Japan would be able to save $1,000,000,000 if capital ship building is held up for another term. Each nation has its plans for development. It considers that it must build against the possibilities of developments in the other country's war machine, and when it builds and expands it likewise piles up the maintenance expense.

In every one of the countries the naval expenditures are heavy. They are considered necessary for protection. There must be provisions against what the other fellow might do, but with the excellent results obtained by the holiday that has prevailed, and the knowledge that each of the nations is relatively as strong as if all had insisted upon keeping up with the other, it is inevitable that a strong reason has been provided for keeping the good work going.

There isn't one of the nations but what can make excellent use of the money that would go into naval construction if nothing is done to limit such work. It can be employed in many directions and at the same time there would be removed one of the heavy burdens carried for a long period of years. The agreement desired at London will do much to aid the finances of all the countries during future years. It means one of those changes for the better which all should be more than anxious to secure and maintain.

MARKING THE ROUTES

Cities which fail to provide the necessary markers for main highway routes through them, especially the large cities, should realize that they are placing big handicaps upon themselves as well as upon the motoring public.

Every time they fail to acquaint the motorists who are seeking the most direct and least obstructed way across a city they are contributing to the traffic congestion and permitting drivers to muddle into situations from which they should be steered away.

An example of this failure to act is furnished at the present time by Philadelphia. That is a city which receives much through traffic and yet its officials insist that it cannot erect directional signs. Lack of funds is the excuse offered and yet it is not willing that automobile clubs should come to the relief of the situation and put up the signs. It objects to that because the clubs are desirous of having a line on the signs indicating that they were put up by them. The request, under the circumstances, seems to be only reasonable.

For the benefit of the large number of strangers who are seeking the bridge over the Delaware river, the bridge commission has gone to the expense of having markers placed at street corners to serve as a guide. That they are appreciated can be easily believed. They are doing for the bridge users the same as ought to be done for those seeking other routes across the city, and it seems not improbable that they will be the means of ultimately forcing the officials to come to the relief of this considerable number.

In the interest of better traffic conditions cities have long since recognized the importance of erecting signs to guide the strangers. It is a decided benefit to all concerned, and those who do much motoring have long since come to depend upon such assistance while city authorities have only to observe to note the advantage to the community.

THE RIGHT IDEA

Driving automobiles while drunk is regarded as sufficiently serious an offense to call for a much stiffer penalty than just being intoxicated. It may easily mean a fatality. The drunken driver is not only a menace to others but to himself.

But while this is recognized in the punishment of those who engage in such a practice, it is perfectly evident that others who have anything to do with the operating of vehicles, even though they are not automobiles, are likewise a menace to a greater or less degree.

This is brought to attention in the city of Pawtucket, where it is claimed that motormen driving an electric car have been intoxicated on at least two occasions, and the demand is that the law be so changed that those convicted of such offense may be penalized the same as drunken auto drivers.

The wrong place for a person who has been drinking is in the driving seat of an automobile or at the control lever of an electric car. In each instance he is in a position to endanger the lives of others, and there is certainly no reason for any favoritism to exist in these cases.

That there has been a failure to make the motorman's offense as serious as that of the auto driver has probably been due to the fact that there have been so few occasions for dealing with such conditions. The former has the advantage of not being obliged to guide his car, leaving that to the rails. His control of the situation depends upon the speed he makes and the street conditions which he respects. But unless he is in full command of himself he should never be tolerated on the front end of a trolley car, and the Pawtucket chief of police is fully justified in urging that he be given quite as harsh treatment when penalized as the auto driver.

DRESS BLUES

Not only was the dress old, but it was the wrong shade of blue, due to many cleanings. Moreover, it had two faded streaks down the back. Every time Nannette slipped it over her head and remembered the bored eyes of the other girls when they saw it on her slim form everlastingly, her cheeks burned.

Most of the other teachers by dint of never appearing twice in succession in the same gown achieved the semblance of a large wardrobe with only four or five frocks. And she owned one. Most of all, Nannette writhed mentally when it was necessary for her to enter the office of Lauren J. Kemlock, the man who had been new in the office of principal the first of the school year. It is entirely normal for a young and pretty girl to wish to be a pleasant sight in the eyes of a man as good-looking, as cheerful and as brilliant-minded as she has ever seen. He was destined to go far in his profession.

Nannette knew how the girls talked. One day she had overheard a remark made by red-headed little Joyce coming out of the library with another girl. "Something's wrong with a girl," Joyce had said, bittingly, "who shows so plainly that she doesn't care how she looks! That blue dress was packed in the ark. I'm sure!"

Nannette bit her lip and looked Joyce squarely in the eye as she passed. For an instant she saw red. "Never try to explain your personal affairs," had been one of Nannette's decisions with herself. "Outsiders won't understand and they really don't care—they're interested chiefly in their own affairs." That was why she had never mentioned that her small salary ran a flat, took care of an invalid mother and was finishing up the senior year at school of a younger brother. When she got through each month perhaps there was 65 cents or so left over for new clothes.

So for perhaps the fiftieth time this year Nannette stood before Lauren J. Kemlock, a slight, erect little figure, sternly looking over his left shoulder out through a window as he talked. Why look at a man whose smile makes one's heart turn over, if it is useless? If she were Joyce, in her third crisp new print silk frock and lizard pumps, she probably would be standing six paces nearer Lauren J., openly flirting with him.

But there was no reason that she could see for him to waste his eyesight on a girl in a dismally faded dress which would have put a damper on the exploits of a beauty such as Helen of Troy. So she stood even straighter and did not realize that the man in the principal's chair who was telling her what to do about little Johnnie Fitzgibbon had decided that what she made him think of was one of the blue irises in the pottery jar on the table behind her—an iris delicately blue with fuzzy gold surmounting it.

Why the dickens did she hate him so? She never willingly looked at him or proffered conversation, as did the other young teachers, gayly, daringly, fluttering about like a flock of the very children they were teaching. Often he had resolved to end their business conferences with something more personal, but his throat had stuck and she had sped out of the room on those absurdly small feet of hers, head high.

She was turning to go now and something in the line of her set mouth brought him to his feet. He did not know that she had thought he was staring disapprovingly at her gown when she had found him looking at her so intently.

"Miss Regall—Nannette!" Lauren J. Kemlock stammered. For the first time she turned her eyes full upon his. All he knew was that there was pain in their blue depths. Long stories may be told in one lengthy glance, understandings may be reached.

"Blue," he said, a trifle incoherently and huskily, "is my favorite color. I've been so afraid every day you'd wear something else, and you never should—on account of your eyes."

And he never knew why Nannette had gentle hysterics in the midst of her flooding joy. For she realized that Lauren J. Kemlock was one of the men who cared not whether one alternated six dresses or wore just the same old one, provided that he liked the color—and the girl in the dress.—Chicago News.

A Washington Bystander

By KIRKE L. SIMPSON
Associated Press Staff Writer

WASHINGTON, Jan. 28—The struggle among senate republicans over committee assignments shows not only how sharp is the cleavage within their ranks, but it also illustrates difficulties to be expected to arise with departure from the old fashioned two-party way of doing things.

Giving recognition and committee places to republicans with independent slants could easily upset procedure a lot.

Nor is that all. There are a good many permanent commissions set up by congress which are supposed to be largely bi-partisan in political complexions.

The president may appoint a majority from among men of his own political faith in order to weld that particular agency into an administration whole, more or less; but he must, usually by law, give the minority party ample representation.

In the past, presidents have selected these minority representatives with evident desire to pick men who in political philosophy were close to the border line.

Which Side?

If there are to be intra-party subdivisions in congress, however, how is that to be reflected in the political make up of important government regulatory commissions?

Take the case of Joseph B. Eastman of Massachusetts, veteran member of the interstate commerce commission, for example. He was named to the commission first by President Wilson. He has been confirmed for another term under Hoover appointment.

Yet when that action was taken by the senate, he was credited as a democratic appointment by Chairman Couzens of the interstate commerce committee.

That was brought out by Senator Black of Alabama. He said the commission slate Couzens had presented for confirmation provided for six republicans and four democrats on "a supposedly bi-partisan commission."

"The senator is mistaken," snapped Couzens. "Commissioner Eastman has openly declared that he has voted for democratic presidential candidates since President Wilson."

"This is the first time I ever heard that Commissioner Eastman was a democrat," said Black. "I think ther is no better member of the commission, but I thought he was a republican."

"Did he state that he voted for the democratic presidential candidate at the last election?"

"He made the statement that he voted for Alfred E. Smith," said Couzens.

No Objections

"This is news to me," broke in Senator Smith of South Carolina. "Although I considered Commissioner Eastman a republican—which I might have known was not true because of the splendid work he has done—even as a democrat I had no objection to his appointment."

Going back to news files of the time of Eastman's first appointment in 1919, you find him described both as "an enrolled republican" and as an "independent" in politics.

And since the senate tilt he is reported to have informed Senator Couzens that he classes himself as an independent. There you have it.

Little Talks on Thrift

Health Thrift Often Overlooked.

To be thrifty is to thrive—to get ahead. This may seem like a trite statement but not so when we study its full meaning.

To make progress is to advance in all respects and if we are getting ahead in one way at the expense of some other form of advancement we are not thrifty. One of the most common mistakes in this respect is the tendency upon the part of many to thrive financially at the expense of one's physical well being.

It is no significant and commonplace observation to say that good health is any man's finest possession. It is particularly a valuable asset because its preservation requires adherence only to a few simple rules of common sense. Yet, once it has been lost, it is gone forever. The man who is trying to get ahead in the world with the handicap of poor health has all the odds against him in achieving success. The loss of money or of other material possessions may in time be recovered, but when we lose our good health we lose an asset which we never may be able to recover.

Not enough attention is paid to this matter of health thrift. The average person does not lack for guidance and inspiration in the practices of money thrift. We are constantly having impressed upon us the fact that we must get ahead financially. But to get ahead financially at the expense of our health, as is now the case with such a large percentage of Americans, is by no means an example of thrift.

In the race for success and wealth too many of us are violating every fundamental law of physical well being—too many hurried meals, too much smoking, too many long stretches of work without relaxation, too much burning the candle at both ends, too many details, too many problems that bring worried days and sleepless nights.

For those who hope for success, it is just as necessary to keep the body well as it is to keep one's credit sound. There can never be true thrift where the question of health is not given all the attention its importance deserves.—By S. W. Strauss, President American Society for Thrift.

Osculation in Hyde Park

LONDON—Ardent love making in Hyde Park, London's great playground, has been passed by the censor.

Because of widespread criticism about the conduct of enamored couples in Hyde Park after the shades of night have fallen, George Lansbury, the elderly and affable socialist commissioner of works, has been doing a bit of a sleuthing on his own in the evening. His verdict is that "considering the vast mass of people who use the park, it is as decent and wholesome a place as there is anywhere in the land."

Mr. Lansbury admits naively, however, that he is going to provide more lights.

Public Affection

The commissioner agrees that couples do loll about, but says that there is "no need for people to go and look at them."

Couples certainly do "loll" about in Hyde Park. The love making is of the vigorous type which isn't seen in public in America.

Therein lies a great difference between the "common" people of England and of America. Over here, the lad and lass of the servant type think no more about kissing and embracing in public than would the average person about smoking a cigaret.

Love making on top of public buses or even on the sidewalk, in daylight, is so common that nobody pays any attention to it.

The motion pictures houses are full of couples who go there for the express purpose of making love. One of the biggest cinemas in England has special seats in its huge balcony for lovers. They are built for two.

Cockney Troubles

London's famous Cockney has been in danger of disappearing, and all because the bells on the ancient church of St. Mary-le-Bow, in Cheapside near the Bank of England, have been out of repair.

To the untutored, that may seem like a strange statement, but it is nevertheless true, and is a matter of such grave concern to the city fathers that they have appropriated money to set the bells ringing again.

London without its Cockneys, and its Cockney accent, would be a sorry place indeed. A lot of humorists would go out of business for lack of material to work on.

But to get down to cases, a true Cockney is one born within the sound of Bow Bells. No one who is ushered into the world beyond the reach of these chimes can claim to be a Cockney. For generations this has been so, and the Cockneys are proud of their heritage.

The Bow Bells have rung in and rung out so many Cockneys through the past decades that finally the works in the picturesque belfry just pegged out from old age. The city corporation jumped in and donated funds to put the matter right.

YOUR HEALTH

The Story of a Tooth

By L. A. Kessler, D. D. S., Cedar Rapids, Iowa.

(From Gorgas Memorial Institute)

"It's right in there, doctor," said Mrs. Smith indicating the spot in her mouth with her finger. The dentist searched diligently. "I don't find a thing. You have rather good teeth, Mrs. Smith."

Mrs. Smith complained to her husband. "Why don't you go to my dentist, Dr. Pick?" asked Mr. Smith. And so she went. "It's right there, doctor." Dr. Pick searched diligently. "I don't find a thing."

Two months later Mrs. Smith awoke with a terrific toothache. She went back to Dr. Dig. For a long time Dr. Dig continued his examination, tapping this tooth and that one, passing silk floss between the teeth, reaching between the teeth with slender instruments first from one side and then the other. Finally, he said: "I believe there is a cavity in that upper molar beneath the gum and in between the teeth. Suppose we have an X-ray picture made to be sure."

The picture was made and sure enough, there was a big cavity exposing the nerve. The tooth was treated and filled. The treatment was difficult and the filling was large. So was the bill, thought Mrs. Smith.

Four years later Mrs. Smith developed rheumatism in her fingers. Being a pianist of skill it was most distressing. She commenced to "make the rounds," going to first one man and then another. She took much medicine and followed much advice about her diet. Finally her teeth were X-rayed and as a result the tooth that Dr. Dig had filled was extracted. The extraction was expensive, for the tooth broke and it's removal was difficult and curettement of the diseased bone was found necessary. Then a bridge had to be made to replace the lost tooth. When all the bills were paid they added up to quite a sizable sum.

The progress of the rheumatism was stopped but Mrs. Smith had to give up her music. Her fingers were no longer equal to the exacting requirements of the piano technic. Speaking of the necessity of filling cavities before they reach the nerve (pulp) Dr. Look said: "It is easier to blow out a match than to extinguish a conflagration."

So Mrs. Smith's two children, and Mr. Smith immediately had their teeth X-rayed, and now they have regular semi-annual dental examinations, to save worry, pain, trouble, and expense.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

The First Bluebird

Mr. Editor: One day last week "the man on the corner" asked who would see the first bluebird.

This morning as I walked up East Town street, I heard a bird singing rather pensively. I felt sure it was a bluebird. As I stopped to look for it it flew across the road. There was no mistake. It was a bluebird.

Missing Treasure

Two sets of adoring relatives had celebrated Christmas for young Alan, so his playroom resembled a first class toy shop, crowded with electric trains, furry animals, building blocks, books, balls, games and what not. In the midst of all this, Alan was found Christmas day, peering and searching about, with a worried look upon his brow.

"What are you looking for, dear?" queried his doting grandmother.

Alan pursued his quest the more intently. "Where's that cigar band Uncle Bob gave me?" he muttered.

SCOUT DIVISION HEADS AND TEAM CAPTAINS MEET

At a short meeting held Tuesday afternoon at 5 o'clock in the chamber of commerce rooms, the division heads and team captains of the Boy Scout campaign met and discussed the campaign set-up and the selection of workers. According to the latest plan, and the plan which seems to be most workable, Division A, headed by James L. Case, will make up a small team of a dozen men to secure the large subscriptions. Frank R. Murdy with a team made of about the same number will secure the second group of large subscriptions. F. Russell Smith with his division will take the next with a still larger group of workers, while H. D. Robbins and Charles B. Gilbert will respectively head up the two divisions known as "D" and "E," and which will go out for subscriptions up to $10. The last two divisions will have the largest number of workers.

Plans for the campaign are developing steadily and considerable confidence is felt in its ultimate success, though as H. D. Larrabee, chairman of the campaign and newly elected president, points out, it will not be an easy task.

A list has been made up of 40 persons able to give $100 each and who, it is stressed, must give this amount if scouting in this territory is to be properly financed. Another list includes those who will give $50 and up. A third list includes those who will give $25, a fourth those who will give $10 and up, and a fifth includes those who will give $5 and up.

No subscriptions for less than $5 will be sought for by the workers. And the key-note of the campaign will be, $10 will keep a scout for one year. Will you assure that a certain number of boys will be scouts? To double the enrollment, to make it 1,000, will require the raising of $10,000. The goal set for the campaign is $8,000. The campaign begins Feb. 7 and lasts until Feb. 14.

The secretary gives but a brief report, each department presenting its own work. In May, the United Workers had a visiting day and the members of the organization visited the various departments. It gave much pleasure to the visitors and those visited and at the close of the afternoon tea was served at 9 Washington street. November fourteenth Dr. Haven Emerson of Columbia university, New York city, gave an address on "Mental Hygiene in Public Health Nursing." This meeting was open to the public.

Miss Ella M. Welles made the following report on the public health nursing activities:

The public health nursing department has finished another year of service to the people of Norwich and now presents to you a review of the work accomplished. It has been an active year for our staff numbering seven nurses and one clerk. A generalized program is followed requiring not only skill but tact and patience as well. The total number of patients given care during the year was 3,452, to whom 16,179 visits were made. Much time and thought has been given to improving the maternity service. Definite prenatal instruction and preventive nursing has occupied a considerable number of hours. Delivery service has not been undertaken but the physicians know that for an emergency case a nurse is available. Care of the mother and new born babe continues to be a most satisfying service. Due to the new maternity ward in our hospital more babies are being born in the ideal environment. In 1929 one hundred and twenty-six new born infants were given care by your nurses.

The morbidity service reached its highest peak in February due to the prevalance of the respiratory diseases. Over five hundred visits were made to this special group in this, the shortest month of the year. The work with the crippled children is one of the very important phases of our program. Dr. John H. O'Brien and Dr. Paul P. Swett have given of their time and skill in order that some of the handicapped children of Norwich might be made whole.

Well baby conferences were held, as usual, in Taftville and Occum once a month, in Yantic once in two months. The weekly conference at No. 9 Washington street has been well attended.

Dr. Abernethy of Uncas-on-Thames is now in charge of the tuberculosis clinic and has taken up this most important work with enthusiasm and thoroughness. The crying need from this clinic is "More beds for sanatorium cases." Is it small wonder that physician, nurse and patient grow discouraged after three months of waiting for a bed in any one of the sanatoria of the state?

To stimulate further interest in tuberculosis, modern methods of treatment were observed by each nurse, at the sanatorium's surgical clinic.

Special clinics for the giving of toxin antitoxin were held for pre-school children whose parents could not afford a private physician. Dr. George Gildersleeve and Dr. George Thompson gladly gave their time for these clinics. Seven hundred children have been immunized against diphtheria.

During the year the Backus hospital has extended the privilege of Alpine light treatment to all children referred from the Rock Nook clinic. A small charge is made to those who can afford it. It is hoped this may be a step towards the establishment of a health clinic at the hospital, the natural center of health radiation. The contact with the mental hygiene clinic and the social hygiene clinic has been kept throughout the year, a nurse being in attendance from this department.

The statistical report made by Miss Kate M. MacKenzie, superintendent, follows:

Patients under care January 1, 1929, 1,430; new patients admitted during 1929, 2,073; patients re-admitted in 1929, 39; patients under care in 1929, 3,542; patients discharged in 1929: to hospital 46, to tuberculosis sanatoria 13, to other care (includes average) 785, cured or improved 953, died 38, transferred 330; total 2,175 patients under care Dec. 31, 1929; maternity 53, health supervision 975, morbidity 174, tuberculosis 161, other communicable 4; total 1,367.

Types of new cases: Maternity 386, health supervision 804, morbidity 811, tuberculosis 23, other communicable 38, visits, 16,179.

Well babies conferences: Conferences held, 65; attendance, 1,015; Rock Nook Children's clinic, clinics conducted, 52; attendance, 2,187.

Tuberculosis clinic, clinics conducted, 37; patients examined, 270.

Sheltering Arms.

Following is the Sheltering Arms report given by Mrs. Helen M. MacGregory:

The year has passed very pleasantly for the family at the Sheltering Arms. The same loving care has been shown the patients by our matron and nurses and countless donations of flowers, fruit, fresh vegetables, ice cream and candy have added to their pleasure. We have cared for 23 patients. Two patients have died during the year and three others have left—two being convalescents. There are now 18 patients, 15 women and three men. The house has been freshened by a coat of paint on the walls and woodwork and also on the outside trim. New china and silver, the gift of friends, have made the dining rom very attractive and brightly patterned dishes for the trays, the gift of the matron make the simplest meal more enjoyable. In memory of Mrs. Henry Arnold, for a number of years chairman of the committee, a beautiful grandfather clock has been given by the Arnold family. This has been placed in the reception hall. Another gift much enjoyed by the family is a bird bath which, placed on the side lawn, attracts numerous birds. In the spring we are hoping to have a perennial garden to add beauty to the grounds. The donation by an interested friend of a bond, the interest of which is to be used "for entertainment or to furnish any little delicacy for the family," is a gift which gives continual pleasure. Our thanks are due the ministers of the city for conducting weekly services and to the Needlework Guild fortheir gift of 148 articles.

The membership committee made the following report through Mrs. Helen B. P. Huntington, secretary:

For many years the task of the District Visitation committee of the United Workers has been to obtain contributions to the work by means of any annual house to house canvass. The increasing difficulty of finding women who were willing to undertake this canvass was convincing evidence that the time for a change of method was at hand. After various conferences in the spring of 1929, between the finance and district visitation committees, a membership campaign through the mail, was decided upon. Miss Ruby Vaughn consenting to become chairman of a membership committee to replace the district visitation, prepared the material for this campaign, which was launched during September. Simultaneously with this the several departments prepared for the newspapers notices of their activities.

The committee wish to express deepest appreciation of the hearty co-operation of the papers in according, always, most desirable space to those notices. Although an experiment the venture resulted in an increase of between $1,100 and $1,200 over the contributions of the past few years. The United Workers are sincerely grateful for this generous response and hope that as the new method becomes more widely known and fully understood, the results will be even more gratifying.

Mental Hygiene.

The sixth year of the Norwich Neuropsychiatric clinic opened auspiciously with the granting of a request for a mental health survey of the city and town of Norwich. The request was made by city and town officials, officers of the United Workers, and of the Neuropsychiatric clinic. It is being carried out by Dr. Samuel W. Hamilton of New York, and financed through a grant of $5,000 to the Connecticut Society for Mental Hygiene by the Commonwealth Fund of New York. Dr. Hamilton's findings will be released within a few months and it is anticipated that they will be of great value in our local work. The general committee, as well as all the sub-committees, have been active during the year. At the July meeting it was voted that the name Norwich Neuropsychiatric clinic be changed to Norwich Mental Hygiene clinic. In July, Dr. Stephenson of Hartford was secured as consulting psychiatrist for two clinics a week, thus changing the policy of having an assistant social worker to that of more time of a consulting psychiatrist.

The following resignations took effect during the year: Miss Bellerose, June 1; Miss Bennett, Aug. 1; Miss Mitchell, Nov. 16. At the end of the year, the work was being carried on at the clinic by Miss Church and Miss Wolfe under the guidance of Miss Crutcher of the Connecticut Society of Mental Hygiene who came to the clinic one day a week. At a special meeting held on Dec. 9, 1929, it was voted that Miss Nancy Tomlinson be appointed chief social worker. Miss Tomlinson is a graduate of the Smith College School for Social Work. She has had a variety of experience in Red Cross work and was for some months the chief social worker in the Memphis Child Guidance clinic. She is taking the position formerly held by Miss Betsey Mitchell, who is now with the division of mental hygiene of the state department of health.

Family Welfare Department.

The family welfare department report was made as follows by Miss Marion Lee Bishop:

The Family Welfare department has had a very interesting year, one would like to add successful but one never knows how successful work such as done by this branch of Social Service is. We do realize that it is helpful and very necessary. The Thrift shop which formerly was opened only Saturday afternoons and was entirely in charge of the committee members, is now opened five days a week from 3 to 4 and is carried on mainly by the office force. Those desiringto purchase clothing and other articles now first apply at the office. It was felt that in this way a more personal touch could be had with the applicant and his or her needs better filled. It has proved most satisfactory and a better class and more deserving is applying for this form of help. Of course, it is understood that all articles received are not sold. The better ones are laid aside and given out to those who cannot afford to pay even a few cents for them. The Werman Shoe factory has given us many pairs of shoes which are all given away as the need arises.

A growing problem is the increase in the number of unemployed among our families. This is due in part by local trade depression and in part because men over 40 years of age are being displaced more and more by machinery and the re-organization of industry makes it increasingly difficult for the man past middle age to find employment. In the past the relatives always expected to assist such families during these crises but that is becoming rare. They expect and are expected to turn to the agencies for the help. Occasionally an employer gives money to us to be dispensed through the office for the family during periods of illness, etc., and also this year we have received money from friends for the executive secretary to use for the family as she deems best.

The work of this department is in many ways most discouraging. The majority of the cases require much patience and wisdom. They might be divided into three groups.

First—The girls who are looking for a good time and get into difficulties.

Second—The family who through illness or other misfortune finds itself in need of temporary relief. Then the other family, where because one or both of the parents are not of the strongest type, bad mangement finds them always in domestic and financial difficulties.

Third—The older people who have not been able to lay up for their later years. These are the most discouraging for where there are children there is always the hope that you can give them a better start in life than perhaps their parents had.

Riverside Home.

Mrs. Katherine K. Stanton made the following report on the Riverside Home:

As usual the report of the past year for Riverside home can differ very little from all former reports, as everything goes along smoothly under the supervision of the superintendent and matron, Mr. and Mrs. Ellis, who fill these positions most acceptably. The family at the home have been kindly remembered by friends, making many happy hours for those who cannot get about.

As usual the Catholic women went to the home in June with their treat of cake, ice cream, candy and punch and tobacco for the men. The victrola from Mrs. Charles Holbrook is much enjoyed and was a splendid gift. Also the radio which was a gift from the Elks is much enjoyed and appreciated.

The useful gifts of the Needlework guild are always appreciated. The Euphenia and Every Ready circles of King's Daughters followed their usual custom, coming to the home the Sunday following Christmas for a religious service, bringing gifts and candy to each member of the family. They also provide a Sunday service once a month through the year. A lighted Christmas tree which was up for ten days with gifts from the first selectman, Mr. Murray, furnished much happiness. The committee made occasional visits to the home carrying fruit each time. There are a total of 65 at the home at present, 47 men and 18 women, the largest number in many years.

Rock Nook Children's Home.

The report on the Rock Nook Children's home was made by Mrs. Harriet Hyde Zumbro as follows:

Life at the Rock Nook home has been filled with the joys of childhood with but few exceptions during the last year. This is in large measure due to the love and understanding heart of the matron, who has given unstintedly of her devoted care for 23 years.

The babies in the nursery have known what it is to be truly loved by the nurse in charge, who has been connected with the home for 15 and a half years. Good health is another large factor which makes possible happy child life. The home has had the services of four doctors, each serving three months at a time.

Realizing the value of good medical care for children in their early years, the home committee started a clinic for children at No. 9 Washington street, which funds of the home have maintained for eleven years. This clinic has grown in attendance and value during the years in an amazing way. On one December afternoon 91 children were present, and the week before there were 97.

Various repairs have been made to the home during the course of the year, in an effort to keep everything as homelike as possible. The little children have greatly enjoyed an outside pen with a wooden floor and attractive awnings, has added a note of color to the grounds. One hundred and eighty-one articles were received from the Needlework guild, all so useful and attractive. The average number of children in the home has been about 30 a month.

Club Work

Following is the report of the club work committee, Mrs. Marcus Leith, chairman:

As the club committee began their year's work in the fall, ending in May, the annual report necessitates reporting on the work of two different committees. Last January found the club work progressing nicely under the efficient guidance of Mrs. George Johnson, whom we were unfortunate in losing when she changed her residence to Manchester. Mrs. Randolph Whaples was very successful in conducting the class in cooking as the space is limited, only about 24 can be accommodated and nine had perfect attendance—13

Helped at Change of Life

"Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is a wonderful medicine at the Change of Life. I would get blue spells and just walk the floor. I was nervous, could not sleep at night, and was not able to do my work. I know if it had not been for your medicine I would have been in bed most of this time and had a big doctor's bill. If women would only take your medicine they would be better."—Mrs. Anna Weaver, R. F. D. No. 2, Rose Hill, Iowa.

GRINDS TEETH? MAYBE IT'S WORMS

If your child grinds teeth—beware of worms. They are much more common than most mothers think.

Look also for the following symptoms: picking the nose, crossness, crying in sleep, offensive breath, loss of appetite or weight, causes or general restlessness. Any one of these signs may be your warning that worms are present.

Wise mothers take no chances with these dangerous and disgusting childhood pests. Even if worms are only suspected they give the child

JACKSON AND WINSLOW SLATED TO APPEAR IN TRACK MEET SATURDAY

Two of the best known of Eastern Connecticut's sprinters will appear in special events at the Academy's indoor track meet Saturday at the state armory. The boys are Joe Jackson, the local flash, who won the state championship at 100 yards in 1937 and Gordon Winslow, of Putnam, a freshman at Holy Cross college in Worcester and one of the few who has been credited with a victory over Jackson. Among the field to be pitted against this pair in a sprint series is the name of Joe Delaney of the Holy Cross track team.

The meet, which brings together the Academy and Stonington high in a dual affair together with runners from Holy Cross college in special events and sprint and relay teams from Chapman Tech and Bulkeley high of New London and Hartford public high, is daily attracting considerable interest throughout the state and a banner crowd is practically assured. Although this will be only the second event of its kind in the city, the success of the opening meet a week ago last Saturday when the Academy and Suffield prep contested for honors has promised big things for the sport.

Local fans will watch with interest the performance of Jimmy Daley, of Holy Cross, one of the featured performers slated for Saturday night, when he toes the mark with Jack Elder, the Notre Dame all-round athlete, in the games at the Newark armory this evening. Daley and Bernie McCaffery, another Crusader luminary, together with the Holy Cross relay team, were announced Monday to appear at the meet. The addition of Jackson, Winslow and Delaney, in addition to the high school entrants, makes Saturday's event one that will rank with any meet put on in Connecticut this year.

Those who ran at the armory in the first meet pronounced the arrangements very good for a first time and Johnny Murphy, the Academy coach, intends to make some slight improvements that will make for even better time and performances and be all in favor of the large crowd that is practically certain to trek to the big drillhouse.

RISKO UNFIT OPPONENT FOR CAMPOLO, RULES COM.

NEW YORK, Jan. 28—(AP)—The New York state athletic commission dumfounded the faithful today with a ruling that Johnny Risko, who at one time or another has whipped almost every giant among the cauliflowers, was not a fit opponent for Victorio Campolo, South America's manana mauler.

William Muldoon, 85 year old member of the commission, said the match was "too one sided and would result only" in a repetition of the Campolo-Heeney fight. Campolo scored a technical knockout last summer over "Ould Tom," who has since retired.

Muldoon said Campolo, who fights at about 225 pounds compared to Risko's 195, was altogether too big for the rugged Bohemian baker boy from Cleveland. He declared that there were many battlers of Campolo's own size available without tackling the "little fellows."

The decision was received with added amazement, four days after the commission approved the match in Madison Square Garden, in which Primo Carnera, 270 pound Italian mammoth, wiped out "Little Boy" Peterson, in 70 seconds. Peterson weighed only 209 pounds.

Mickey Walker, middleweight champion, failed to appear and settle his difference with the commission but March 24 was approved for the House of Calvary Cancer hospital charity show under the management of Edward J. Flynn, secretary of New York state. Negotiations are under way for Walker to defend his title against Rene DeVos, the Belgian, in Madison Square Garden, as the feature bout on this charity card.

MARTIN LEADS FIELD OF AMATEUR GOLFERS WITH 73

EDGEWATER PARK, Miss., Jan. 28.—(AP)—Russ Martin, the young "siege gun" of Flossmoor, Chicago, today shot a medalist score of 73 in the qualifying round of the third annual Pan-American amateur golf tournament here.

Martin rated as a "dark horse," is a former Western amateur runner-up and former Chicago city champion. He waded through a field of stars that included Chick Evans, Chicago; Jack Westland, French amateur champion, and a score of others.

His medal card of 73, one above the 6,684-yard course par of 72, was chalked up despite the fact that he went out of bounds twice.

Fred Lamprecht, New Orleans, former National intercollegiate champion and one of golfdom's old guard, turned in the second low score of 75. Chick Evans, who has held about every important golf championship in existence, was third with a 76. Sam D. Perry, Birmingham, Southern amateur champion, turned in the fourth low score, a 77.

Harry Pritchett, Birmingham, Perry's class mate at the University of Alabama and Southern intercollegiate and Alabama champion, tied with Johnny Lehman, Chicago, National amateur sensation, last year, and Jack Westland, French champion, with a 78, for fifth place.

The Mount Vernon management will accept games with only the fastest type of semi-pro teams, and for a suitable guarantee. A week end series can be arranged if desired as this team is willing to spend the week end at any place offering suitable terms.

The Mount Vernon A. C. books games through its own management only. Teams wishing to play this strong attraction can arrange terms through James Morrison, Jr., booking and financial manager, in care of Mount Vernon A. C., 420 So. 4th avenue, Mount Vernon, N. Y.

WRIGHT, PIONEER GOLFER, OBSERVES 83RD BIRTHDAY

PALM BEACH, Fla., Jan. 28.—(AP)—George Wright, who claims to have introduced golf in the United States and with having the first touring baseball team in this country, celebrated his 83rd birthday here today by taking part in the annual tournament of the Old Guard society of Palm Beach golfers.

George Wright was shortstop and highest salaried player on the famous old Cincinnati Red Stockings, who in 1869-70 did much to popularize baseball throughout the country by an extensive tour, in which they played 69 games without meeting defeat. Wright received $1,400 for the season of 1869 when the club was put on a salary basis for the first time. His brother, Harry Wright, who was captain and centerfielder, drew down the next highest figure, $1,200.

The Wright brothers subsequently went to Boston, where they played together and gained additional fame as organized baseball developed. They were members of the Boston Nationals who captured six championships in seven years from 1872 to 1878. Harry managed the Boston club in five of these six winning campaigns and George in the last one, 1878.

The Wrights were contemporary with Adrian (Pop) Anson, A. G. Spalding, Ross Barnes and others conspicuous in the struggling days of the national game. George Wright is the most famous of the handful of survivors.

DEFENDING CHAMP PLAYS EXTRA SET TO WIN MATCH

BROOKLINE, Mass., Jan. 28.—(AP)—The play in the women's national indoor singles tournament reached the quarter-final stage here today with six of the seeded eight surviving. Miss Virginia Rice, of Boston, number six, was eliminated in a third-round match by Miss Mianne Palfrey, of Brookline, by 6-4, 6-4. Miss Alice Francis, of New York, seeded eighth, defaulted yesterday.

Mrs. John B. Jessup, of Wilmington, Del., top-seeded, gained her quarter-finals bracket by trouncing Miss Lee Marston, of Boston, 6-1, 6-1, but Miss Margaret Blake, of Lenox, the defending champion, who was seeded fifth, was carried into an extra set before defeating Mrs. William Endicott, Boston, 7-5, 3-6, 6-1, after 90 minutes of play.

REPORTED TOM LIEB MAY NOT RETURN TO NOTRE DAME

SOUTH BEND, Ind., Jan. 28.—(AP)—Reports that Tom Lieb would not return to Notre Dame next fall were strengthened today when it was revealed that Hartley "Hunk" Anderson would replace him as assistant to Coach Knute Rockne, head Notre Dame football coach.

Lieb, who has been mentioned as a probable successor to Coach Clarence Spears of Minnesota and as the next coach of Auburn college, refused to discuss the announcement, neither affirming nor denying that he would leave Notre Dame.

Anderson, a former Notre Dame football star, was head football coach at St. Louis university last fall.

SIGNED TO ASSIST MCGRAW WITH PITCHERS IN SOUTH

NEW YORK, Jan. 28—(AP)—Thomas A. Clarke, for nine years a catcher with Cincinnati and later a minor league manager, will go south with the New York Giants to assist Manager John J. McGraw with his pitchers at the San Antonio training camp.

Clarke was with the Chicago Cubs in 1918 and was waiting with a bat in his hand to make his first world series appearance when the game and series ended.

He was formerly a manager in the South Atlantic and Virginia leagues and last year was manager of Chambersburg in the Blue Ridge league.

ABOUT LOCAL SPORTS

The Y Seniors have two hard games booked for the next two Saturdays, both to be played at the local Y gym. This coming week end, the Demarestmen will meet the Sub Base five of New London and the following Saturday, Feb. 8, they tackle Greenwich Y in an attempt to get back into the race for the state league championship. Greenwich shared with Norwich and Middletown the triple tie for first place in league play before last Saturday's game when the Seniors lost and dropped to third place, leaving Middletown in the lead and Greenwich second.

When the Academy band makes its first outdoor appearance at the Wildcat baseball games in the spring, there will really be two musical organizations in one to the unit. It has been announced that a drum corps will be a feature of the band. At present there are about 50 members in the band, of which about eight are drummers. Five more students, who are now practicing, will join the band in a month or so.

The Olson Terrible Swedes basketball team from Indiana, which is touring the east and which has met the Plainfield Pros twice, winning once and losing once, is not an amateur organization as it claims to be, according to A. A. U. officials. Any team that plays this club will be ineligible for the national amateur championships, it has been announced.

Two former high school baseball players who have appeared here against the Academy may go higher up this year from the New Haven Profs where they played in 1929. It is practically certain that Eddie Wilson, ex-Hillhouse athlete, outfielder and one of the fastest men in the Eastern league, will go to Baltimore of the International league while Walter Linder, the Deep River sensation, also may take the trip.

It's too bad an Eastern Connecticut hockey league couldn't have been formed this year for the many enthusiasts of the ice sport in this section. Norwich has two or three teams, which in addition to Glastonbury, Stafford and a few others, would make a fairly good circuit.

The Coast Guard Bears football team in New London will play two games on Sundays with college opponents next fall but both of these are away, so it will make little difference to the local fans.

It's ten weeks to the opening of the N. F. A. baseball season.

Tonight the new Coast Guard gymnasium in New London will be dedicated when the Connecticut Aggies varsity basketball team meets the Cadet varsity. In the preliminary the Cadet Junior varsity meets the Conn. Aggie freshmen. The main game goes on at 8:30.

Central and Harding highs in Bridgeport renew their basketball feud Saturday in the first game of their city series.

In case you don't know it Gus Sonnenberg defends his world's wrestling title against Jack Ganson in the New London armory Friday night. There is a fight card on at Danielson Friday night, too.

The names of all the Y. M. C. A. players are on the back of their suits, Roland, Lee, etc.

What's an auction?

Boy, you ain't never been to one if you don't know what it is. It's a place where you go and buy a lotta stuff you'll never use just because you think somebody else wants it.

The auction, my friend, is the means of getting good American dollars for stuff that you couldn't possibly give away. I don't say that you never get a bargain at an auction; you do, but you're lucky.

If you are a merchant you hold a sale but if you are a private citizen you hold an auction. The merchant uses the sale to unload his surplus stock but the citizen uses the auction to get rid of it.

When you have acquired a lot of old dilapidated pieces of furniture, and have an attic filled with old junk that the junkman wont take away you hold an auction. If you live on a farm the auction is a great way to get rid of old farm machinery and worn-out livestock.

Get a clever talker for an auctioneer and the old dollars come rolling in like the waves of the seas. Of course the more people who are sore at each other attend the auction the more money you make.

Didja ever see two women who weren't on speaking terms with each other bidding at an auction? Well, it's as good as a vaudeville act. I attended an auction where two of these bitter enemies were bidding.

Something was put up that when new could be bought for a couple dollars. One of the women made a nominal bid of 25 cents. The other woman doubles the bid and so on until the auctioneer sold it at $10. And the thing was as useless to either of the women as a toothpick is to a hen.

An auction is a great place to get stuck at but you have a lotta fun in getting stuck. There was an auction up in the country some years ago and the one that was running it was going to get plenty of money. He had a nice little scheme all worked out.

He got an old man of his acquaintance to act as a capper. It seems the old man had a very poor memory and his eyesight was not so good. The one that was running the auction wrote down the articles and the price he wanted to get in a book and told the old man to bid them up to that price.

The old man got the idea all right and every single article that was put up he put in his bid. It worked all right until he lost his place in the book and bid about $10 over what a certain article was listed for. The man gives him a dirty look and mutters something to him.

From then on the old man before making a bid would refer to the book. It wasn't more than a few minutes before the bidders got wise that there was something wrong. As soon as the old man would make a bid no one else would bid so that he bought practically everything.

The one running the auction smelled a rat and finally had to call the old man off. The result was that the man to restore confidence sold a $150 horse to one farmer who made a single bid of $2.

It was a costly sale but it saved the auction.

Yep, the auction is a great institution.

SHYMA CLUB WINS CLOSE GAME FROM DANIELSON

The Shymas team of Taftville continued on their merry way of winning basketball games when they shaded the Radio Five of Danielson Tuesday evening at Parish hall, 35 to 30. Led by Lefty Dugas, who totaled 11 points, every member of the quintet scored and the club held a slight margin all the way. The score at half time was 19 to 14.

The Shymas have, in their first season, rapidly forged to the top in their class in this section. They hold victories over many of the leading teams in eastern Connecticut, including the Plainfield Buddies. Next week the Shymas will play either Westerly or Putnam at Parish hall.

In the preliminary the Shyma Juniors swamped the Battery B five of Norwich, 52 to 27, after leading at half time by 26 to 16.

BOSTON WHIRLWINDS AND PLAINFIELD IN THIRD GAME OF SERIES TONIGHT

Probable Lineups.

Plainfield.	Boston.

The third tilt between the Plainfield Pros, and Boston Whirlwinds at the Community house, Plainfield, tonight.

What is expected when these two teams play is a good game, that has always been the case and probably will forever more. The teams have each won and lost a titlt in the series of games this year, Plainfield taking the first in an overtime game and Boston the second by a close score, 39 to 35. These two contests, according to the fans, were humdingers, plenty of thrills and what not.

To say that the third game will be a repetition of the preceding mixups is just guessing, for no one can foretell the outcome of a basketball, football or any other contest. But we do know that the members of both teams will be in there every minute heart and soul to win the contest, and that is bound to furnish what the fans are looking for. And it is safe to predict that Plainfield will offer stiffer opposition in this game than in the past.

Plainfield has been going great guns because the team members have now reached a point of almost 100 per cent. perfection. In the last game the boys with brilliant playing easily swamped Olson's Terrible Swedes, a team rated among the best in the country. Plainfield performed wonderfully in this game and if its good work continues it ought not to have any trouble in trouncing Boston. The team was seen at its best last week.

The lineups of both teams will probably be the same as appeared in the last game when Boston barely took over the locals by a score of 39 to 35.

A fast preliminary will precede the main game, starting at 7.45 o'clock, while the big game will commence at 9 o'clock. Dancing, as usual, will follow the contest.

LOMSKI CREDITED WITH DECISION OVER BRADDOCK

CHICAGO, Jan. 28.—(AP)—After checking over Referee Davey Miller's scorecard, the Illinois state athletic commission today ruled that Leo Lomski, the "Aberdeen assassin," be credited with a decision instead of a draw in his 10 round match with James J. Braddock, of Jersey City, at the Chicago coliseum, January 10.

The commission in reversing the draw verdict, which was booed by thousands of fans said:

"After the fight, one judge voted for Lomski, another voted for Braddock, and the referee, Miller, voted for a draw. Hence, the match was called a draw. Later, Secretary Walter George of the commission, inspected the scorecards of all three officials and noticed that Referee Miller had added up his points wrong. While he voted for a draw, his scorecard gave four rounds to Lomski, two to Braddock, and four were called even. Major John V. Clinnin, chairman of the commission, inspected Miller's scorecard and also noticed the mistake."

LARGE CROWD WELCOMES HOME "THE GREAT SHIRES"

ITALY, Texas, Jan. 28—(AP)—Accompanied by several large trunks adorned with painted labels, "The Great Shires," Art Shires, White Sox first baseman and erstwhile pugilist, returned today to the plaudits of his old home town.

Several hundred citizens of Italy and nearby towns, who "knew him when" were on the station platform when Shires alighted. Also there was a flock of photographers.

"This is about all I've done for the last month," he remarked as he posed for the cameramen.

It required almost an hour for the great one to greet old friends who swarmed about him. Then he was off for home, where he said he would remain with his family, resting, until the opening of the White Sox spring training camp at San Antonio.

Italy, however, has insisted upon giving the home town celebrity a "blowout." He will be guest of honor at a dance and banquet tomorrow night at the Country club.

NINETY PLAYERS ENTERED IN 31ST N. I. T. TOURNAMENT

NEW YORK, Jan. 28—(AP)—The name of Francis T. Hunter led all the rest when entries for the thirty-first national indoor tennis championship closed today with more than 90 players in the field. The tournament opens Saturday at the Seventh Regiment armory.

Hunter, the 35 year old New Rochelle publisher, who ranks second only to Bill Tilden among the American players, will be an outstanding favorite. He was the finalist against Jean Borotra, of France last year.

Other outstanding stars entered include J. Gilbert Hall, of South Orange, N. J., former Canadian indoor champion; Julius Seligson and his brother, Sidney, New York; Herbert L. Bowman, Bronxville, N. Y.; Kenneth B. Appel, East Orange, N. J.; Perrine Rockefeller, New York; Harris Coggeshall, Des Moines and Richard Murphy, Utica, N. Y., former national indoor junior champion.

Borotra is unable to make the trip to America to defend his crown.

As entries mailed before 5 p. m. today will be accepted there is a possibility that Fritz Mercur, Bill Aydelotte, former champion; Bill Jacobs, present junior title holder or John Richardson, runner-up, will be added to the list.

KILLINGLY AND WINDHAM TO PLAY THIS EVENING

(Special to The Bulletin)

DANIELSON, Jan. 28—One of the best contests of the season is expected to be seen at the Killingly high gym this evening, when the Killingly squad will take on the Windham high team, an old rival which has not played the locals in recent years. The visiting team on paper is stronger than the locals as they have defeated Chapman Tech, which holds a victory over Killingly.

Killingly is still smarting from the defeat of last Saturday at the hands of Woodstock by a one-point margin and will use its strongest lineup in an endeavor to enter the win column. Slowik and Szafranski will be in the forward positions F. Dascoli, center, and Young, Wood or Neilson, guards.

The seconds of each school will play in the preliminary. The Killingly seconds have never been defeated, having won four games and lost none. Their lineup will be: Hammett and Anderson, forwards, Kimball, center, Gladu and A. Dascoli, guards.

TRACK AND FIELD MEET OF I. C. A. A. A. A. IN WEST IN 1932

NEW YORK, Jan. 28—(AP)—For the first time in its history of more than half a century, the classic championship track and field meet of the intercollegiate association of amateur athletics of America, may be staged in the far west in 1932.

After journeying eastward year after year and capturing eight of the last nine championships, the Universities of California, Southern California and Stanford have invited the I. C. A. A. A. A. to hold its 56th annual title event two years hence at the new University of California oval at Berkeley, it was announced today.

The bid was backed with a guarantee of $85,000 to help defray expenses of visiting teams and was favorably received by eastern members of the association.

According to plans outlined in the invitation received through Lloyd W. Georgeson, a California alumnus, the meet would be held in the latter part of June or the first of July. At that time the golden state will be the track and field center of the world with the Olympic games taking place at Los Angeles shortly after.

The idea of staging the intercollegiates in the west "would not only be feasible but for the best interests of intercollegiate and national track and field athletics," Gustavus T. Kirby, chairman of the I. C. A. A. A. A. advisory committee said today after discussing the matter with eastern representatives, both students and alumni.

DANIELSON WINS CLOSE GAME FROM CLINTON

(Special to The Bulletin)

DANIELSON, Jan. 28.—The Armory A. A. took a very close and exciting game from Clinton Pros. tonight at the state armory by the score of 31 to 28. The game was very fast throughout, first one team taking the lead and then the other. The shooting of Normandin was the feature of the game, he making some very difficult shots. P. Vattes of the visitors also made a number of wonderful shots, he and Normandin, being the stars of the game. This was the Armory's last game of the season in the state armory. The manager expects to play next week's game in the town hall.

In the preliminary game the Southbridge All Stars won from the local All-Stars by a 28 to 12 score. The summary:

BOUCHER STAR PLAYER IN RANGERS' VICTORY

NEW YORK, Jan. 28.—(AP)—The third battle between New York's two National Hockey league rivals, the Rangers and Americans, ended tonight with an awarded goal, which gave the Rangers a 4 to 3 victory in an overtime period.

After battling on even terms for 75 minutes of speedy and occasionally rough play, the winning goal was given to Butch Keeling of the Rangers without making a shot. Joe Simpson, American defense man, threw his stick in an effort to halt Keeling's rush while the Americans were a man short in the middle of the overtime period, and for this violation the goal was awarded. Simpson protested that the stick had been knocked from his hands.

A goal apiece in each of the three regular periods brought the teams to a 3-3 tie.

The Rangers had to come from behind twice in the first two periods to tie the score, then went ahead in the third only to have the Americans overtake them. Frank Boucher, Ranger center, was the high scorer with two goals. Billy Burch got a goal and an assist for the Americans. Normie Himes of the Americans put a thrilling finish on the game by walloping Ching Johnson with his stick and drawing a major penalty, after they had carried on a feud all through the game.

Purvis Outpoints Petrolle

INDIANAPOLIS, Jan. 28.—(AP)—Jackie Purvis, Toronto, Canada, welterweight, outpointed Billy Petrolle of Fargo, N. D., in a ten round slugging match here tonight.

TOLD NORWICH CONTACT CLUB OF ENLARGING WORK OF OTIS LIBRARY

The Otis library is a splendid public service, Rev. Alexander H. Abbott, pastor of the United Congregational church, said in an interesting talk which he gave Monday noon at the weekly meeting of the Contact club at the Wauregan hotel. In the course of his address Rev. Mr. Abbott said:

The censure on the Otis library at the town meeting last fall caused a retort from me that was sharper than I intended. Knowing so much of what the trustees have been trying to do to make the library a fine servant, and so much of the actual accomplishments, we were deeply pained that there could be any feeling on the part of the public against our efforts and results.

This created an intensity of expression which ought not to have been levelled at Mr. Boardman, whose sincerity of convictions we respect; but was nevertheless more sharply stated than would otherwise have been. I am quite hopeful that a cooler statement of interesting facts, by a member of the board of trustees, may take the sting out of any preceding sharpness.

Having been a private library for many years, in 1891 the Otis library became a free public library. At the time Gen. William A. Aiken was president of the board of trustees, which position he honored until his death last fall, after having been president for 49 years. When the library became a public one, the town granted $4500 for the expenses of the library, and had one representative on the board of trustees. The present town representative on the board is Adams Carroll, with whom Messrs. Woodard, Tirrell, Allis, Olcott and Abbott constitute the present board. If time permitted, we should like to mention numerous facts in the history of the library, concerning its doings, its policies, its accomplishments. But what concerns us most, I am sure, is a brief statement about things of the present.

Business men are interested in finance. The invested funds of the library are at present about $166,000. This yields an income of about $8500. The town at present grants $6500 yearly. The total income is about $15,000. Our expenses are the same, divided between two major items: first maintenance costs of about $11,000, and an amount for books, periodicals and bindings of about $4000. Whereas, in 1891 the grant of the town largely paid for maintenance costs, in 1929, the grant of the town covered only a little more than one-half the maintenance costs. This naturally reduces the proportion available for books, periodical and bindings. The latter being the main interest in a library, it is obvious that the desires we have for it are limited by the money-question. That the financial side is carefully scrutinized is clear from the business men on the board and especially the finance committee of which Mr. Woodard is chairman with Mr. Cranston treasurer of the library.

It may be of interest to note some of the things the trustees have tried to do during the last few years. The internal geography of the library needed rearrangement badly. An old unsightly discharging desk, which occupied too much space, needed to be gotten rid of. Our entire library of books needed new location and shelving. Children who had only the regular reading room for any use whatever, and who had their children's books tucked off in a dark corner, needed whatever section we could secure for them in terms of limited space. Our card catalogue of patrons had not been cleared for years, and we needed to know how many and who our patrons were. A new discharging desk, with a proper mechanism for quick service was particularly necessary. Each one of these things, a substantial task in itself, became a fact. The library took on a new appearance; each book, every book in the library found its new and proper location. Children who had been side-tracked came into their own, and books made available for their enthusiasm; catalogues brought up to date; discharging desk made adequate and sightly. All this was made financially possible, not by use of money granted by the town, but by income of a new legacy, and the careful rearrangement of administration costs; at the same time an increase in remuneration was made to each and every member of the library staff, who, even at this present moment are being paid for their services at a rate which is miserably low but cannot be larger because there are not funds available.

The trustees have studied more than the geographical needs. They know that the first interest in a library is books, books, books. A study of circulation among patrons; a study of specific departments of books—novels, history, biography, fine arts, sociology, etc.; a study of numerical proportions of circulated books in these departments; a study of purchases of books in terms of these proportions; a study of requested books by individual patrons; a study of departments needing building up; a study of periodicals; a study of needed reference books; all these particular studies have been and are being constantly made; so as to keep the library is as mobile and interesting a condition as is possible.

The results have been gratifying. We have 8680 patrons who use the library for circulating books. Last year these patrons took out 124,706 books, the largest circulation in the library's history. During the last quarter of this current year 5481 more books were taken out than during the same quarter last year. We picked out a week at random a little while ago, to see how many patrons used the libary for any purpose during the seven days of that week, and how many books were taken out. 3,703 patrons used the libary: 3,275 books were taken out during those seven days. We have no way of recording the use of reference books like encyclopaedias, dictionaries, histories, newspapers and pamphlets. Nor have we a system of recording the extensive use that is made of our fine geneological department which many citizens of our own town and visitors from away find invaluable.

Such results are due to incessant care on the part of all officials of the libary to serve the town. We have tried to discover the reading choices of the public, in terms of what our records show of types of books people take out. Fiction comes first in point of numbers; our purchases of new books are therefore in terms of the ratio of circulation. If 65 per cent of circulation is fiction, we try to have our purchases 65 per cent of fiction; and the books purchased in that field are chosen only after deliberate study of reviews and articles concerning proposed additions. "Preferred patrons" is not a condition permitted. Each book is placed on the shelves for circulation as soon as it is accessioned, with the single exception of some book outside the fiction field that has been definitely requested by patrons, and then it is circulated according to the filed order of requests for reading. The children's section has been particularly stressed, due to its original incomplete condition. Now the children have their own section in the library, cramped though it is. They have their own shelves. They have their own member of the library staff to care for their needs. And the circulation of books in their department has grown by leaps and bounds, due solely to the increased care given to their desires. As well, due to a state grant of $100 and according to its restrictions, books are placed at the disposal of schools in the outlying districts which have no library facilities. All told, these items of interest make us believe that the library is doing its best to function as an institution that serves the public.

We have great needs. That is apparent. The amount of money at our disposal is too small. Our invested funds need to be doubled and redoubled before we can do the adequate job. We sorely need enlarged quarters for our already overburdened shelves. We need a separate room for our children where their increasing interest in books can be taken care of. Above all we covet the assurance that the public believes we are trying our best to meet their wishes. With the limited means at our command, we believe the library is a fine centre of cultural activity. The staff is ready to help any person desiring it. Books not in our list will be purchased upon request if the allotment for its particular class has not been used up. That we purchased 2489 new books last year, besides caring for periodicals and binding books needing it, should be evidence that we are trying to keep abreast of the times; and these purchases were in terms of the proportions circulated from the 17 classifications that libraries of our standing use.

The library is a splendid public servant. Librarian and staff and trustees consider it their bounden duty to meet every legitimate request of their patrons.

At the business session, Ernest O. Rodier presided. Alex Pasnik was song leader, while Fred Geer ably assisted at the piano.

RHODE ISLAND REDS LED IN 12TH WEEK AT STORRS

At the conclusion of the twelfth week of the Storrs egg laying contest the records show that the hens did a total of 4,987 eggs or a yield of nearly 63 per cent. This represents a let up of 83 eggs when compared with the previous week but it's 273 eggs better than for the corresponding week a year ago. The per capita production for the entire 1,000 birds has now mounted to 50 eggs.

The leading pens for this period repeated their performance of three weeks ago, in that all of them laid 60 eggs or better. Harold G. Colt's pen of Rhode Island Reds from West Hartford, led the list with a score of 66 eggs. A pen of Leghorns entered by Tolvonen Leghorn farm from Girard, Pa., ranked second with a total of 62 eggs. R. W. Davis & Sons of Rockland, Maine were a close third with their Barred Rocks that laid 61 eggs. Leighton Orchards at Kingston, R. I., were an equally close fourth when their Leghorns came through with 60 eggs.

CLARA BOW
explains what makes a Girl
ALLURING . .

"THERE'S ONE THING that stands out above all others in making a girl really alluring," says Clara Bow, whose vivid beauty and personality have won her world-fame in motion pictures. It's lovely skin.

"You may have marvelously appealing eyes—and a lot of charm—and a beautiful figure.

"But just notice the way people cluster around a girl who has lovely skin! And any girl can have lovely skin if she takes good care of it!.

"I got my first chance in the movies, partly, at least, because of what my father calls my 'baby-smooth' skin

"You see, motion picture directors found out long ago that unless a girl has marvelous skin she can never make millions of hearts beat faster when she appears in a close-up. The incandescent lights reveal the tiniest flaw in the skin!

"That's why we motion picture actresses have to keep our skin at its very best every minute.

"Several years ago some of us began using Lux Toilet Soap, and were enthusiastic about it.

NANCY CARROLL

"So other screen stars began to use it—until it wasn't long before almost every important actress in Hollywood was using it. Janet Gaynor—Joan Crawford—Billie Dove—Bebe Daniels—Dorothy Mackaill.

"Take Nancy Carroll, for instance, one of Paramount's most fascinating girls. She keeps her fair skin delectable as an apple blossom with Lux Toilet Soap.

"And Mary Brian, too. Her skin is clear and smooth as a little girl's. Jean Arthur, too, keeps her skin lovely with Lux Toilet Soap.

MARY BRIAN

"In fact," Clara Bow goes on to say, "nearly every girl I know in Hollywood uses this soap. And aren't we glad that we have kept our skin in good condition—the talkies have even more close-ups than the silent pictures have!

JEAN ARTHUR

"When I get letters from girls all over the country—so many of them saying nice things about my skin—I long to shower every one of them and tell these girls that they can keep their skin just as beautifully smooth as we screen stars do—by using Lux Toilet Soap."

Screen Stars use it

There are now 521 important actresses in Hollywood, including all stars. Of these, 511 use Lux Toilet Soap, both at home and in their studio dressing rooms. Indeed, as a result of their enthusiasm this fragrant white soap has been made official in all the great film studios in Hollywood.

KAY FRANCIS

If you aren't one of the millions of girls and women who are using this fine soap, made by just the same method as are the finest soaps of France, do try it. You will be delighted with its quick generous lather—even in the hardest water. And with the way it keeps your skin always charmingly fresh and smooth. Order several cakes—today.

Lux Toilet Soap is such a help in keeping the skin in perfect condition!"

GAMBLING LAW VIOLATIONS BRING FINES IN THREE CASES, NEW LONDON

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Jan. 28—Three cases of violation of the gambling laws were tried in the police court this morning. In each instance a conviction was established and fines imposed, although two of the accused young men pleaded not guilty.

Irving Gruskin, proprietor of the pool room situated in the rear of the Ideal Rooming house, 48 Bank street and Charles Bronstein, employed by Gruskin, pleaded not guilty to promoting gambling in a room adjacent to the pool room. Practically all the witnesses interrogated by Prosecuting Attorney Max Boyer furnished the evidence necessary for the court to find the accused guilty. As a result of the ridiculous statements made by Gruskin and Bronstein, Judge Daniel M. Cronin imposed a fine of $100 and costs upon Gruskin and a fine of $50 and costs was meted out to Bronstein. Joseph McCarthy, Henry Johnson, Aldo Grughie, George Green, John Korp, Earl Johnson, Joseph Harris and David Hirsch, the last named a store manager, were charged with frequenting and each of the men was fined $15 and costs, excepting Hirsch, whose charge was nolled.

The pool room and gambling house were raided early last Sunday morning. Officers who figured in the raid told of gaining entrance to the pool room and to finding a card game in progress in the room adjoining. Money was on the table when the officers entered, but most of the coin was seized. However, Patrolman Dennis Murphy was able to seize several coins that the players were unable to gather up and secrete.

Gruskin admitted being the proprietor of the pool room, although he originally was charged with maintaining gambling devices, having a dozen or more punch boards displayed on a counter, while Bronstein was charged with the conduct of the gambling room. The testimony of the two men was such that neither the court nor the prosecutor believed them and their statements relative to the conduct of the business resulted in convictions being established. Gruskin admitted having two push buttons at the entrance to the pool room, through which the card players passed to reach the gambling room. He attempted to convince the court that the first push button was for the purpose of compelling all entrants to ring the bell, or sound the buzzer, so that an attendant could go to the door and if the seeker of admission was not intoxicated, he was allowed to enter, Gruskin explained, or rather tried to, that the buzzer was maintained simply as a protection of the place against undesirables. The second buzzer, he said, answered a similar purpose.

Bronstein testified to his connection with the establishment and his testimony was an admission that he was the agent solely of Gruskin and was not the proprietor. During the course of the trials, Prosecuting Attorney Boyer called upon Gruskin to identify two of the frequenters, asking the witness if he ever knew the frequenters referred to as ever engaging in legitimate employment and if it was not a fact by common knowledge and speech that the men referred to were of the type known as gamblers. The witness was evasive in his answers.

Prosecuting Attorney Boyer declared that the place was openly known to be a rendezvous for the gambling fraternity; that several gamblers and loiterers were constantly occupying space on the sidewalk in front of the rooming house and that the police had received numerous complaints because of the loitering and the gambling being promoted at the house. He declared that Gruskin was the admitted proprietor of the gambling resort and that Bronstein was his representative and agent and being such was equally guilty. Attorney Samuel Gruskin, brother of the gaming house proprietor, appeared in court as counsel for Irving Gruskin, Bronstein and the frequenters, but when this fact became known to the court, Judge Cronin refused to permit the attorney to act as counsel for the defense, inasmuch as the counselor had become surety on several of the bonds of the accused and by so doing revealed that he was an interested person in the case. In denying Gruskin the privilege of defending any of the accused, Judge Cronin remarked, "Smart practice I should say!" Attorney Lucio DiBiasi was on hand and he conducted the cases of the defendants. When penalties were imposed, Attorney DiBiasi gave notice of an appeal, but withdrew such action.

Charles Darrow, employed at the club room, Bacon block, 130 State street, another of the resorts raided early Sunday morning, pleaded guilty to the charge of violation of the gaming law and was fined $50 and costs. When the club room was raided Darrow was not there and neither was anyone else. The strong arm squad smashed three doors in order to obtain entrance and then seized a faro bank layout. Darrow appeared at the club room when he heard of the raids being in progress and submitted to arrest.

Candido Hernandez, 32, a Negro residing at 11 Pearl street, was charged with intoxication and breach of the peace. He was sentenced to 30 days in jail.

William Fenn, laborer, residing on Harrison street, charged with breach of the peace and intoxication, was given suspension of judgment and placed on probation. Fenn went to the Garde theatre last night where he created a disturbance and was arrested by Patrolman Carlos Stone.

WILLIAM NORRIS OVERCOME BY GAS IN PECULIAR WAY

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Jan. 28—William Norris, employed by the Robert Frink Candy Co., 136 Garfield avenue, had a close call from death by gas asphyxiation at his place of employment early this morning. But for the fact that Norris was awakened before he had become unconscious and that an open window had allowed much of the poisonous fumes to escape from the building, Norris must have died.

Norris was discovered near the entrance of the candy store about 1 o'clock by the crew of a repair gang of the Connecticut Power company. He was on his feet, but in a dazed condition. Medical aid was obtained for Norris, and after he had been administered to he was taken to a State street rooming house and where a decided improvement was noted in his condition today.

Norris is provided with sleeping quarters over the candy store and it is believed that he retired while gas fumes were entering the building, unnoticed because of the greater volume of the fumes passing from the store through an open window. He was aroused from some unknown cause later and when partially overcome, but not sufficiently so to cause Norris to realize his condition.

It is believed that either employes of the city or agents of the building caused water to be shut off there late yesterday and when a plug from one of the pipes was also removed to permit the water to drain and not freeze, that instead of the water plug being removed the gas plug was taken off.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Breed Theatre

Who killed Mimi Bellamy?

The answer will be provided by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer when "The Bellamy Trial" comes today to the Breed theatre as a feature mystery drama production.

With Leatrice Joy in the leading role as the beautiful murder defendant, the murder drama is played by a cast that represents one of the greatest assemblages of screen talent ever to appear in one production.

Introduced to the screen in a most novel manner by Monta Bell, who wrote and directed the screen play from the sensational magazine serial by Frances Noyes Hart, the mystery drama maintains a thrilling tempo of suspense that is dispelled only in the final footage that reveals the real murderer.

As the woman on trial, Miss Joy brings to the screen an impressively sincere character delineation that reaps for her new honors as a free-lance star.

Broadway Theatre

A wee little Irish woman with the sweetest brogue in the world was the unwitting instrument in solving one of the weirdest murder mysteries that ever puzzled the Calcutta secret police. Baffled at every turn with every moment fraught with peril for the investigators, two of whom were killed in plain sight of their confreres, this wee little woman who confessed to "talkin' wi' and conversin' wi' the spirits of the dead," but who didn't believe in "tay-leaves and sich," conducted a seance in which the cold finger of the murdered man pointed unerringly at his murderer, and the case was over! High society circles in Calcutta were stirred as never before and the rumblings of the case reached even across the seas. "The Thirteenth Chair," which opens at the Broadway today, has the above for its plot, which far surpasses any of the legion of murder stories that have reached the screen. Conrad Nagel and Leila Hyams, John Davidson, Holmes Herbert, Bela Lugosi, noted Hungarian actor; Helene Millard, and Lal Chand Mehra, the latter a real Hindu, are in the cast with Margaret Wycherley as the clairvoyant in her original stage role. The surrounding bill includes Frances Williams and Her Yacht Club Boys in "The High C's"; Harry Fox and His Six American Beauties (a real surprise, boys!); a Vitaphone domestic playlet, "Just Like a Man"; Derickson & Brown in a classy song and musical specialty, a Metro feature-length all-talking comedy and the latest Fox Movietone news.

Palace Theatre

"Evangeline," dramatization of Longfellow's immortal epic, and "Playing Around," a modern romance, are billed at the Palace theatre this week, and form one of the greatest double-feature programs ever shown anywhere. Miss Del Rio sings a song entitled "Evangeline," in English, and another song called "Chansonette," in French, during the course of the picture. It marks the first time her voice will be heard through talking pictures.

A romance as fresh and warm as a springtime zephyr introduces Evangeline to the screen audience, with her girlish love for Gabriel, the blacksmith's son. Then, on the eve of the girl's wedding, comes cruel tragedy, the stern edict of the presumptuous governor-general, the troops to carry out his orders, chaos, storm, strife and the deportation of the Acadians from Grand Pre, one of the most tragic events of history. Then followed Evangeline's untiring search for the boy whom fate tore from her arms. From the rugged seashore of Nova Scotia the scenes change to the bayous of the sub-tropical Louisiana where, on the arm of Father Felecian, who shares her hardships and her hopes Evangeline comes to find Gabriel, and finds instead, Baptiste, a boy who had once asked her to marry him, but who had gracefully stepped aside when he learned that the girl's love was for another. There are countless surprises, limitless changes in scenery before the dynamic climax of this powerful epic comes.

Alice White and Chester Morris are the stars of "Playing Around." The latter, who became famous overnight for his work as a gangster in "Alibi," is cast as another gangster in this picture, the one who falls in love with a girl who has just won a "most beautiful legs" contest in a notorious cafe. He takes her away from the man to whom she is engaged, and the film is a tense drama of conflict between the men. How it turns out provides a smashing climax.

SCOUTS TAKE THIS OATH, LEARN THIS LAW, AND KEEP IT

The gist of all we have been saying in these articles and all we will say in succeeding ones is contained in what a Boy Scout does. All that the scout does hinges back into this oath that he takes and the law he pledges to obey.

The Scout Oath

On my honor I will do my best—

1. To do my duty to God and my country, and to obey the scout law;

2. To help other people at all times;

3. To keep myself physically strong, mentally awake and morally straight.

The Scout Law

1. A Scout is Trustworthy.—A Scout's honor is to be trusted. If he were to violate his honor by telling a lie, or by cheating, or by not doing exactly a given task, when trusted on his honor, he may be directed to hand over his scout badge.

2. A Scout is Loyal.—He is loyal to all to whom loyalty is due; his scout leader, his home, and parents and country.

3. A Scout is Helpful.—He must be prepared at any time to save life, help injured persons, and share the home duties. He must do at least one good turn to somebody every day.

4. A Scout is Friendly.—He is a friend to all and a brother to every other scout.

5. A Scout is Courteous.—He is polite to all, especially to women, children, old people, and the weak and helpless. He must not take pay for being helpful or courteous.

6. A Scout is Kind.—He is a friend to animals. He will not kill nor hurt any living creature needlessly, but will strive to save and protect all harmless life.

7. A Scout is Obedient.—He obeys his parents, scoutmaster, patrol leader, and all other duly constituted authorities.

8. A Scout is Cheerful.—He smiles whenever he can. His obedience to orders is prompt and cheery. He never shirks nor grumbles at hardships.

9. A Scout is Thrifty.—He does not (want only) destroy property. He works faithfully, wastes nothing, and makes the best use of his opportunities. He saves his money so that he may pay his own way, be generous to those in need, and helpful to worthy objects. He may work for pay, but must not receive tips for courtesies or good turns.

10. A Scout is Brave.—He has the courage to face danger in spite of fear, and has to stand up for right against the coaxings of friends or the jeers or threats of enemies, and defeat does not down him.

11. A Scout is Clean.—He keeps clean in body and thought, stands for clean speech, clean sport, clean habits, and travels with a clean crown.

WORK SLACK IN SOUTH BUT BROWN SCHEMES IT

Howard Brown, a well-known stone mason, started out to see the world in a 1923 Ford sedan, bidding friends and relatives good-bye a little while ago as he drove away without a spare tire. He goes by the name of Red on account of his long red hair. He told the owners of the Community gas station to fill up the tank with good J. D. Rockefellow special, that he expected to make Florida without a blow-out. Also the engine was sound, good as a clock working on a shelf.

Nothing was heard of the roamer until the past week. When a letter came to William Banks, president of the Corn Cob club, to which Happy-go-Lucky Brown belongs, and it was good news to the members, that braved a snow storm to attend the meeting at which this letter read by the president, William Banks:

I had a good trip to St. Petersburg, Fla., without a blow-out. It took me eight days. Had some rainy weather, that made rough going but the engine of the machine was fine, not a knock in a car load. When I pass through Newark, N. J., I blew my horn at a former Noank prize fighter, Frank Fulton. He was doing road work for a fight he was going to pull off. We had a talk about Noank and the gang. Buzzsaw Fulton said it was tough to get a job here; each day a gang of able-bodied men on the street corner looking for jobs, where one could not be got. Roamer Brown had on the back of the auto "Florida or Bust in a 1923 Ford." He soon shook the hand of Buzzsaw Fulton, the rubber man of Newark and left on his way again.

It seemed good, he said, to meet a fellow from your home town. When I reached the Sunshine City, no blowouts, in good health after a few days' rest, I went and looked the city over before getting a job. I came to the big beach and was looking around and saw a pair of No. 8 feet sticking out from a green umbrella. I looked and it was William Bishop, in for a swim. His eyes was big as a mushmelon, he had to put on his glasses to tell who I was.

Billie said how did you get down here—take the shoe leather express by the highway?" "No! I came in a Lizzie auto, looking for work!"

So they had a chat for one hour. Then Red-Haired Howard saw Billie do a jacknife dive off the springboard. "I went looking for a job, he wrote, at a free place which they have in every city. They had a call for two men and about 20 rushed up. I waited around for almost three hours and how hot it was! sweat rolling off your face like hail stones coming down in the summer time. A pretty southern doll was at the phone, when the call came for two men. She said "a job for two!" and 40 rushed over; so I got left on that one! Two fellows came back, handkerchiefs out rubbing the sweat off their brows. "Well, Joe, it is too hot to work anyway today!" Mad because they did not get the job! gee! what a kick I got out of that!

I beat it from that hard-luck place. For three weeks tried to get a job in the city of 365 days of sunshine, but failed. One night as I lay on my bed on Market avenue, thinking how long would this new half-dollar last before the smiling landlady gave me the gate and I must use a stone for pillow, under a palm tree, I had a dream to start a fish market. But where was the money coming from? By luck my father, Mula Brown blew into town with a load of jack, so I took him as a partner, while the southern fishermen got the fish and it was not long when a sign over the market, read, "Brown Fish Market," We Buy Anything That Swims. One day we were smoking our T. D. pipes when the boat Horseshoe came in with a load of fish, among them a cod weighing around 32 pounds. A Noank stamp on the fish caught by Capt. William Boles, but the fish might flop off the deck of the boat and head south. It was caught in southern water. Bert Pa, it seemed good to see some one from the Fishing Village, if it is only a cod fish! We sold the fish to a coon family. They never tasted anything better than that Noank cod, lived on for a week and a day, that family of seven! But how did that cod get away down south? It must have started last summer. I will have to ask Capt. Boles about when he caught it.

I'm getting along good now, but miss them checker games when I used to beat Dr. William, the champion checker player of North Bank square, Mystic. The last game sure did put the heavy oil to me and winning the championship of Noank and Mystic. But now I am trying to win the championship among the southern fishermen of Dock No. 4. So, will play Capt. Ted Porter of boat Pelican who knows more tricks on a checkerboard than the champion of North America. Then the fireworks will fly—a northern against a southerner! so let the best man win! Up in Noank the snow is deep and the wind blowing when we are cleaning fish in our shirtsleeves but the air is more healthy in good old New England than in the south.

I see where the Whirlwinds basketball team took away the victory from the Shamrock, the fighting boys in green, of Mystic. Well the Noank Blue and White Suit Sharp-Shooters will hang up the banner in their clubroom after the suits are put away in moth balls until next winter.

Howard Brown is another Noank boy who left home to see the world and has made good on nothing but a $20 bill and a Ford auto. He went through some hardships where the country is quiet as a church mouse on a Sunday, without work. But he took a Chinaman's chance on a fish market and made good. It was like a 100 to one shot on Spark Plug. The fish went on a strike which made it bad; but by all reports more fish was caught down south than here, for the fishermen could get out only two days in three weeks, while the southern fishermen, fish almost every day.

Well, remember me to all that know me! I am sunburned like an Austin Lamb sugar beet! Tell the members of the Corn Cob club I will send a picture of that Noank codfish to the president and they can see my story is true.

SELLING RESISTANCE IN MARKET CAUSED GENERAL DECLINE IN PRICES

NEW YORK, Jan. 28—(P)—Strong selling resistance developed in the stock market today when efforts were made to extend the recent recovery, and prices generally closed lower. The decline was not associated with any development in the day's news and was in the nature of a technical correction of a temporarily over bought position. Operators for the advance succeeded in pushing up a number of issues, some of the gains in which ran from 2 to 6 points. Trading showed a moderate decline, off in volume, the day's sales falling just short of 3,000,000 shares.

Wall street was treated to a number of constructive market developments during the day. Overnight came the weekly federal reserve condition report showing a further shrinkage of $120,000,000 in security loans by reporting member banks, the total of which is still over seven billion dollars. Around mid-day came President Hoover's statement of a further gain in employment figures.

After the close of the market, the United States Steel corporation issued its report showing earnings of $21.18 a share for 1929, including a year-end credit adjustment of $9,972,851, without which the earnings would have been $19.96 a share. Wall street estimates had ranged from $18 to $19 a share. The Jones & Loughlin and Inland Steel companies also made public excellent earnings reports, the annual dividend on the common stock of the latter being increased from $3.50 to $4.

Other favorable items in the day's news were the increase in the annual dividend on Norfolk & Western from $8 to $10, reports that Chicago Steel district operations had been stepped up to between 80 and 85 per cent of capacity and a series of excellent earnings reports by small companies.

Call money again dropped from 4 1-2 to 4 per cent but a firmer undertone was noted with the approach of the month end. Stock subscriptions due this week total $45,500,000, with new bond issues called for payment bringing the total to around $200,000,000. The February 1 dividend and interest disbursements are expected to run close to $500,000,000, a new high record for this season of the year.

The reaction in today's market caused little surprise in view of the sharp run-up in prices during the past 10 days. In fact, several of the large commission houses, while maintaining a bullish attitude on the future outlook, urged their customers to take trading profits in speculative stocks, and the market was forced to absorb a large volume of these realizing sales. In addition, there were frequent outbursts of "bear" selling but they failed to make much headway.

Auburn Auto fell 7 points and rallied 1 1-2. American Tobacco B, A. M. Byers, Lackawanna, General Electric, Republic Iron & Steel, United Cigar Stores preferred, United Air Transport and U. S. Industrial Alcohol closed 3 to 5 points lower. Losses of 2 points or more were quite common, the list including American Telephone, International Telephone, Radio, American & Foreign Power, Standard Gas & Electric and Union Pacific. U. S. Steel common closed with a net decline of 1-2 at 177 after having touched 177 7-8.

Underwood Elliott Fisher and International Business Machines each closed about 6 points higher while Advance Rumely preferred, Celotex, International Combustion preferred and Republic Steel preferred showed net gains of 3 points or more. Frank G. Shattuck scored an extreme gain of nearly 3 points on a turnover which ran close to last week's total sales of that issue. Coppers showed a much firmer undertone.

A sharp break in Spanish pesetas, based on reports that Premier Rivera had resigned, was the only development of consequence in the foreign exchange market. Sterling cables held steady around 4.86 1-2, and other leading European rates showed little change.

Reactionary tendencies predominated in the commodity markets. Wheat and corn closed unchanged to 1-4 of a cent lower and cotton dropped 2 to 12 points. Coffee fell 19 to 26 points and raw sugar futures closed unchanged to 2 points lower.

THE CURB MARKET

NEW YORK, Jan. 28—(P)—Profit-taking ran into rather large volume in today's curb market, bringing about irregularity in all sections of the list. The recessions were most pronounced in the public utility shares, which had been the leaders of the recent upswing in prices. The day's sales fell below 650,000 shares.

The new common and preferred stocks of the Republic Steel corporation were admitted to trading, but little speculative interest was manifested in them, the common opened at 75 3-4, advanced to 78 and then dropped back to 75 at the close. A few hundred shares of the preferred changed hands at 98.

Oils displayed a firm undertone pending further developments in the Mid-Continent price situation. Reports of a sharp decrease in crude production last week were received with favor. Renewal of selling pressure against some of the aviation shares was based on reports that several companies would show large operating losses for 1929.

Commonwealth Edison, which registered a spectacular gain yesterday, fell back 5 1-2 points on realizing. American & Foreign Power, American Gas & Electric Standard Power & Light (new), Tampa Electric and United Light & Power A all lost 1 to 2 points while Electric Bond & Share, American Superpower and Niagara & Hudson Power yielded fractionally. American Light & Traction was an outstanding strong spot, advancing 7 1-2 points.

Foremost Fabric, Babcock & Wilcox, Goldberg Stores and Welch Grape Juice scored substantial gains while Ford of Canada B, General Realty preferred, Lane Bryant and Tulize Artificial Silk showed sharp declines but the turn-over in each case was small. Newmont rallied a point in sympathy with the strength of the copper stocks on the "big board."

CHICAGO GRAIN MARKET

CHICAGO, Jan. 28.—(AP)—Jolts that resulted largely from four cents a bushel break in the rye market unsettled all grain values today, but late rallies counterbalanced most of the losses. Heavy selling was witnessed, especially in the rye market. Wide circulation of reports that not within memory has there been such a distracted state of affairs in the rye trade of Germany as prevails at present owing to huge surplus stocks of rye both in Germany and Poland.

Narrowing of wheat price spreads between Winnipeg and Chicago was also a special disturbing influence, as tending to give Canada preference in wheat export dealings, compared with the United States.

Chicago closing quotations on wheat were irregular, at 3-8 a bushel below yesterday's finish to 1-4c over. Rye closed 1-4 to 1c down; corn 1-8 off to 1-4 up, and oats showing 1-8 to 3-8 decline, with provisions varying from 5c setback to a rise of 15c.

A dramatic incident of the break in rye values was the fact that a leading speculator in rye went personally into the rye pit here, and conducted selling operations on a broad scale.

Commission houses were also heavy sellers, and before the flurry was ended the rye market had dropped to a new low price record for the season. Meanwhile, the twin bread-grain, wheat, tumbled to below any recent bottom level, and oats as well as rye outdid the season's bottom price record.

Late recoveries in grain values came about chiefly because of the fact that on price breaks it speedily developed that good sized standing orders in the wheat market here were ready to absorb all offerings at $1.24 a bushel or below for May delivery of wheat. Profit-taking purchases on the part of previous speculative sellers counted also as a late uplifting influence. On the other hand, export business today in wheat from North America contained but little to encourage buyers. Some improvement, though, was shown in domestic milling demand. It was noticeable also that Winnipeg wheat closed higher as a result of spread trading between Winnipeg and Chicago.

Corn owed part of its weakness to larger receipts of corn here and to auspicious weather for promoting the crop movement. Oats were influenced by reports of good sized rural holdings.

Provisions averaged higher, responsive to upturns in the value of hogs.

BOND MARKET

NEW YORK, Jan. 28—(AP)—A slightly steadier tone appeared in the bond market today as the volume of business increased by about a million dollars, but the general price movement was still mixed.

Convertibles reversed yesterday's course and turned downward, losing the Monday advance. The telephone issues were hardest hit by the decline, American 4 1-2s slumping 3 1-2 points and International 4 1-2s dropping 3. Atchison 4 1-2s sagged more than a point. Commercial Investment Trust 6 1-2s and Missouri Pacific 5 1-2s showed moderate strength.

A firmer time money market was accompanied by erratic fluctuations in high grade utilities and rails, but net gains and losses were evenly distributed. Industrials were firm.

Atchison General 4s, Nickel Plate 5 1-2s, New Haven 4 1-2s, Southern Railway General 4s, Missouri Pacific 5s and a few other representative carriers eased, but there was compensating firmness in Great Northern 4 1-2s "D", Virginian 5s, Western Maryland 4s and Union Pacific 4s.

Numerous industrials and specialties showed wide moves. Colorado Fuel & Iron 5s rose 3, Lehigh Coal & Navigation 4 1-2s rallied 3 7-8, Shubert Theatre 6s declined 3 5-8, Walworth 6 1-2s, with warrants, advanced 3 1-8 and Warner Sugar 7s lost 3 1-4. Republic Brass 6s improved 1 point.

Some of the changes in the utilities were equally abrupt. New Orleans Public Service 5s rose 3 and Washington Water Power 5s moved up 1 coincident with the offering of a $10,000,000 long term issue carrying the same coupon. However, the power and light and telephone company obligations were generally firm.

The foreign list was well mixed. Several Argentine 6s lost as much as a point, Buenos Aires 6s, October, fell 3 1-4, Bolivia 7s of 1958 declined 3 and Rio Grande Do Sul 7s yielded 5 points. European governments showed better resistance to a softer trend. Belgian 7 1-2s, French 7s, German 7s, Denmark 5 1-2s and Norway 6s of 1943 eased. Rhine-Westphalia 6s with warrants were active at an advance of more than a point. United States governments struggled through a very dull session, closing irregularly lower.

Prospective new bond offerings include an $18,000,000 issue of Canadian National Railways 40-year 5s, guaranteed by the Canadian government. The offering price is to be 99 1-2. Proceeds will be used to refund a Feb. 15 maturity.

New prices for

SOCONY

Standard Oil Company of New York announces new price basis

...figured to one-tenth of a cent

THE Standard Oil Company of New York will apply to the gasoline business the same principle which has worked so satisfactorily in the automobile business.

When you buy an automobile, you pay a factory price plus a fixed handling charge plus actual freight cost to your community.

Effective February 1st, you will buy Socony the same way. All prices will be based on the prevailing bulk price at seaboard. The retail price will be determined by adding to the bulk price a fixed charge to cover handling and profit, plus the actual rail cost to each community figured to a tenth of a cent. The new price signs on all Socony pumps will show the price in tenths of a cent a gallon.

Since August, when Ethyl was added to the already famous Socony Special Gasoline, sales of Socony Special plus Ethyl have jumped 40 per cent. It makes a difference when Ethyl is added to a premium gasoline. The public has recognized the difference.

OLD MISSISSIPPI STARTS TO FILL FOR ANNUAL

MEMPHIS—(AP)—His annual hi nation ended, Father Mississippi filling himself in the north again wind home with a heavy load track up the place with mud.

He began in mid-January started rising, which didn't w those who understand him. won't cut up much in January or February, but the lower valley fe he is rehearsing for a big sh about planting time.

High water in the lower va has thre classifications—fresh high water and flood.

Freshets come early each ye Tributaries of the lower Mississ get full from early rains and ov flow bottom lands outside of leve improving acres instead of damag them. Then the tributaries em the surplus into the Mississippi, wh is able to care for it.

High water comes when the man and his tributaries all get f from early rains. With the fat stream laboring with heavy burd the tributaries are unable to get of their surplus, so they do the n ural thing—back up near th mouths, flood lands and sometin towns in the deltas.

But floods, as the valley kno them, come when the big river g full from early rains and fuller wh northern snows start melting. Th most anything is liable to happen.

The announcement in news ite that "hundreds have been driv from homes" does not necessar mean much.

There are valley farmers who, they were not driven from th homes early spring, wouldn't ha any home, for their lands would be rich.

So a moving order from Old M River in the spring is no uncomm experience to those who dare t rivers by hugging banks and livi "outside" the levees.

If they get back in time to plo in March and plant in April, t river has done them a favor. If th don't—then it is a flood.

PHOENICIAN TRACES FOUND ON AMAZO

RIO DE JANEIRO—(AP)—Disco ery of inscriptions carved on Amaz valley rocks have revived a beli that 4,000 years or more ago Phoen cians discovered America, navigat Amazon and built a city there.

These finds were made by Dr. Ba bosa while on a trip a few months a with General Rondon, Brazil's mo famous explorer. The carvings we in hieroglyphs.

Information about them is with held while decoding goes on, a jo expected to take about a year. The were found in rock formations alo the Cumina river in the state of Pa and on bits of pottery.

If the decoding comes up to ex pectations of archeologists, it is sa excavations will be attempted on th shores of the Cumina in search fo the buried site of a city.

Independence day, Labor day an Armistice day are combined i American Samoa and celebrated No vember 11.

POETRY FOR THE WIDE AWAKES

His First Long Trousers

Say, young fellow, just a minute,
They're your first long trousers, eh?
And your little gray knee breeches
Are forever put away.
And your blouses and your stockings
And your little caps are gone,
For the shirts and cuffs of manhood,
And you've got a derby on!

Yes—you look well in them, sonny,
Why, I can't believe my eyes!
For it doesn't seem a year ago
Since you were just this size,
And a little, pink-cheeked youngster;
Why, you toddled, more than ran,
Every night to meet your daddy,
And today you are a man!

Oh, I don't know how to tell you,
But I want to, yes, I do,
That your mother and your daddy
Both are mighty proud of you.
And we're going to miss the baby
That from us today has gone,
But that baby we'll remember,
Though he has long trousers on.

We're banking on you, sonny,
We'll help you all we can,
But it's up to you, remember,
Now to prove you are a man.
You can make us mighty happy,
You can make us mighty sad,
Just remember it's not manly,
To do things you know are bad.

I'm not going to preach a sermon,
Mother's put your blouse away
And your breeches, and I saw her
Crying over them today,
And I thought perhaps I'd give you
Just a thought to dwell upon,
Please remember, you're her baby,
Though you've got long trousers on.

The Sandman

An old, old man, with whiskers white,
Flies over the earth as the night comes down,
And softly sings, in his gentle flight,
As he winds his way through the shades of night:
"Close, little eyelids! close up tight;
For the sandman is in town."

He comes to the babe, while yet 'tis light;
But on all at last the shower comes down,
And the eyes of blue and brown, so bright,
Must close when he sings, as he comes at night:
"Close, little eyelids! close up tight;
For the sandman is in town."

He knows what makes little eyes so bright,
So he pours the showers of bright sand down,
And sweet Sleep lingers till broad daylight,
Then flies to him who sings each night:
"Close, little eyelids! close up tight;
For the Sandman is in town."
—James Clarence Harvey.

UNCLE JED'S TALK TO THE WIDE AWAKES

A good many of the birds of this country are either known by sight or name by a number of Wide Awakes, but few of them have any knowledge of birds in Australia. The emu of Australia is the largest bird species in the Commonwealth, and is found in many country districts. Yet it is not nearly as plentiful as it used to be in the early settlement days, for the white man has driven it far inland, and many of its numbers have been killed. Emus used to be quite plentiful near Sydney, New South Wales, for there is a large tract of land some 30 miles from the city, which is called Emu Plains, where emus in large numbers ran wild and unmolested.

This huge bird lays a very big egg, which is of a dark green shade and much the color of the grass. It builds no nest, just scratches out for itself a suitable hole in the ground and there lays its eggs, which generally number about six. As they are almost the same shade as the surroundings, they are thus protected to a large extent from the birds' enemies. These are snakes chiefly in Australia, for these reptiles are plentiful in many parts of the country, and being fond of eggs, often make a good meal from those of the emu.

"How are the emus laying down your way?" was the first query to capture the interest of a city dweller, on her first introduction to Australian outback life.

At first it sounded like a joke, but it was a sober truth. The breakfast omelette, the savories, the cakes and the puddings, all depend upon the successful quest for an emu's nest with eggs in it.

LETTERS WRITTEN BY WIDE AWAKES

How Hope Came To World

Dear Uncle Jed: I have written to you before. The name of my story is "How Hope Came to the World."

Long, long ago, there was a child with no father nor mother, so not to be lonely, a child from afar away country came to be Epimetheus' playfellow. This child from the far away country had the name Pandora.

As soon as Pandora entered the cottage of Epimetheus, she spied a large box in the corner of the room. As soon as she had seen the box she got very curious.

Epimetheus was very, very, tired of answering the questions flung at him by Pandora. One day Pandora asked who left the box. "Well, I do not think it will harm to tell you that," said Epimetheus. Well, it was brought just before you came by a smiling fellow named Quicksilver. "Oh I know him!" said Pandora. "He brought me here."

After a great deal of conversation, Epimethius went out to play leaving Pandora behind.

Pandora began to get restless and went to the box, opened the knot, lifted the lid and peeked in. The earth trembled, thunder roared, lightning streaked across the sky. "What had happened!" Instead of riches it was trouble that was in the box.

When it grew calm there sat Pandora by the box, and Epimetheus beside the fire. Soon Pandora heard a voice inside the box saying "Let me out! Let me out!" Pandora was frightened but yet she lifted the lid, out flew a beautiful little elfin-like fairy "I am Hope", not like my other brothers, but if you, Pandora and Epimetheus do not know those other cloudy insects that came out first, I will tell you it was trouble. "So in case you are in trouble, just keep hope!" and away he flew.

The Book Of Books

Dear Uncle Jed: The Bible, the book of books, has done me more good than any other book. From beginning to end, it is full of heroic and wonderful deeds.

What boy wants any more exciting stories than of David Killing the Giant, or Joseph Being Sold Into Slavery by His Unworthy Brothers. What would this country, our country, be without this wonderful book? We would have no colleges, no hospitals, no art, no homes for the poor, friendless, or orphans. More copies have been sold and translated into other languages than any other book, which shows its popularity. So, dear reader, do you not agree with me that this book, the Bible, has done more for humanity than any other book, and has it not taught us truth, and honesty, and all good, and helped to make better the great world we live in?

Has Two Guinea Pigs

Dear Uncle Jed: One day I found my father reading a book. I asked him the name of it. He said it was a book about guinea pigs. He let me look at it. He said he was going to get some guinea pigs. I asked him what kind he was going to get. He said he was going to get some that have short hair. Some of them have long hair. He bought five. They came one day in the summer when my father was away working. My brother and I wanted to play with them. Mother said we could, but we must not touch two of them. These were pretty wild, so we did not touch them. By and by my father put them out in the woodshed. He gave us four, two for each. By and by he put them in the shed (for we had them in the house), and they are there still.

Tries To Bite Laces

Dear Uncle Jed: I have a cat. Its name is Niggy. When I lace up my high cuts Niggy comes and tries to bite the laces. When I am eating Niggy will jump up on my lap and try to get something to eat.

My Fright

Dear Uncle Jed: The other night when I went to bed I saw a light on the wall. I thought it might be across the way. I tried to go to sleep, but I was filled with curiosity. So I got out of bed and went to the light and what do you think I saw? To my surprise there in the middle of the sky was the moon shining in full glory. But I won't get frightened at the moon anymore.

Cat Likes Candy

Dear Uncle Jed: My dog likes to ride on a sled. I put her on and hold her so she will not fall. Wherever I go she follows me. When I want her to do a trick, I say "Get up." She gets on her hind legs while I hold a piece of candy higher than her head. After awhile I give it to her. She likes candy. When my mother gives us candy she looks at us so my mother gives her some. She goes in her house and eats it.

Caught Two Rabbits

Dear Uncle Jed: I have a dog. His name is Trim. He was just a little dog, but now he is as old as I am. I take him hunting and he likes to chase rabbits. He chased a rabbit into a stone wall. Then we dug him out. The dog was glad we got the rabbit. Then he chased another and we got him the same way. I like the dog and he likes me, too.

My Pet Cat

Dear Uncle Jed: I am concluding my story about my pet cat. His name is Tom. He stays in the house most of the day; but when the darkness comes on he goes out and doesn't come back till morning. When Tom is eating, my other cat comes to eat and he lets the little cat eat and when he is done Tom comes and has his meal. Tom is 29 1-2 inches long from head to tail and 10 inches high.

Canary Good Singer

Dear Uncle Jed: I have a pet canary. He sang so much we had to send him up to my grandmother's with her canary. Hers does not sing. When my canary takes his bath he sticks his head in the water. When he takes it out he splashes the water all over the wall. His name is Lindy.

Saved By a Mirror

Dear Uncle Jed: Caroline was only six years old, but was wise. One day as she was playing in the yard she noticed a big man coming towards her. As she had a great deal of courage, she paid no attention to him and continued to play. Soon he was only about three feet from her. She looked up and noticed that the man had some candy. Of course, Caroline would like to have some. Therefore as the man slowly stepped backward, the little girl went towards him. When she was almost at his feet, he stepped backwards again. He kept doing this for quite awhile. Being only a short distance from his car he gave her candy to keep her busy while he sped away from her home. About two and half hours after Caroline's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Wilson by name, noticed their daughter was nowhere in sight. Calling loudly, and getting no results, induced the bewildered parents to notify the police. In the meantime, the kidnapper with his prey arrived to his destination. Caroline, not realizing what all this was, seemed to be rather gay. Willingly she entered the house of Mr. Fox, the kidnapper. Upon entering there she was amazed to see children. Soon she made a few acquaintances. When it was almost dark she and some other children were bound with cord to a chair in the room. Their backs were to Mr. Fox and his accomplices. Being under strict orders, not one of the children dared to turn around.

Caroline noticed that she had something in her hand. It was a mirror. She had been playing with it when she had been disturbed by this man. As she picked it up to look at herself, she noticed a few women and men behind her. Being wise she put it up higher and was startled. In the center of the floor was a fire. Caroline did not understand this. Nevertheless she looked into the mirror and noticed some men putting a child into a pot filled with boiling water. Caroline almost screamed. As she was a clever girl she realized where she was and said not a word.

In about an hour she was released and given some supper. Caroline was so excited that she was hardly able to eat. When put to bed in the darkness, through the open window she climbed as stealthily as a robber. As soon as her feet touched the ground, she started to run at a quick pace. After going for about two miles, Caroline found herself on a good road. She did not know which way to go. Then she heard a car coming towards her. The car stopped. There were four policemen in it. From the description of the parents, they knew it was Wilson's daughter. In the morning Mr. and Mrs. Wilson and daughter and the policemen, arrested the kidnappers. Caroline received a big reward. Mrs. Wilson kept the mirror in a safe place for it was through that her daughter was saved.

Let Us Have Peace

Dear Uncle Jed: There is a teacher's meeting this afternoon, so I haven't much to do. It came into my mind why not write a letter to Uncle Jed about having peace.

It is very unfortunate that so much intolerance followed in the wake of the World war—not intolerance over religious beliefs alone, but intolerance over the subject of world peace and the best methods and measures to secure and safeguard it. Some people are fond of calling themselves sound Americans simply because their neighbors disagree with them on some principles of war and peace and the record of their neighbors has been just as honorable and just as consistent as their own record. We can just as well think and talk of peace, so let's all live in peace. Peace suggests the ways of religion, prosperity, happiness and love.

Finds Pet Monkey

Dear Uncle Jed: Jocko was a little pet monkey. He often came around with the organ-man. The organ-man was called Pete. One day Jocko ran away. Pete ran here and there calling "Jocko, Jocko, Jocko." All the children were out of their houses by now. There was such a hurry. Nearby was woods and my friend, Helen, and I ran into the woods. Suddenly we heard a noise in the trees. We looked up and in a tree was Jocko climbing among the branches. "Jocko, Jocko," we shouted. Jocko turned around and down the tree he came. I placed him on my shoulder and away we ran. As we reached the edge of the woods we saw Pete running here and there. "Pete, Pete," called Helen and I. Pete turned around and seeing Jocko came and got him. Then after he played the organ for us, Helen and I ran after the rest of the children.

Xmas Tree At School

Dear Uncle Jed: I have not written to you for a long time. Please don't think I have forgotten you. I have been very busy with my school work and wondering what Santa would bring me for Christmas. Now that the holidays are over, I am back to school again.

We had an ice Christmas tree in our school, each pupil giving another boy or girl a present and each boy and girl gave the teacher a gift. There was speaking and singing and we all had a jolly good time. I hope Santa did not forget any boy or girl this Christmas for they would be very sad indeed if he did. I will close my letter for this time, wishing you a happy New Year.

Dog Stops Sled

Dear Uncle Jed: I like my dog because he plays with my brother and me. Yesterday my brother was sliding down a hill and my dog tried to stop the sled. He jumped on my brother's lap when the sled stopped, he ran away. We went after him and he growled at us.

Bradly Kincaid

Dear Uncle Jed: I am going to tell you a story about Bradly Kincaid.

Bradly Kincaid was born in the Kentucky mountains. His great grandfather was a Scotchman, so Bradly was Scotch.

One day when Bradly's father was on a hunting trip, he traded one of his hound dogs for a guitar. After this it was known as the "Hound Dog Guitar." Bradly soon learned to play. When he was only four years old his father would entertain friends by having him sing for them. When he was 10 years old he started in the sixth grade in grammar school. When he was nearly 23 years he married a girl named Irma Forman. She has helped Bradly arranging music for his songs.

Bradly has been on the National Barn Dance programs at W. L. S. every Saturday night since 1927 and on many other programs. He is known as the "Mountain Boy with His Hound Dog Guitar."

The songs I like best which he sings are: Four Thousand Years Ago, Lies Up in the Simmon Tree, Dying Cowboy and Sweet Kitty Wells.

We try to listen to W. L. S. every Saturday night.

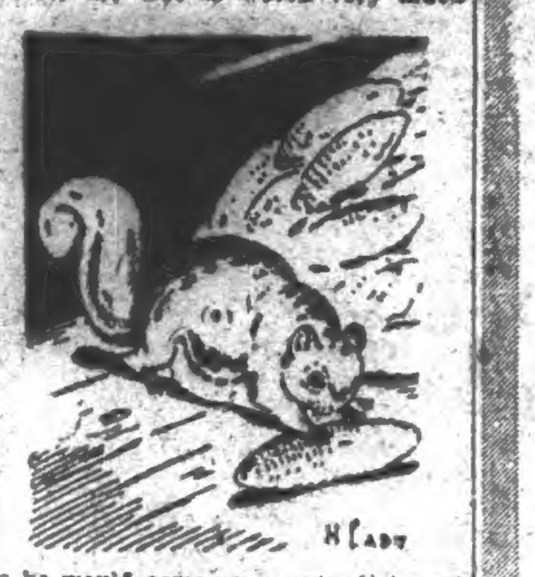
BURGESS BEDTIME STORY

Farmer Brown's Boy Shares His Corn

Who doth of his abundance share
Is being nothing more than fair.
—Farmer Brown's Boy.

Farmer Brown's Boy had to admit that he couldn't think of any way to keep Timmy the Flying Squirrel out of the corncrib. As long as Timmy could reach the roof of the corncrib he could get it.

"The only way that I can stop it that I can see," declared Farmer Brown's Boy "is to cut down the tree that Timmy jumps from. But, of course, the tree is worth very much more than all the corn that Timmy ever could eat; so I don't see but that Timmy is going to prove too much for me, unless I can catch him. I wouldn't hurt Timmy for the world. No, sir, not for the world would I hurt Timmy. So I cannot set the traps that I usually set for mice. I must set a trap that will catch Timmy alive and unhurt."



So he would come over, get what corn he wanted and return to the Green Forest

So Farmer Brown's Boy did set two of three boxtraps in the corncrib. He tried different kinds of bait. Each morning when he visited the corncrib he looked eagerly to see if one of the traps had been sprung. Each morning he was disappointed.

Now, it wasn't altogether the smartness of Timmy the Flying Squirrel that kept him out of those traps. The fact is, he didn't go near them. He didn't need to. He came over there for corn and he got plenty of corn in the other end of the crib, where the traps could not be set. So he didn't need to wander around and he didn't wander around. As a rule, he didn't stay in the corncrib very long. You see, Timmy is fond of other food besides corn. Also, he likes his exercise even in the cold weather. So he would come over, get what corn he wanted and return to the Green Forest. He didn't know anything about Farmer Brown's Boy and of course he didn't care anything about him.

Finally, Farmer Brown's Boy gave it up. He had to ruefully admit that he couldn't catch Timmy the Flying Squirrel. "I don't really care though," said he. "No, sir, I don't really care. I guess I'm quite willing to share my corn with Timmy. I would just like to catch him, that is all. If I did catch him, of course I would let him go; so I don't know what difference it makes."

So it was that Timmy the Flying Squirrel was unmolested and all winter long enjoyed the corn in Farmer Brown's corncrib. He didn't forget that it was his Cousin Chatterer who had told him about that corn, and Chatterer often found a good breakfast around the corncrib very early in the morning. He did more or less scolding, but that is Chatterer's way. You see, it was rather upsetting to have his cousin able to get into that corncrib when he himself couldn't. But you may be sure he made the best of things as they were. He wasn't foolish enough to leave that corn on the ground just because he couldn't get in and get it himself. But he was unwise in that he scolded so much about it. It is always unwise to allow one's tongue to run too freely, and Chatterer is very likely to do this. He scolded so very much early in the morning over near the corncrib that he drew the attention of a certain black-coated fellow who is very smart.

"I wonder," said Blacky the Crow to himself, "what takes that noisy little Chatterer over to Farmer Brown's cornyard every morning! I shall have to investigate."

DECLARES SUNDAY SCHOOL DEFICIENT EDUCATIONALLY

HARRISBURG, Pa., Jan. 28—(AP)—The Sunday school is educationally incompetent, Rev. Dr. Luther A. Weigle of New Haven, dean of the Yale Divinity school said here today in an address at the pastors' state convention.

This remark was made during Dr. Weigle's presentation of the question of religious education under that branch of the platform of the Pennsylvania Council of Churches, which was sponsoring the convention.

"By cooperating with each other," Dr. Weigle said in referring to the various denominations, "we can make it possible for public school authorities to cooperate with us in forming a religious education program which will be educationally competent.

"If churches can get over the suspicions which they have of each other it will be possible for the public schools to cooperate with them in a religious educational program for the public schools are willing to cooperate if they can find anyone to cooperate with."

REPORT OF ACTIVITIES IN CHILD SOCIAL SERVICE

NEW YORK, Jan. 28—(AP)—Prevention of poverty and necessity of separating children from their homes is the keynote of present child social service activities, J. Prentice Murphy, director of the Children's bureau of Philadelphia, said today at the annual luncheon of the Children's Aid society's department of family homes at the Park Lane.

Angelo Patri, author and educator, said that "children placed in institutions were almost surely lost" and expressed the hope "that the day would come when we do away with all institutions."

WEDDING

Prukneska—Sarazewska

A very pretty wedding took place Tuesday morning at St. Joseph's church at 9 o'clock when Miss Jennie Beatrice Sarazewska, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Stephen and Pauline Sarazewska, of 56 St. Regis avenue, was united in marriage by Rev. William Toper to Edward Prukneska, son of Mr. and Mrs. Lucas and Frances Prukneska, of Baltimore, Md. They were attended by Miss Harriet Skindzier, as matron of honor, and Miss Cassie Rodzay and Miss Sophia Oslk were bridesmaids. Joseph Skindzier acted as best man while Peter Narvosocike and Lawrence Prodell were the ushers at the church.

The bride was charmingly attired in a white satin gown with tulle Spanish lace. She wore a Madeira veil, which was caught up with orange blossoms, and carried a shower bouquet of white roses, carnations and lily of the valley. Miss Skindzier was prettily attired in orange and gold satin, which was trimmed with Spanish lace, while Miss Rodzay was nattily attired in a yellow satin trimmed with tulle. The attendants carried arm bouquets of pink carnations and wore maline head bands. Following the church ceremony a wedding reception was held in Pulaski hall on North Main street with two hundred friends and relatives present for the wedding breakfast, after which dancing was enjoyed until midnight, music being furnished by Kop's orchestra.

Mr. and Mrs. Prukneska were the recipients of many useful wedding gifts, namely, cut glass, silverware, linens, furniture, gold and checks for substantial amounts. The bride presented the groom a pair of gold cuff buttons, while in return he gave to his bride a string of pearls. The bride gave her attendants vanity cases while the groom gave his attendants automatic cigarette lighters.

Mr. and Mrs. Prukneska left later in the afternoon for a two weeks' wedding trip which will take them to New York, Philadelphia, Washington, Baltimore and Atlantic City. Upon their return they will make their home with the bride's parents on St. Regis avenue. Mr. Prukneska is an electrician and is stationed at the submarine base in New London. The newly married couple have a large circle of friends who wish them happiness and prosperity in their married life.

Jacob Goldblatt, of North Main street, spent Tuesday in Hartford.

Among the activities of the Greeneville Congregational church this week will be the meeting of the circle of Bright Jewels at the church parlors Wednesday evening at 7 o'clock. Also the annual meeting of the church on Thursday evening at 7:30, at which the usual annual reports will be read; officers for the year elected and some new business transacted. At the close of the meeting refreshments will be served by the ladies.

DECLARES COMPLETE PROHIBITION WOULD BE GREATEST BOON TO HUMANITY

The eighteenth amendment is in the constitution of the United States to stay, declared Rev. Dr. John N. Lackey of Hartford as he spoke here Tuesday evening at the "victory supper" under the auspices of the Woman's Crusade of the Woman's Christian Temperance union in celebration of the tenth anniversary of prohibition. "If it takes two generations to establish prohibition, we will have conferred upon humanity the greatest boon of the ages," he asserted as he concluded his stirring address upon the theme, Ten Years After. The meeting was held at Trinity Methodist Episcopal church.

The supper had an attendance of about 100 and was served at 6:15 in the social room of the church, with the Hartford clergyman, who is pastor of the Asylum avenue Baptist church, as the speaker, Mayor Lee Roy Robbins and Mrs. Robbins as guests, and Mrs. Nathan Gilman, president of the local W. C. T. U. presiding.

With Frederick J. Maples as song leader, the gathering united in a verse of the hymn, O God Our Help, and prayer was offered by Rev. Joseph Cooper preceding the serving of supper. Besides the community singing which Mr. Maples led during the supper hour, there were two special numbers which were greatly enjoyed, a solo by John Richardson, secretary of the chamber of commerce, who was a guest, and a duet by Mr. Maples and Rev. Percy A. Kilmister of the First Baptist church.

After the supper hour, Mrs. Gilman extended words of welcome, expressing her gratification at the good number attending, and two finely rendered contralto solos were given by Miss Lucille Howard, for whom Miss Mary Gray was accompanist. Her selections were An Evening Love Song (Chipman) and The Sweetest Story Ever Told.

Rev. Dr. David A. Pitt of the Central Baptist church introduced Rev. Dr. Lackey, who announced that his subject would be "Ten Years After," and said that he considered the best argument for prohibition was to be seen in the generation of boys and girls who have grown up without knowing the shame and pauperism and degradation of the saloon. We have had the greatest prosperity in a decade, a 30 per cent increase in production, and it was because of this prosperity that we were able to withstand so well the recent stock market slump. If asked for their opinion now, the people would give the same answer, he declared, as they did two years ago when the leader of one of the great political parties thought he could court the favor of the people by his declaration for the "wets." They'll give the same answer to any one who ever tries to ask the same question again.

Taking up the matter of the passage of the eighteenth amendment, Rev. Dr. Lackey declared that prohibition had not been a sudden thing but had been adopted after everything else to control the liquor traffic had been tried but failed. Before the eighteenth amendment came, he said, 75 per cent of the counties in the United States were dry, 80 per cent of the villages, 85 per cent of the townships and 32 of the states. The vote for it was 65 to 20 in the senate, 282 to 128 in the house.

He gave figures to show that the eighteenth amendment was adopted by a greater majority than had been given to any other amendment to the constitution. Ten out of 13 states, he said, adopted the bill of rights, which included the first ten amendments to the constitution, a bare three-quarters of the states ratified the 11th amendment, the 12th amendment was ratified by 13 out of 17 states, five states did not ratify the 13th amendment, four did not ratify the 14th amendment, six the 15th, 16 the 16th, 12 the 17th, ten the 19th, and two the 18th.

Don't let anybody tell you, he said, that people are drinking more today. In 1918 the sale of intoxicating liquor averaged 23 gallons per person and the drink bill was two billion, six hundred million dollars. Today we have 24 million of the 32 million automobiles in the world. We have enough for everybody in the United States to be riding at once. We wouldn't have them if the money were being spent for liquor.

For whom do they want to bring liquor back, the speaker continued. Not for the railroad engineers who have to be teetotallers: not for the 40 million of automobile drivers who have to do with the safety of the public; not for the machinist in this mechanical age; not for the 50 million boys and girls. Those who want it back are the hangovers from ten years ago.

"How long will it take to enforce it? I don't know, but having put our hand to the plough we cannot turn back. If it takes two generations, we will have conferred upon humanity the greatest boon of the ages," he concluded, and was given a rising vote of thanks.

Mayor Robbins was also given a rising greeting as he was invited to speak and responded in a pleasing way in acknowledging his appreciation of the invitation to the meeting and the opportunity of hearing Dr. Lackey.

He was followed by Secretary Richardson, who expressed his appreciation of the hospitable spirit which had been shown towards him since coming here and he declared his whole-hearted allegiance to Norwich.

The meeting adjourned with the singing of a verse of America, after Mrs. David A. Pitt, for the programme committee, had extended thanks to those who had assisted in that way and Mrs. Gilman had expressed thanks to the Wesleyan guild of the church for serving the supper.

Arrangements for the meeting were in the hands of Mrs. Robert McNeely, Mrs. Arthur F. Wyman and Mrs. Alvin as general committee, Mrs. David A. Pitt and Mrs. Harold D. Johnson, committee on programme.

The supper menu comprised tomato soup, roast pork, mashed potatoes, apple sauce, cabbage salad, rolls, chocolate pudding with whipped cream, and coffee. Ernest J. Jones was in charge in the dining room, with the following waitresses: Mrs. Vivian Ide, Mrs. Edith Duro, Miss Eleanor Fenton, Miss Agnes Fenton, Miss Nancy Colberg, Miss Florence Edwards, Miss Bessie Boardman, Miss Dorothea McNeely, Miss Dorothea Ladd, Miss Gwendolyn Jones, Miss Cora Freeman, Miss Stella Purvis, Miss Grace Purvis. Those serving in the kitchen were Mrs. Christopher G. Allen, chairman; Mrs. John Phillips, Mrs. Carr, Mrs. Robert McNeely, Mrs. Browning and Mrs. Bradford.

WORKED SECOND DEGREE AT ODD FELLOWS MEETING

Over 200 Odd Fellows from lodges in Norwich and vicinity were guests Monday night of Uncas lodge, No. 11, I. O. O. F., at Odd Fellows hall. The meeting was presided over by Noble Grand Henry W. Bode and the second degree was worked by a degree team under the direction of Degree Master Frank M. Green. Grand Warden Bow of Saybrook gave an interesting talk to the large assemblage.

An entertainment programme was given under the direction of the lodge entertainment committee, Wm. Hopkins, chairman. Before the meeting there was a supper, the menu including cold roast beef, mashed potatoes, mashed turnips, peas, pie, coffee and cigars were circulated.

Good Skating at Park

Every effort possible was put forth by the management at Mohegan park to clean the snow from the pond. Snow scrapers, wheelbarrows, hand scrapers, and many types of shovels were used to get results. It is with great thanks to about 20 Academy students that about three-fourths of the pond is cleared. If a cold wave comes now the skating should be very good.

CITY PINOCHLE TOURNEY IN CLOSING NIGHT OF PLAY

The City Pinochle tournament for the 1929-1930 season will come to a close this (Wednesday) evening in the Foresters club on Shetucket street when the following schedule will be played: Duwells vs. American Icy Hot, Thermos vs. Eagles, American Legion vs. Foresters.

For the first time since the league was organized four years ago has the race for first honors been so close. Practically from the beginning of the present season the Duwells and Thermos have been struggling for this honor. These two teams enter the last night's play with 16 games won and 8 lost. The league trophy was taken by Fraternal Order of Eagles in 1926-1927, Polishers Union, No. 169, 1927-28, Foresters, 1928-1929. In last week's play Leon Mitchette of the Eagles was high with a score of 8,090, while Percy Harwood of the Thermos came in second with 7,590. The secretary of the league has a communication from the chairman of the Foresters entertainment committee, stating that he would serve a buffet lunch at the conclusion of tonight's play.

BROWN AND GALLUP ARE AWARDED SALESMEN PRIZES

(Special to The Bulletin.)

NEW YORK, Jan. 28.—Two Norwich salesmen were accorded recognition as leaders among the entire Frigidaire sales organization at the annual regional convention here yesterday when they were called to the platform amid blaring bands and cheering of 1,000 fellow-salesmen from this section of the United States, and were presented with diamond-studded pins, and cash prizes in gold, as follows: C. W. Brown, Norwich, $100; and J. Gallup, also of Norwich, $100.

Awarding of salesmen's prizes and introduction of new products were high spots of the convention at which speakers struck an optimistic note for 1930. Among the new developments in electric refrigeration presented were a hydrator, for freshening vegetables; two new compressors and two sizes of commercial refrigerator cabinets.

DAMAGE SUITS SETTLED FOR AUTOMOBILE COLLISION

Suits brought against J. Howland Gardner of Old Lyme, one for $1,000 by Carlow Ferrari of Boston, and the other for $5,000 by his daughter, Josephine Ferrari, were settled by the attorneys without trial in the superior court here Tuesday morning. Brown and James were counsel for the defendant.

It was claimed that the young woman sustained injuries when she was riding in the sidecar of a motorcycle which collided with Gardner's automobile on the Boston Post road at Branford on June 4, 1927, causing her to be thrown out against a tree.

FIREMEN'S QUICK WORK WITH BLAZING STOVE

Quick action Tuesday morning by Fireman Harold I. Lieberman of Engine No. 5 prevented what might have been a serious fire at the store, No. 161 Franklin St., conducted by Joseph Hartie. Mr. Lieberman, on his way home from the fire station about 8:15 o'clock, was passing the store when he saw a small gasoline stove on fire. Rushing into the store Mr. Lieberman picked up the burning stove and carried it to the street. In the meantime some one sent in a telephone call to the fire department.

The stove, it is said, was leaking gasoline and unaware of the leak Mr. Hartie attempted to light it with the result that it blazed up. The only damage was to the stove.

SHOWS BIG WORK OF UNITED WORKER'S YEAR

girls, between the ages of 10 and 15 years, completed the course of 12 lessons, which consisted of the rudiments and essentials of every-day cooking and a knowledge of food values. Last April the cooking class presented a little health play and served refreshments made entirely by the girls (including sandwiches, cake and cocoa) to a group of mothers, grandmothers and members of the committee at No. 9 Washington street. The sewing school enrolled nearly 200 and in spite of the more than usual winter illness and stormy days 43 had perfect attendance. Miss Alice Cogswell most graciously came to our assistance and took charge of the sewing class for a week while Mrs. Johnson was confined to her home.

In October Mrs. W. C. McKean, the new supervisor, was procured and registration day was December 1st, 171 pupils being enrolled. The attendance has been very good and up to the present date, 128 articles have been finished. January 13th, the committee gave their annual tea for the teachers, which was largely attended and enjoyed by all. The cooking classes January 8th this year. Mrs. Mary D. Hodge is taking Mrs. R. Whaples' place as instructor. The committee is very grateful to Mrs. Ricketson and Joseph Worth for their very generous donations of material, also the Norwich Box company.

Tuberculosis Seal.

The tuberculosis seal report was made as follows by Mrs. Millicent Leete Snow, chairman:

During the past year the tuberculosis seal committee has paid the board of five patients and half the board of a sixth in the state sanatoria; furnished three quarts of milk daily to three families, two quarts to five, and one quart to one; paid for some tonsilectomies and a little dental work for contact children, and through the kindness of a friend sent one child to fresh air camp for two weeks. With the limited funds at its command more cannot be done, although the need for this sort of relief is being constantly impressed upon the committee, both through the crowded clinics and the nurses' observation on their daily rounds. The contribution toward the nurse's salary and the exchange on one of the two cars of the public health nursing department are not debatable; without their aid the work could not be handled, and we receive from the department a tremendously greater amount of assistance than that for which we pay. Patients already in the sanatoria cannot reasonably be returned to their homes until discharged by the hospital, so that retrenchments have to be made in the help given undernourished and contact children, however, greatly we regret it. The committee is deeply grateful to all those who assisted in the recent seal sale, and particularly to The Bulletin and to The Record. These papers are ever most generous in the space given to the annual appeal and are, the committee feels, a large factor in its success.

The report of the committee in charge of the Nellie Dean Fuller fund, Alice W. Cogswell, secretary, was made by Mrs. Robert W. Perkins, chairman, as follows:

This committee has earnestly sought to carry out the wishes of the donor as expressed in the deed of gift of the Nellie Dean Fuller fund. Of course all aid given by it is considered confidential, and the names of its beneficiaries are necessarily withheld.

During the past year a bright young girl who is motherless and ambitious for an education, has been assisted to continue her course at the Academy.

Several cases of illness—two of them serious—have received sorely needed aid in difficult emergencies.

Following the singing of the hymn, Blest Be the Tie That Binds, the benediction was pronounced by Rev. Mr. Bailey.

BALDWIN FINED $50 IN BOZRAH COURT

Justice of the Peace John Sweeney imposed a fine of $50 and costs in court at Fitchville Tuesday night upon Charles Baldwin, of 445 West Main street, a Norwich contractor, who was before the court on the charge of evading responsibility after an automobile accident.

He was driving an automobile on Wednesday, Jan. 22, on Bozrah street when the machine struck Mrs. Isaac Perkins and her four year old son, who was sliding on Scott hill. The small boy had an arm broken, but Mrs. Perkins escaped any serious injury. The machine hit a boulder by the side of the road before it hit the two people and in defense of the charge of not stopping after the accident, Baldwin claimed he did not see them and did not know he had hit them. He was driving an automobile registered in the name of Miss Ruth C. Cone of Canterbury and it was brought out in the trial that she was with him in the machine at the time of the accident.

Grand Juror J. P. Allyn, who prosecuted the case, had Charles W. Cassidy as his attorney and Mr. Baldwin had Thomas M. Shields as his counsel.

Bird records loaned by Mrs. C. B. Graves of New London were played by Joseph F. Caulfield on a victrola loaned by the Plaut-Cadden company.

The paper by Mrs. Whittemore was interesting and informing, recording the observations and experiences of an ardent lover and student of man's feathered friends, told in a charming way, helpful also to other bird-lovers.

Still More Millions Treat Colds Direct

Round-About Method of "Dosing" Gives Way To Modern Vaporizing Salve

More and more people each year are giving up the slow, indirect way of treating colds by "dosing" with internal medicines and are adopting the modern direct treatment—Vicks VapoRub.

Vicks goes direct to the affected parts and checks the cold in two ways—its medicated vapors, released by the heat of the body, are inhaled direct to the inflammed air-passages; at the same time it acts direct through the skin like a poultice or plaster, "drawing out" tightness and soreness.

Vicks is especially appreciated by mothers because it is just rubbed on, and therefore, cannot upset children's delicate stomachs as "dosing" is apt to do. Today the whole trend of medical practice is away from needless "dosing."

To keep pace with the ever-growing demand, the famous slogan, "17 Million Jars Used Yearly," was raised to "21 Million" a short time ago. This figure too has been out-grown, as there are now "Over 25 Million Jars Used Yearly"—a jar for every family in the United States.

MOULTHROPE, LALONE AND LANDRY INDICTED FOR MURDER OF FIRST DEGREE

Result of Slaying of Detective Smith in Jacksonville, Jan. 17—Jacksonville Authorities Said the Trio of Escaped Convicts From Connecticut Would Be Arraigned Within the Next Few Days.

JACKSONVILLE, Fla., Jan. 29.—(AP)—Watson Moulthrope, Roland Lalone and Leo Landry, escaped convicts from Connecticut, were indicted by a grand jury late today on charges of first degree murder in connection with the slaying of Detective W. D. Smith, during a gun battle with officers here, January 17. Authorities said the trio would be arraigned within the next few days.

Smith was killed and Detective Willie Jones was wounded seriously when they attempted to arrest the convicts on suspicion that the automobile they were driving had been stolen in Massachusetts.

Landry was captured here by two pedestrians several days after the shooting when hunger drove him from beneath a house where he had been hiding for 48 hours. He denied he fired any of the shots that struck the detectives.

Moulthrope and Lalone were arrested last Friday night in Pensacola, where they had fled to seek employment on a boat. They were returned here Sunday.

Ion L. Farris, prominent young attorney of this city, has offered to defend Moulthrope and Lalone without cost if necessary.

Explaining his offer, Farris charged that the constitutional rights of the two Connecticut convicts were being violated and that he had decided to defend the men "simply in the interests of justice."

"I was on the train which brought them (Moulthrope and Lalone) here from Pensacola," Farris said. "They had evidently heard of me and knew I was on the train. They asked me to defend them.

"At the time I did not want to get mixed up in the affair and told them I could not take the case without a substantial fee. After they arrived in Jacksonville, I went to see them at the county jail. They gave me names of relatives in Connecticut and I sent telegrams to their people at my expense. I learned that neither family has any money for their defense and for the time being I thought my connection with the case was ended. Then yesterday I went to the jail to see them. I was informed by the jailers that the sheriff's office had given orders not to allow any attorney to talk to them.

"I called Sheriff Cahoon and he told me the state's attorney he'd given him instructions to allow no attorney to consult with them. Then I got angry. I knew the constitutional rights of these men were being violated.

"I decided to do what I could to help them just because nobody else would. I went to the circuit court to get an order to see them and it was granted immediately. I will do what I can for Moulthrope and Lalone simply in the interests of justice."

Sam B. Wilson, assistant state's attorney, and Fred H. King, county detective, said no orders had been issued by their office denying the prisoners the right to consult with counsel.

SEARCH FOR EIELSON AND BORLAND STILL VAIN

NOME, Alaska, Jan. 29.—(AP)—Scattered tools, parts of the motor, batteries, provisions and even mittens have been recovered by workers cutting into the ice-encased snowdrifts around the wreckage of Carl Ben Eielson's airplane, 90 miles southeast of North Cape, Siberia. No trace, however, had been reported today of Eielson and his companion, Earl Borland, believed buried under the snow nearby.

The plane crashed in a storm Nov. 9 while flying from Alaska to the ship Nanuk, ice bound at North Cape.

The seven men digging for the bodies of the lost aviators reported that the condition of the ice and the wide area to be opened makes their work difficult. They are opening trenches, four feet deep, through the area where the right wing and the motor were found, flung about 300 feet apart by the crash of the plane.

The presence of a trapper's cabin near the wreckage has convinced searchers that Eielson and Borland did not escape from the wreck. They said Eielson, knowing the country, surely would have found the cabin, which is situated between the wreck and the coast.

GRAND CHAPTER, O. OF E. S., IN SESSION IN HARTFORD

HARTFORD, Jan. 29.—(AP)—The grand chapter, Order of Eastern Star, opened this morning and will conclude tomorrow with election and installation of officers. Grand Matron Mrs. Abbie T. Bergmann of Hartford and Grand Patron Arthur R. Downes of Hartford reported an active year. Five hundred attended the banquet and dance at the Hotel Bond tonight.

Mrs. Bergmann in her report showed an inspection of the 87 subordinate chapters in Connecticut. She visited eight chapters on visiting "matrons" and patrons' night. She visited the grand chapters of Massachusetts and Rhode Island at their annual sessions. She was elected an honorary member of 78 chapters. Her official acts numbered 44. She made 31 decisions and granted 33 dispensations.

The grand chapter opened in the morning with an address of welcome by George R. Sturgis of Woodbury, head of the Masons in the state. Miscellaneous business was considered following the presentation of reports.

INTERNATIONAL STYLE SCRAP IS ON IN PARIS

PARIS, Jan. 29.—(AP)—The international style scrap is on, with American buyers suffering now what American shoppers will be suffering a few weeks hence.

The buyers, wracking their brains over corsets, colors, jackets, lengths and Grecian lines at the spring openings of Parisian couturiers, generally confess they are clear on only two points. First, evening skirts are of ankle length, for there isn't an iota of Parisian authority left for short or semi-short evening dresses. Second, shirt-like trousers will be worn on every possible occasion. As far as the rest is concerned they are up in the air.

To date the score of the scrap is one all. France took the point on hemlines yesterday, but America won on corsets.

TORNADO STRUCK TWO COUNTIES IN FLORIDA

OCALA, Fla., Jan. 29.—(AP)—A tornado dipped into two communities in Marion and Flagler counties today, killing a Negro woman, injuring a Negro infant and leaving considerable property damage, before it was believed to have passed out the northeast coast of Florida to the Atlantic.

The storm struck first in the southwestern part of Marion county near Summerfield and swept over a distance of about five miles. The woman was killed in this county. A dozen buildings were demolished.

The twister next dipped into a turpentine settlement in Flagler county, where 26 buildings were demolished, most of them shacks in which Negro laborers lived.

The Ocala Star received reports of property damage in Marion county of about $20,000.

AWARDS OF THE HARMON BOY SCOUT SCHOLARSHIP

NEW YORK, Jan. 29.—(AP)—The national court of honor of the Boy Scouts of America tonight announced award of the Harmon scout scholarships for 1929 to 52 scouts. The winners were selected because of unusual services to their home communities, for outstanding attainments and for high achievements as Eagle Scouts.

Harry Mayeda, 18, of Sacramento, Calif., who is of Japanese parentage, won the highest rating of the 52. The announcement pointed out that Mayeda, though a member of poor family, worked his way through school, through his activities in training Japanese-American boys in citizenship he won the friendship of Governor Young of California. The governor personally endorsed him to receive the Harmon scholarship, after Mayeda had helped his troop, composed of poor Japanese boys, to earn enough money to finance a trip to Japan in the interests of international good will.

Gordon Gilbert Power, 17, of Baltimore, Md., overcame the handicap of loss of an arm six years ago and became not only an exceptional high school and Duke university student, but also an able athlete, the announcement said. Another handicapped student who won distinction was Joseph Agee, 17, of Fort Smith, Ark. Agree made a good record despite infantile paralysis. First Difficulty Of Naval Confere[redacted]

Opposition to Pro[redacted]eering Committee[redacted]egates On Methods[redacted]imitation.

LONDON, Jaredacted—New and unexpected difficu[redacted] of procedure arose tonight to threaten the smooth running of the plenary session of the naval conference tomorrow. A five power agreement on the methods of measuring fleet tonnage was practically complete, however, and ready to be broadcast to the world through the newspapermen who will be admitted to the session.

The problem which so suddenly reared its head grew from objections to the proposed steering committee of delegates on methods and limitations, the setting up of which was expected to be the chief formal business of the session tomorrow. To this committee were to be referred technical questions such as those France and Italy have been wrangling over for more than a week so that the conference proper can go forward with the business of disarmament.

Prime Minister Ramsay MacDonald tonight held conferences at his office in the house of commons with Secretary of State Henry L. Stimson, former Premier Reijiro Wakatsuki and Foreign Secretary Dino Grandi in rapid succession on this matter.

So complex are the political issues involved in naval disarmament that Mr. MacDonald faces obstacles even in establishing a committee of delegates. The British dominions would desire representation on such a committee and appointment of one delegate from each unit of the empire would mean seven British representatives on this important body. If only one empire delegate was named the divisions not represented would likely be displeased.

On the other hand the prime minister has been quick to realize the likelihood of reaction on foreign public opinion if there were seven or eight British members of the committee. Tonight he was considering a plan of establishing just a committee of the plain "garden variety" of experts instead of delegates. No one seems to object to how many experts there are on any committee.

The intention of the American delegation tonight was not to play a particularly prominent role at the meeting tomorrow but to follow the plan of Mr. Stimson to pass around among the American chief delegates the leadership or conduct of the delegation.

Ambassador Hugh S. Gibson has been assigned to the task tomorrow and he may make a speech. The ambassador to Belgium has for years had an active part in representing America at European discussions of the problems of peace and armaments.

The program of the meeting, as indicated by today's events, will be featured by exposition of the Franco-American compromise between total tonnage and category theories of measurement of fleet strengths.

Mr. MacDonald and A. V. Alexander, first lord of admiralty, will speak for Great Britain and Premier Andre Tardieu for France.

Bombings, Robbery; Gun Play In Chicago

Five Blasts Rocked Residence and Industrial Buildings, Causing Extensive Damage.

CHICAGO, Jan. 29.—(AP)—A series of bombings, robbery and gun play was climaxed today by a suspected attempt on the life of a state's attorney's official who has been active against Chicago's organized vice rings.

A new record for bombings in a single day was reached, five blasts rocked residence and industrial buildings in the north and south side districts, causing extensive property damage.

An apparent sixth bombing attempt was frustrated by an alert garage attendant who routed two men he surprised trying to attach a package to the motor of an automobile belonging to Chief Investigator Pat Roche of the state's attorney's office.

The men fled with the package, which it was thought contained a bomb intended for Roche in reprisal for the fatal shooting of an armed robber by one of Roche's men earlier in the day.

The latter incident occurred after the investigator learned an attempt was to be made to rob several gold coast apartment hotels.

A man later identified as Andrew Wright, 34, formerly of Denver, Colo., walked into the lobby of a hotel and was felled by police bullets while resisting arrest.

Roche and his squad left and two hours later a pair, the identity of whom the investigator said he was sure, were found working at his car. They fled after beating the garage attendant who discovered them. Roche advanced the opinion that they were endeavoring to attach a bomb which would have exploded when he stepped on the electric starter of the car.

After a brief debate, the amendment was defeated by a 76 to 9 vote.
